NEW JERSEY REFORMATORY.

AN INSTITUTION IN WHICH PLAINFIELDERS ARE INTERESTED.

To Be an Intermediate Reformatory for Boys Who Have Not Been to Prison—Located at Rahway.

Governor Werts, Supervisor Seymour, and other State officials, as well as various associations whose object is to improve the morals of young offenders against the laws of New Jersey, have for some years strongly urged and recommended the construction of an intermediate prison or reformatory for boys who have not previously been sent to State prison. The most important reasons for this were the overcrowded condition of the State prison at Trenton, and the taint that is in many instances imparted from older convicts to susceptible youths, many of whom have been taught tricks in roguery which can never be eradicated. Gov. Werts, on these grounds, strongly advocated the reformatory in his last message, and on January 14th Assemblyman John C. Eisele, of Newark, introduced Assembly bill No. 53, an act relating to a State reformatory, providing for the erection of a main building, two wings, and a hospital, on State grounds, at a cost of $250,000, to accommodate 1,000 persons. The bill met with some opposition from those in favor of enlarging the State prison, but was finally passed on March 28th with a $100,000 appropriation for this year's work.

In one of the sections of the bill, the State property at Rahway, comprising an acreage of 81.44 (a section of the Thomas Edgar farm of 400 acres), was designated as the site, and $10,000 was appropriated to purchase additional land. The bill authorized the Governor to appoint six commissioners to erect the buildings and serve as managers for three years. In April the Governor appointed the following gentlemen: Patrick Farrelly, President of the American News Company, who lives at Morristown; ex-Postmaster Thomas M. Gopsill of Jersey City, William A. Ure of the Newark Sunday Call, the Rev. George S. Mott of Flemington, David M. Chambers of Camden, and Dr. J. J. Daly, Mayor of the city of Rahway.

These gentlemen have, since their appointment, met at Rahway twice, inspecting the land, taking title, and arranging preliminaries, as the work is to commence at once. They will meet at Trenton Tuesday, August 6th, and attend to all details pending the breaking of ground.

The site chosen is an admirable one. It is at the extreme southwestern part of the city, one mile from the Pennsylvania Railroan station, fronting on Hazelwood Avenue Boulevard along the Rahway river, and extending 3,500 feet along the main Woodbridge road into Middlesex county. The land is high above tidewater, level and dry, and is naturally well adopted for the building of the reformatory.

The Approaching Golf Club.

The golf committee of the Hillside Tennis Club has begun their active work by sending out circulars to all those who are likely to assist in the formation of the golf club. Application blanks are inclosed with the request to return them at once. It is hoped that a large number will send an affirmative answer and that even those who cannot play will join to help the movement along.

At Werner's Emporium.

Everybody that needs a suit of clothing is taking advantage of the low prices at Werner's. He is selling off the balance of his summer suits, worth from $15 to $18, for $9.90, in order to make room for his extensive stock of fall and winter goods which will arrive shortly. Do not buy elsewhere before looking at these bargains. See ad in another column, window display.

The Crucifixion.

Jerusalem on the day of the Crucifixion, a cyclorama, is on exhibition at Asbury Park. The picture was painted in Philadelphia and was originally exhibited in that city. During the World's Fair it was shown with great success in the city of Chicago.

But It Must Come Down.

The masons at work on the old First National Bank building find it is no easy job in tearing down the structure. At the time it was erected it was evidently put there to stay.

Luxuries at Martinsville.

An ice cream festival was held at Martinsville last night which was attended by a number of Plainfield people. They report having had an enjoyable time.

A NEW MARKET GIRL.

Mrs. Morse Believes in a Wifely Ministry to Ministers.

The New York Commercial Advertiser of Saturday published a portrait of Mrs. Anna Bloomfield Giles Morse, a former New Market young lady. Mrs. Morse is the helpmeet of Rev. Dr. Frank Rogers Morse, of the Calvary Baptist church, and The Advertiser speaks of her as one of the most prominent of minister's wives. She was born in New Market, and was a daughter of John and Sarah Bancroft Giles. Mr. Giles was a carriage manufacturer for nearly fifty years and a large property owner. He was a prominent man of the New Market Baptist church. He was a liberal contributor to all good causes.

Mrs. Morse's early life was spent at her parents' home in New Market, and here, even as a child, she was loved by all who knew her for her sweet disposition and lovable traits. She received her early education in the public schools of her native town, and in these prepared herself for the New Hampton institute. She was graduated with honors. She speaks of these years as being among the happiest of her life.

After her school days she returned home, and here she met the church workers, whose labors were so facilitated by the liberality of her father. Here, too, she met her husband.

Mrs. Morse has always been a great physical sufferer, but notwithstanding this she has done an immense amount of good.

Mrs. Morse says that there is a great deal more work to do in the churches than can be performed by the church-caller delegated for that purpose, and a minister's wife has many duties which she alone can do. One of the most important of these is to make her home a lovable, sociable place where all of her husband's parishioners may come at all times and find a hearty and brotherly welcome. It not only creates a good feeling among them, but it at the same time puts the minister in touch with his congregation, thereby insuring better work and giving better satisfaction to both the minister and his parishioners.

And she says that a minister's home should be made cheerful and comfortable for his sake also, for his surroundings must be inspiring if he would write such sermons as would interest and touch the listener.

In nature Mrs. Morse is retiring, refined, sincere and loyal.

Dr. Morse says his wife can preach better sermons than half of the ministers, and he invariably gets points from her for his sermons.

Life at West Point.

Plainfield's representative in the United States Military Academy at West Point, Louis H. Rand, of Madison avenue, has been having exciting experiences at his new school. At the time of the great wind and hail storm a week ago last Saturday, Rand was standing guard in one of the sentry boxes when the great blow came and over went sentry box, sentry and all rolling on the ground. Rand is quite enjoying his soldier life and says that the drill is not half as hard as it is thought. His health is very good and the regular exercise has improved him greatly.

Murder Will Out.

"Murder will out." The truth of this is often made manifest. Perhaps no single local event in American criminal history ever attracted more attention or caused more excitement, here and abroad, at the time of its occurrence, or was more vividly remembered for many years thereafter—especially in Boston, in staid old Massachusetts—than the one which is made the subject of an article entitled "The Parkman-Webster Tragedy," by Henry Mann, which appears in Home and Country, New York, for August.

Not a Heavy Fine.

David Hooper, a negro from Plainfield, pleaded guilty in the Circuit Court at Elizabeth yesterday, to assaulting Mary Kline by striking her with his fists and also with the handle of a broom. He was sentenced to pay a fine of $10.

That's the Place.

Good ice cream does not bring tears to the eyes but Tier brings good ice cream to all who order it and he sells delicious ice cream soda for five cents a glass. Examine his stock of candies also.

Good Nomination.

The New York Mail and Express nominates George Taggart of this city, among other cycling sharps, to represent the metropolis in the New York State Racing Board of the L. A. W.

WILL ASSESS PER FRONT FOOT

VALUABLE INFORMATION FOR THOSE WHO WILL USE SEWERS.

The Assessment Will Probably Be From Fifteen to Twenty Cents a Lineal Foot—All Will Have to Pay.

In connection with the system of sewerage which Plainfield is to have, many points arise, knowledge of which will not only be of great value to all interested but a positive necessity. The question of assessment is probably one that most people are interested in. There are many different plans of assessment, and as yet one has not been found that will satisfy everyone.

However, every property owner in front of whose property the sewer pipes pass will be assessed, the amount to be determined by commissioners appointed for that purpose. It will probably be from fifteen to twenty-five cents a lineal foot. This amount will go into the general tax fund and the balance of the cost of the sewers will be against the city at large. There will be a uniform price for pipe laid which will probably be the minimum amount that has been paid per foot for lateral sewers; this statement must be qualified, however, because in some cases of assessment a fixed price is adopted which may be greater than the minimum cost of lateral sewers.

Another question will probably be asked, that is, whether a man living on the corner will have to pay for both the front and side.

He will have to pay for sidewalk and street improvements on both sides, and while there are plans of assessment which provide for this in special cases of corner lots, yet it is probable that they will have to pay for both sides, because the property is more valuable and the benefits greater.

After the laterals are in, the city at large will be assessed for intersections, for the extra cost of the main sewers over the laterals, for manholes, flush tanks, and preparation of disposal beds entire.

A fact worthy of much note is that in time there will be no cesspools and out houses on property connected with sewers, as an ordinance will be prepared and put into effect by the Board of Health, which will require people using the sewer to remove them and fill them in. This will be done to purify the ground, and it is the intention to have Plainfield as healthy as possible. It will take some time to effect this change, but it will eventually come and the city will be all the better for it.

COASTED DOWN THE MOUNTAIN.

Two Sunday-school classes from Hope chapel held a picnic up on Johnston's drive on the mountain yesterday under the care of their teachers, Mrs. Clarence Leland and Miss Ada Nash. A very pleasant time was spent by all except Miss Ritta Nash who came to grief on the return to Plainfield. She had her wheel with her and as she led it down the steep hill she kept jumping on and off. At last she stayed on too long and lost her control of the machine and away she went. After getting down part of the distance the wheel turned and the young girl was thrown off. She was badly bruised all over, but her wheel escaped without injury.

Sues Mr. Bellis for $10,000.

James B. Brown, the contractor, has begun suit in the Somerset court for $10,000 damages against Lewis A. Bellis, a prominent business man. Brown alleges that Bellis brutally assaulted his nineteen-year-old son, who became a cripple from the effects of his injuries and died after five years of continuous suffering. Bellis denies that he assulted young Brown. His friends say that it will be proved that the lad died of a hip disease for which he had been under medical treatment years before the time of the alleged assult. The trial takes place in September.

Down In Front.

Maltby's track is becoming a resort where cyclists of the western end of this city congregate. James Butts, of the Potter Press Works, was among them last evening and was riding around the track. There was a patch of mud on the track, and Butts managed to strike it. His wheel slipped, and he was thrown and knocked senseless. After a time he came to, but it was quite a while before he could ride his wheel. His face was badly skinned, and he was badly bruised all over.

BRIGHT YOUNG MAN DEAD.

Studying for the Law He Overworked Himself, Sickness Resulting.

In the death of William Randolph, of Basking Ridge, which occurred Tuesday night, his parents, brothers and sisters have the sympathy of all.

He was a law student at Carlisle, Pa., standing highest in a large class, and was to have been admitted to the bar in the fall. Hard study was the cause of his health breaking down and he returned to his home in Basking Ridge. A teacher in the school at that place was called away and prevailed upon Mr. Randolph to take the school, which he did, until his health was so bad that he was obliged to give up and the school disbanded. From that time he gradually grew worse until he died.

He was a particularly bright student and had planned much for the future. Mr. Randolph was engaged to be married to a most estimable young woman, who has been constantly in attendance at his bedside for the past four weeks, and has shared with the parents their anxiety, care and sorrow. He was twenty-two years old and a model Christian man. He leaves a father and mother, Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Randolph, a sister, who lives at Basking Ridge, two brothers, one residing at Port Jervis, the other, Rev. Herbert Randolph, pastor of Grace M. E. church in North Plainfield.

HE HAS AN INSANE TURN.

The Boy Rational When They Reach Somerville—Taken Home.

Peter Brockley, an insane youth, was brought to Somerville yesterday from Frankfort. He was bound with ropes and strapped to the bottom of a farm wagon, where he was guarded by A. D. Baird and V. B. Wyckoff, of Fankfort. Young Brockley, who is of unknown parentage, was taken from a charity institution at Kingston, N. Y., by Farmer Baird ten years ago. The past year he has been subject to fits of violent insanity. These outbreaks have been followed by periods of continuous sleep from seven to ten days. After awakening he was rational and remained so for months.

Tuesday night Brockley disappeared and was found this morning hiding in Mr. Wyckoff's barn. When approached by his captors, he acted like an enraged beast, tearing his clothes and the boards of the barn floor with his teeth. He was subdued after a desperate struggle. He fell asleep during his long journey here. When aroused near the jail yesterday afternoon he had regained his normal condition. Farmer Baird, who is greatly attached to the demented youth, changed his mind about having him committed to the insane asylum, and returned to his home with his charge last night. Young Brockley's case is puzzling the physicians.

SUFFERING WITH LOCKJAW.

William Peterson Stepped on a Rusty Nail and Is Bad Off.

About two weeks ago William Peterson, of Watchung avenue, stepped on a rusty nail which penetrated his left foot. Nothing serious was thought of the accident till a few days ago when he began to suffer terrible pains. His limbs became stiffened and he had difficulty in swallowing his food.

Dr. Tomlinson was called and discovered that the young man was suffering with the first stages of lockjaw. In order that Mr. Peterson should have good treatment the doctor thought he had better be taken to the hospital, which was done this morning with the ambulance.

It is impossible to determine at present the seriousness of the wound.

Got Lime in His Eye.

A serious affliction of the eye has sent William A. Pangborn, of Chatham street, to the Ear and Eye Infirmary, at New York. Mr. Pangborn, who is a mason, was standing by a mortar bed several weeks ago when a piece of lime flew in his eye. He thought nothing of it at the time, but it grew worse and worse until now he has gone to the hospital to have it treated.

Sorrowing Brothers.

The relief committee of Perseverence Lodge, No. 74, K. of P., met last evening and decided to take entire charge of the funeral of Henry Dealaman. The members of the lodge will meet Friday afternoon at two o'clock in their rooms to attend the funeral services in a body.

The society which has arranged for this service most cordially invite every one connected with or interested in Christian Endeavor work to enjoy with them the inspiration and enthusiasm which the convention delegates will bring.

A GOOD SELECTION.

Executor J. A. Hubbard Protects the Babcock Building from Fire.

In the Babcock building Plainfield has a building that is worthy of her and it is but right that such a place has the best of modern appliances. The elevator is a great help, but now the question of fire protection has come up. Of course J. A. Hubbard, the executor of the estate, wished the very best obtainable, for it is the object of Mr. Hubbard to put in the building every modern and successful appliance to prevent fire, and the recent trial of the Kent Fire Extinguisher was to test its efficiency with this object in view. Its great effectiveness has already been described in The Press, and the test completely convinced Mr. Hubbard that the Kent was the one to have. Mariner J. Kent, the secretary and general manager of the Manhattan Fire Extinguisher Company, who manufacture the Kent, thoroughly explained all its good points, and as a result fifteen extinguishers have been placed in the building.

The Kent extinguisher is one of the most modern, the patent for it being granted on July 27th of the present year, and all those who have seen it in use will testify that it is by far the quickest and best on the market. It is endorsed by leading insurance companies, and the fire departments of different cities.

PRIZE WALTZERS.

Dancers Merry and Graceful at the Jersey Central Ball.

The first grand ball given by the Jersey Central Club was given in T. A. B. Hall, on West Fourth street, last evening. The attendance at the first dance of this organization was large, and it was due mainly to the fact that two handsome prizes were to be contested for and awarded to the two best waltzers present. Precisely at twelve o'clock the contest began and it was watched with interest by those present. The judges selected to pick the winning parties were P. Revelle, W. Goeller and Chas. Greder. Twelve couples contested for the prizes, and out of the twelve the judges selected Thomas Muldowney and his sister, Miss Lizzie Muldowney, and William Barry and Mrs. Fred S. Moore as the lucky ones. The prizes given were two handsome fruit baskets containing some of the most lucious fruit of the season.

The affair was a grand success both financially and socially and the committee deserve credit for the manner in which matters were carried out at this their first attempt.

Died at the Hospital.

John McConnon, who was taken to the hospital a few day ago, died yesterday. His funeral will be held at his brother-in-law's house, corner of Greenbrook road and Harrison street, tomorrow morning at eight o'clock, and at St. Mary's church at nine o'clock. Interment will be in St. Mary's cemetery.

A HARD EARNED VICTORY.

FISH AND WALZ WIN THE TENNIS CHAMPIONSHIP OF PLAINFIELD.

It was a fight to the finish and an exciting one until it came to an end, for the match for the double tennis championship of Plainfield came off yesterday afternoon at the Hillside Tennis Club courts, and as pretty an exhibition of playing has not been given in Plainfield for some time.

The match was Fred K. Fish, Jr., and Carl Walz against Henry V. Ryder and Thomas Smith, and two more evenly matched pairs could hardly be found. Fish and Walz finally won, but only by getting three sets out of five played, for Ryder and Smith played an admirable game and but for the sudden brace that the winners took in the last two games would have won the match. As it was they deserve great credit for their excellent playing, especially their team work which was better than that of their opponents.

The first two games Fish and Walz won and managed to hold the lead until the score stood 4-3 in their favor, when Ryder and Smith by their excellent placing took the last three without trouble, winning 6-4. The second set was a walkover for Fish and Walz who won 6-1, two of the games being love games and in three others their opponents only scored 15. They tried to get the third set the same way but it was only after the hardest kind of fighting that they won 7-5. In this set Smith began to use the smash at which he is an expert. He passed his opponents at the net repeatedly and in one case upset one of them. Walz also distinguished himself by his fine recoveries which materially aided in the victory. The next set was close up to the seventh game, when it stood 3-3, and then Fish and Walz lost their nerve and the set, 6-3.

All the players put out their best efforts for the last set and although it was long after six o'clock the few visitors were glad to remain. The playing was the best Plainfield courts have seen for many a day. After a bitter fight, at the end of the seventh game the score stood 4-3 in favor of Fish and Walz, and then everybody realized that the time had come. Back and forth the ball went first a drive then a lob, while "dewce" and advantage" followed in rapid succession. After one of the longest games of the day, Smith knocked a return out of court and the games stood 5-3 in favor of Fish and Walz. A supreme effort and Smith and Ryder took a game, but a ball into the net by Smith ended the afternoon's play giving Fish and Walz the match 4-6, 6-1, 7-5, 3-6, 6-4, and also the double championship of Plainfield.

The summary of the points made in the first set is as follows:

Points won by Fish and Walz—
Aces on nets, by Ryder 3; by Smith 6.
Aces on outs, by Ryder 8; by Smith 7.
Aces on double faults, by Ryder 0; by Smith 2.
Total aces made, 32.
Points won by Ryder and Smith—
Aces on placed balls, by Ryder 6; by Smith 0.
Aces on nets, by Fish 5; by Walz 6.
Aces on outs, by Fish 5; by Walz 5.
Aces on double faults, by Fish 0; by Walz 0.
Total aces made, 37.

The summary of the last set was:

Points won by Fish and Walz—
Aces on outs, by Ryder 4; by Smith 12.
Total aces made, 38.
Points won by Ryder and Smith—
Aces on nets, by Fish 4; by Walz 11.
Aces on outs, by Fish 3; by Walz 5.
Aces on double faults, by Fish 0; by Walz 0.
Total aces made, 32.

The Police Must Kill.

A few weeks ago Mayor Treganowan, of South Amboy, issued a proclamation warning dog-owners to keep their dogs muzzled, also authorizing the borough marshals to kill all unmuzzled dogs found running at large within the borough limits. It was discovered a few days later that the marshals were not strictly enforcing the law, and complaints were made to several of the Councilmen, who, at the last meeting of the Common Council, strongly favored the Mayor's action, and decided that a fine be imposed upon a marshal for failure to kill a dog running without a muzzle.

Music and Refreshments.

Business first and pleasure afterwards is always the rule, and that was the case at the meeting of the Independent Fife and Drum Corps, Tuesday evening. Regulation business was transacted and one new member elected and then followed the regular practice. After that a banquet was given to the members and a general good time took place. The meeting broke up at about eleven o'clock.

VICTORY FOR GORMAN

The Senator's Opponents Routed in Baltimore.

John E. Hurst Nominated for Governor on the First Ballot—Reassessment Advocate Hayes Almost Totally Deserted—No Allusion in the Platform to Senator Gorman.

Baltimore, Aug. 1.—John E. Hurst, senior member of the well-known Hopkins place dry goods firm of Hurst, Purnell & Co., was last evening nominated for governor by the democratic state convention on the first ballot. Senator Gorman and I. Freeman Rasin thereby scored a decisive victory over their opponents, the Cleveland democrats. The ticket was completed by the nomination of Marion DeKalb Smith of Kent county to succeed himself as comptroller of the treasury, and of state senator Chas. C. Crothers of Cecil county for attorney general.

Desertion of Hayes.

The surprise of the convention was the almost total desertion of the re-assessment advocate, state senator Thomas G. W. Hayes. He received but two votes on the roll call. A stormy scene is said to have taken place between Mr. Hayes and Senator Gorman just before the convention met which possibly accounts for Mr. Hayes' lack of votes. It was stated that Mr. Hayes accused Mr. Gorman of base deceit and double dealing and ended by charging the senior senator with having sold him out.

No Allusion to Gorman.

The platform adopted by the convention contains a strong endorsement of both the national and state administrations; reaffirms the democratic national platform of 1892; favors reassessment of all the property in the state, and says the best tariff law the country has had in thirty-five years is restoring confidence and renewing prosperity in all branches of industry. There was no allusion whatever in the platform to Senator Gorman. It was stated this was his desire, and he gave as a reason that his course in Washington was not an issue in this campaign. The platform was unanimously adopted.

THE CONVICTS' PLOT FAILED.

Their Accomplice Gave the Guards Sugar Instead of Morphine.

Salt Lake, Utah, Aug. 1.—An unsuccessful attempt was made yesterday afternoon by fifteen convicts in the Utah penitentiary to escape. They concocted a scheme by which a dose of morphine was to be given to the guards in their coffee by a trusty who acted in the capacity of waiter. The trusty gave the scheme away and administered sugar instead of the morphine, which had been smuggled into the penitentiary. The guards took their places on the wall and simulated poisoning, and at what they considered an auspicious moment the fifteen prisoners in the plot, supplied with ropes and ladders, attempted to scale the walls, but were quickly brought to bay by a volley from the Winchesters in the hands of the guards. One convict, who fell from the top of the wall, was severely hurt, and all were returned to the cells.

SOMEBODY PROTESTS.

The Alleged Seizure of Trinidad Before the State Department.

Washington, Aug. 1.—The state department has received a formal protest against the seizure of the island of Trinidad off the Brazilian coast by Great Britain on behalf of "James L" and signed by somebody, whose name could not be deciphered as "Chancellor." The protest was issued from West 54th street, New York city, and it is assumed that James L. is Baron Harden-Hickey, who some years ago seized the island for himself and established a monarchical form of government in all its details for the territory. He did not even omit a postal department which has issued a series of stamps that are the delight of collectors.

The Two $1,000 Bills Worthless.

Washington, Aug. 1.—The pieces of the two one-thousand dollar notes found in the rubbish of an office building in this city by the wife of the janitor have been discovered to be worthless. They were halves of bills cancelled and sent to the mascerator many years ago and then stolen from the treasury. That explains why no effort was made to pass them.

DEATH OF BISHOP HOWE.

A Brilliant Ecclesiastical Career Brought to a Close at Bristol.

Philadelphia, Aug. 1.—Mark Anthony Dewolfe Howe, D. D., first bishop of the Episcopal diocese of central Pennsylvania, who died at Bristol, R. I., yesterday, was a native of the town where he died. He was born on April 5, 1809, the son of Hon. John Howe, a distinguished Rhode Island lawyer and a nephew of the late Bishop Smith, of Kentucky, presiding bishop of the Episcopal church in the United States. Dr. Howe graduated at Brown university in 1828 and at the age of 21 years he became head master of a Boston public school, a position which he subsequently relinquished to accept that of tutor of Latin and Greek in Brown university. In 1832 he was ordained deacon by Bishop Griswold, being subsequently ordained to the priesthood, and served as rector of St. Matthew's church, Boston; Christ's church, Cambridge, and St. James' church, Roxbury, Mass. In 1846 he became rector of St. Luke's church, Philadelphia. In 1850 Dr. Howe was elected secretary of the general convention, a post which he filled for twelve years. In 1865 he was chosen missionary bishop for the ecclesiastical jurisdiction of Nevada, but declined. He was raised as the first bishop of the Episcopal diocese of central Pennsylvania in 1871. Bishop Howe moved to Reading in 1872 and had been living there ever since, except the short time he had been spending at Bristol. Bishop Howe was a prolific and able writer.

TO BE A FINER NEW YORK.

The Cruiser Brooklyn To Be Launched in About Two Weeks.

Philadelphia, Aug. 1.—The launch of the armored cruiser Brooklyn, which has been on the ways at Cramp's ship yard for two years, will take place in about two weeks. The navy department has not as yet made public its plains for the event. It is pretty well understood that Mrs. Cleveland has no desire to officiate. It has been hinted that Miss Ruth Cleveland may be asked to name the ship. The Brooklyn is designed to have a speed of at least twenty knots, and a displacement of 8,150 tons. Her main engines are of the triple expansion type, four in number, and will drive twin propellers. The contract price is $2,986,000, the building of the ship being authorized by an act of congress, approved July 19, 1892. As a naval officer expressed it, "The Brooklyn is but a finer New York."

KILLED BY AN ELECTRIC SHOCK

Unavailing Attempts To Resuscitate a Workman.

Niagara Falls, N. Y., Aug. 1.—Edward Maloney was instantly killed at the electric light works in this city by receiving a shock of 3,000 volts of electricity through his body. At the time of the accident Maloney, in company with another employe of the company, was changing the wires from one machine to another. As they stood on rubber matting it is thought that Maloney must have either stepped off the matting or touched the machine with his elbow in order to complete the circuit. He fell to the floor on his back suddenly without uttering a word. Dr. Hodge worked over him for nearly two hours unsuccessfully. Not a mark from the current contact was found on his body.

THE TRINIDAD AFFAIR.

Only a Short Dispatch Received from Our Minister to Brazil.

Washington, Aug. 1.—The only news that has been received officially by the state department touching the seizure of the little island of Trinidad by Great Britain was contained in a short despatch from United States Minister Thompson at Petropolis, near Rio de Janeiro, stating that the Brazilian populace were greatly agitated by the seizure. The officials say that the report that our minister is in conference with the Brazilian minister for foreign affairs upon this subject is pure surmise, though they do not discredit the statement.

HOUSES SWEPT AWAY

Three Persons Known To Have Been Drowned and a Number Are Fatally Injured—One Hotel Carried Away—Damage to the Town Said To Be Enormous.

Denver, Colo., Aug. 1.—Adelaide, a flourishing mining town on the line of the Florence and Cripple Creek railroad, about seventy-five miles from Cripple Creek, was struck by a series of cloudbursts Tuesday that flooded the entire district and devastated over fifty houses. A terrible rainstorm accompanied by unusual electrical disturbances began frightening the residents about 5 o'clock in the afternoon, followed several hours later by a downpour of water unprecedented in this section. So far as known three persons have been drowned and swept away by the rush of water, and several persons are fatally injured.

Hotel Swept Away.

The first rush of water occurred about 7 o'clock and came down Eight Mile creek in the shape of an immense wave. This resulted from a cloudburst at the head of the creek fifteen miles north of the town. The Adelaide hotel was carried away before the vast volume of water, guests scrambling amid their effects in a mad rush to save themselves. Carried along in the seething waters were timbers from cabins along the creek, which tended to make the work of rescue more dangerous. A prominent citizen named Hall saved himself by clinging to his floating hen coop.

Many Houses Wrecked.

The cloudburst was followed by a second one, and again another, which razed many buildings to the ground, including stores and residences. The damage to the town is enormous, and in the path of the storm it will be days befose an estimate of the damage can be made. Railroad and telegraph communication have been cut off from the town and the tracks are washed away for a distance of four miles on either side of the town.

ECKELS ACCUSED.

Alleged That He Knew of Williamantic Bank's Insolvency.

Hartford, Conn., Aug. 1.—The Post accuses Comptroller Eckels of knowing that the First National bank of Willimantic was insolvent for a year before the bank failed last April. It says that the bank examiner, F. F. Dooley, informed Comptroller Eckels that the bank was involved in the spring of 1894. Mr. Eckels had some correspondence with the directors, conducted by cashier R. H. Risley, who died in April, 1895. The result was that Comptroller Eckels on his own proposition accepted a bond of directors to make the impairment of the bank's capital good. This was not done, however. The bond was filed in the treasury department at Washington, and when Risley's forgeries were discovered after his death, the bond was also found to be forged.

BURNED TO DEATH FOR A JOKE

"Funny" Men Set an Old Man On Fire with Fatal Results.

Chicago, Aug. 1.—A special from Mascoutah, Ill., says: News has reached here of a fiendish outrage committed in the name of a practical joke near Venedy Station. Blazer Eli, a well-known character of the community, aged 62 years, had been on a three weeks' spree, and his associates packed his pantaloons with shavings and live coals of fire, intending to tantalize the old man with the smoke caused thereby. The coals set the shavings ablaze and in a few minutes time the would-be jokers found their victim burning to death. The fire was extinguished, but the old man died a few hours later.

RICHARD M. HUNT DEAD.

The Architect Passed Away at His Newport House.

Newport, R. I., Aug. 1.—Richard M. Hunt, the well-known architect and designer of the world's fair building and nearly all the more costly residences here, including The Breakers and Marble Palace, died yesterday at his home on Bellevue avenue. He leaves a widow, two sons and three daughters. Mr. Hunt had been confined to his bed for several weeks but nothing serious was anticipated until Tuesday when his heart weakened.

FOUGHT A DUEL WITH KNIVES.

One of the Men Seriously Cut in the Hand and Abdomen.

Portland, Me., Aug. 1.—A special to the Argus says Charles St. Clair of East Union and Harry Daggett of South Hope fought a duel with pocket knives at Warren, Tuesday. After coming to blows over a money dispute they repaired to a stable and began slashing with knives. Daggett got the worst of it, being cut in the hand and abdomen, requiring medical attendance. No arrests have been made.

The Law Unconstitutional.

Asheville, N. C., Aug. 1.—Judge Simonton has decided that section 25 of the revenue act of North Carolina, compelling piano agents to pay a special license of $250 is unconstitutional, for the reason that it is a violation of the provision of the United States constitution granting to congress exclusive right to regulate commerce between states.

All Quiet at Brookside.

Birmingham, Ala., Aug. 1.—No further trouble has occurred at Brookside since Tuesday night. Reports sent out were greatly exaggerated. Only one man was killed and two others shot in the legs. It was no race war, but a battle between officers and negroes.

BUSINESS PARALYZED

The Situation in Cuba Said To Be Awful.

A Party of Refugees Reach Philadelphia as They Feared the Rebels Intended To Destroy Their Town. No Tobacco Being Raised and No Money To Buy It if It Was.

Philadelphia, Aug. 1.—A paralysis of agriculture and all business pursuits heretofore unparalleled in the history of war-ridden Cuba is described by eight refugees from that island who have just been landed at Philadelphia by the Norwegian steamer Franklin, from Baracoa. Threats made by the insurgents to burn Baracoa and destroy by fire the last vestige of the city constituted the principal reasons why the refugees hurried away and took passage on the first vessel bound to the United States. Although the Franklin is not a passenger craft, and one-half of the little party of refugees are females, the steamer's captain could not refuse to bring them along with him, in view of their immediate danger if they remained in Cuba.

Baracoa Fired Three Times.

The refugees say that nearly all of the young men have left the city and joined the insurgents, despite the vigilance of the Spanish pickets and that if it had not been for the fact that so many wives, mothers and sisters of the insurgents resided in Baracoa, the place would have been shelled by rebel forces and blotted out of existence long ago. Three times the city has been on fire, notwithstanding the rigors of martial law enforced by 3,000 Spanish soldiers and a harbor guarded by gunboats and torpedo craft.

Worse Than Outsiders Imagine.

Manuel Ramos, one of the passengers, who brought his family with him, was prior to the war one of the principal tobacco merchants on the island. He says that the situation is worse now than any person outside the island can imagine. There is now little or no tobacco in Cuba, because its culture has been abandoned and the tillers of tobacco fields have laid aside the plow and the hoe for the rifle and machete. Nobody in Cuba has money to buy cigars, he says, even if the tobacco to make them were purchasable. Nearly all of Signor Ramos' saving were spent while his resources remained idle, for he had faith in General Martinez Campos' guarantee that the rebellion would be squelched in a month.

MANY DIVORCES INVALIDATED

Ninety Days' Residence in Oklahoma Not Sufficient.

Guthrie, Okla., Aug. 1.—Following the decision that probates have had no right to grant divorces in Oklahoma since August 13, 1893, the supreme court yesterday decided that even before that time their jurisdiction was confined to persons who had been residents of the territory two years or more and that all divorces granted by them to persons on ninety days' residence are null and void and subsequent marriages bigamous. As all outsiders coming here for divorces took advantage of the ninety days' residence clause this decision invalidates between three and four hundred divorces granted to eastern people.

BROUGHT IN ALIEN LABOR.

Five Italians To Be Deported and a Padrone Prosecuted.

Washington, Aug. 1.—The immigration bureau has instructed Commissioner Senner at New York to at once begin suit against Liugi Giuliano, a naturalized Italian for violation of the alien contract labor law and to deport five Italians brought over by him on the steamship Neustria, arriving July 24. Giuliano is a junk dealer and has a permit to work on the city scows in search of rags, iron, etc. The five men in their affidavits say that they were hired at $1.25 a day in Italy to come over here and work on these scows.

JUMPED FROM A BRIDGE.

An Abused Wife's Unsuccessful Attempt at Suicide.

Albany, Aug. 1.—Mrs. William Richardson, goaded to desperation by the treatment of her husband, threw herself from the Maiden Lane bridge into the Hudson river last night, but was rescued by a young man. She had quarrelled with her husband just previous, and he dared her to jump from the bridge. He is a pattern maker and is employed on the new capitol. The couple had not been living together for a year and met by chance on the bridge.

SWIFT FLIGHT OF PIGEONS.

Two Birds Make an Average Speed of 1,300 Yards a Minute.

Boston, Aug. 1.—One of the longest speed trials ever given pigeons took place yesterday. Two birds, Sully and Tommy, belonging to Henry Wagner of Roslyndale, were released at Buffalo at 7.01 o'clock in the morning and they returned to their loft in Roslyndale at 4:05, covering the distance of about 450 miles air line at a speed of about 1,300 yards a minute.

Another Victory for Defender.

Newport, R. I., Aug. 1.—The Defender scored another victory yesterday in the run from New London, forty miles before the wind. She outfooted the Vigilant eleven minutes and the Volunteer seventeen minutes. Gen. Paine's Jubilee did not start owing to a turnbuckle in the port rigging breaking.

Election Fraud Indictments.

Chicago, Aug. 1.—The grand jury today voted indictments against six election judges, charging fraudulent practices in the First and Second wards at the elections last November. The indictments resulted from the evidence brought out by the McCann-Belknap congressional election contest.

Col. E. K. Sibley Dies Abroad.

New York, Aug. 1.—The death in Victoria, British Colombia, of colonel Ebenezer K. Sibley, of East Orange, while returning from a trip to Alaska, which he had been taking with his wife, is announced. Col. Sibley was identified with many of the large corporations in the Gould system.

Their Farewell Performance.

London, Aug. 1.—Mr. Drly's company gave their farewell performance in London last night.

SEAMEN DESERTED ABROAD.

An Expensive Practice To Be Investigated by Uncle Sam.

Washington, Aug. 1.—The bureau of navigation is endeavoring to stop wherever it exists the illegal practice of forcing American seamen to leave their vessels in foreign ports and thus rendering them a charge upon the United States government. Every year congress appropriates $50,000 to aid in returning distressed American seamen from foreign shores to the United States. While many sailors undoubtedly desert abroad, in other instances they are forced ashore by the extortion or cruelty of masters. United States consuls yesterday reported two cases of which a thorough investigation has been ordered at New York, San Francisco and Port Townsend, and if the charges are proved an example will be made by inflicting full penalties. Nine seamen of the barkentine Thomas Brooks of New York, wrecked near Santiago de Cuba, have become a charge on the government, although wages, more than enough to pay their return to the United States, are due them. It appears from the consul's statement that wages had been advanced to them in New York in flat violation of law.

PROBABLY KIDNAPPED.

Strange Disappearance of a Little Girl Adopted in Germany.

Hoboken, N. J., Aug. 1.—Ellie Schneidt, a beautiful six-year-old tot adopted in Hamburg, Germany, by Mrs. Johanna Schneidt, now of No. 72 Garden street, Hoboken, proceedings for regaining possession of which were unsuccessfully instituted in Germany six months, mysteriously disappeared yesterday. It is believed by the police that she has been kidnapped. Before the proceedings to regain possession of the child reached Judge Lippincott's court six moths ago Mrs. Schneidt appealed to the empress of Germany in her behalf. The mother gave the child to Mrs. Schneidt a few days after its birth. A short time before the case reached the local courts a man giving his name as August Pasch went to board with the Schneidts. He endeavored first to persuade Mrs. Schneidt to send word to the child's parents that the little one was dead, and failing in this he tried to induce Mrs. Schneidt to give up possession of the child. In this he also failed. He has not since been seen in Hoboken.

LIKE A COMMON PRISONER.

Durrant Takes His First Ride to Court in the Black Maria.

San Francisco, Aug. 1.—Durrant was treated like a common prisoner for the first time yesterday. The buggy with which Chief Jailer Sattler has been taking him to and from the city hall did not appear. Instead the prison van conveyed him to the city hall. It is not likely that the deposition of Charles H. Clark, the traveling salesman, now in the east, will make much of an impression on the jury in the case. Should he return to testify it is said he will be arrested at the instigation of the American Tea Importing company, the managers of which allege that he obtained commissions from them on orders which were partly fictitious. It is is said Capt. Lees has decided to send a detective to arrest Clark.

AT A PISTOL'S POINT.

Burglars Force a Woman To Hand Over a Large Sum of Money.

Saratoga, N. Y., Aug. 1.—Masked men entered the house of ex-supervisor William Buckwell at Galaway about midnight, and at the point of a revolver caused Mrs. Buckwell to hand out a large sum of money which was in the house. Before leaving the premises they ordered her to sit in a chair for two hours under pain of instant death if she moved. Immediately after the robbers left the woman locked the door and then from an upper window she shouted for help. A neighbor responded and chased the robbers for some distance, but failed to overhaul them. Mr. Buckwell, who is an extensive live stock dealer, is confined to his bed by sickness.

WOULD HAVE TO FIGHT

Japan Cannot Honorably Give Way to Russia.

The Reported Demand of the Bear for the Evacuation of Liao-Tung Caused Great Surprise in Diplomatic Circles in Washington. The Report Probably Incorrect.

Washington, Aug. 1.—The announcement contained in a dispatch from St. Petersburg that Russia, Germany and France were determined to force Japan to evacuate the peninsula of Liao-Tung without waiting for the execution of the terms of the treaty of Shimonoseki was received with some surprise in diplomatic circles here, and among particular friends of Japan with incredulity. The matter at issue, it will be remembered, had its origin in the protest made by Russia, in which France and Germany joined, against that article of the Shimonoseki treaty by which China ceded to Japan absolutely the peninsula of Liao-Tung, on which Port Arthur with its massive and extensive fortifications were located. These three powers said that they did not want Japan to gain a foothold on the main land and she must therefore consent to a modification of the treaty in respect of that article. Japan responded to the protest that her honor and dignity demanded that the treaty should be ratified as negotiated by the signatory powers, but that she was perfectly willing subsequent thereto to relinquish the peninsula to China upon receiving adequate compensation therefor. This, it appears, satisfied the three powers at that time, for they joined in an identical note to the Japan foreign office signed by the Russian, French and German ministers in Tokio, expressing their sense of appreciation of "the wisdom and discretion shown by Japan."

Fatally Poor Diplomacy.

Now, according to the St. Petersburg dispatch they want Japan to move out of the peninsula without waiting for the adequate dispensation for its relinquishment. A gentleman who is perfectly familiar with the Oriental situation said this morning: "I cannot understand the dispatch, and am sure it must be based upon misinformation or half information. It is so inconsistent with all of Russia's previous manner of dealing with the Oriental nations, her diplomacy with them having always partaken of suavity, I must doubt than the fortiter in re, that I must doubt the accuracy of the dispatch. It is fatally poor diplomacy, for if Russia crowds Japan in the manner indicated the latter can do nothing less than fight.

Cannot Honorably Yield.

"She cannot honorably yield to such a demand, and must prefer to go down fighting rather than be disgraced. Such a policy on Russia's part means the investment of Japan by an overwhelming naval force and the presence of an army of at least 200,000 men. Is it probable that she can be contemplating such an expensive course? I do not believe that France and Germany have united with Russia in the demand as indicated. Rather, one of them at least, would act as mediator than persecutor.

Let Russia Pay.

"If Russia is really anxious to see Japan evacuate Liao-Tung," the speaker continued, "let her put up the amount of money necessary to satisfy Japan's perfectly just demand and the latter's forces will be withdrawn at once. She has a right to expect remuneration for relinquishing the peninsula, and it is understood that negotiations are in progress between China and Japan on this subject. Suppose that China should conclude that without the costly works at Port Arthur, which have been partly if not wholly demolished by the Japanese forces, she does not care to possess the peninsula and expresses a willingness to let Japan retain it. Should Russia then insist upon Japan getting out whether or not?"

THE MORA CLAIM.

A Protest Against Its Payment—Spanish Counter Claims.

Madrid, Aug. 1.—Republican and Carlist senators and deputies have addressed a protest to the government against the payment of the Mora claim without the sanction of the cortes. The protest declares that the government's precipitancy in settling the claim of the United States is unconstitutional and humiliating to Spain, and that the conduct of the United States in taking advantage of the Cuban insurrection to press this claim is an exhibition of an unfriendly disposition. The government has decided to pay the claim in three instalments. It is the intention afterwards to induce the United States to recognize Spanish claims for damage to property in Florida of citizens of this country which was incurred during the civil war in America.

There are just as big serpents in the sea as ever were caught. And there was never a one caught.

There is no use denying that when Senator Gorman goes forth to capture a political convention he generally captures it.

New York still has 6,000 nags pulling street cars. And yet any other town outside of New York having horse cars would be called slow.

The Journal thinks "that if the garbage and litter and goats, etc., including dogs, could be eliminated," Elizabeth would be quite a city. So think all of us.

At last good news has permeated from New Brunswick. The morning papers announce that the factories of that city are running full time and increasing wages.

Colonel Waring has cleaned the streets of New York, but the city will have to issue bonds to meet the deficit which the letter-writing Colonel has created in his business.

The Westfield Leader has an item this week that you do not often read. It says:

The editor wants to sell the house where he lives. Call and see it.

Fifty per cent. more pig iron has been produced during the first six months of 1895 than in the corresponding period of 1894, yet the stock on hand on June 30th was considerably less.

It begins to look as though the school census of Jersey City and Newark was either padded a year ago or else poorly enumerated this year. Of the two evils the first is to be condemned in emphatic terms.

Mrs. Frances Willard has been accused of hedging on the anti-lynching question. Some go so far as to say that her utterances show that she looks upon lynching as a necessary evil. This is hard to believe to those who are acquainted with the outspoken words of Mrs. Willard on the temperance question.

Mr. Secretary Morton has been reorganizing the weather service bureau. It is recorded that yesterday the Secretary was caught in a severe rain storm and he murmured not a word of protest against getting soaked, because his newly-organized department had predicted the storm. If this be so, didn't the Secretary show a little bit of bad faith by going out at all without his umbrella.

The revival of the project to connect Plainfield and Elizabeth by a trolley line which will, of course, pass through Cranford, is of vital interest to the people of this town. Concerning the effect that the existence of the line will have upon the business interests of this community opinions differ, but it is certain that the majority of our residents will welcome a convenient, cheap and pleasant means of communication with adjacent cities.

There is one condition that it is the duty of every citizen to demand. That is the preservation of the county road from car tracks. The Consolidated Traction Company is rich enough to buy its own right of way.

Any proposal to gridiron the splendid stone road which the people have built at great expense should be vetoed by a public sentiment which the great corporation must respect.—Cranford Chronicle.

Terrible paroxysms of coughing would last hours with little interruption and it seemed as if she could not survive them. —Again Edsall shows his enterprise in bringing good things to Plainfield. Those who visited his store today were delighted to find that in his drugs department the wonders of Beef Malt are being demonstrated by practical tests, a free sample being given to each visitor.

—Through the agency of Thomas M. Paff, real estate agent, the Scotch Plains Baptist church, sold their farm on Terrill road to Leo Scherer of East Twenty-third street, New York. John G. Cook leased his house on Park avenue to Jesse Ryno through the same medium.

—The Scotch Plains Boat Club, who own the boat named the Gobbledy Gudgeon, which they keep on the Passaic river, recovered damages from the parties who stole and disfigured the craft with the idea of keeping it for their own use. It is almost impossible to keep a boat on the Passaic, these river pirates either stealing or destroying it.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer one hundred dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

CYCLING COMMENT.

Fred VanEps rode his wheel to Somerville yesterday and visited friends.

F. L. C. Martin, the popular cycle dealer, has ordered a new thirty-five pound Cleveland tandem.

Clarence Teel, Wm. Stevenson and Charles C. Lister returned on their wheels last evening after a most enjoyable fishing trip to Lake Hopatcong.

James Buckle, Richard Haven, Mr. Toles, Tunis J. Carey and John Lyman took a run to New Brunswick last evening and found the roads in perfect condition.

A leather tire is being manufactured in France which it is claimed will do away eventually with the rubber tire, as it is said to be lighter and less liable to punctures.

One of the latest of Plainfield's citizens to become infatuated with a wheel is Charles Giese, of Elm street. Yesterday afternoon with the assistance of a boy the ex-policeman made excellent progress on the fine drive next to the First Presbyterian church.

There has always been a good deal of rivalry among the cyclists of Pond's, and for a long time the record from Pond's to Westfield has been 13 minutes, 17 seconds. Last evening Charles Butts succeeded in riding the distance in 13 minutes, 4 seconds, thus securing the record.

All rubber cements are held in solution by naphtha, kerosene, or benzine, which must be exposed to the air a few moments before the cement will stick well. No plug or patch should be applied to a tire until at least two minutes has elapsed after smearing them with cement; often five minutes should be allowed.

An item is going the rounds that "50,000 people derive incomes from the bicycle in some manner." "Some manner" is good, but the number is nearer 100,000. Fifty thousand derive incomes from the trade direct, and then there are the amateurs of different grades who get a slice in "some manner," not saying anything about the selling inducers encouraged by the retail trade. The professional racer, of course, is included in the trade direct.—American Wheelman.

The other new features include the reappearance of Senorita Yberrie, a Spanish danseuse; Le Clair and Leslie in their burlesque on "Trilby," and Fielding, a somewhat remarkable juggler. The retained features will be J. W. Ransome, the Ruler of New York; the Egger-Rieser troupe of Tyrolean singers and dancers; Clairesse Agnew, an eccentric dancer; Marietta and Belloni, and their wonderful flock of performing cockatoos, and Dr. Leo Sommer's Hungarian Gysy Orchestra.

A Sensation in Houston.

Lightly she tripped down stairs, almost as noiselessly as if unshod, and stood upon the last step watching a man move a bicycle from the entrance of a staircase and place another within her reach. She glided to the edge of the sidewalk, mounted her wheel, and he followed. Just then a voice from a group of men said, "Look at that!" All turned their eyes in the direction indicated and beheld a young woman wearing bloomers, a cap, blouse waist, closely fitting, black stockings and a pair of wheeling slippers. It was 8:30 o'clock p. m. and she had come down from above a Main street store, and with her escort started toward the auditorium, out Main street.

As she led the way and passed along men stepped out from the curbing onto the driveway and with their staring eyes followed her along the street as far as the electric light gave any satisfaction to seeing. It was the first of her sex seen on the streets of Houston in bloomers riding a bicycle, and to say it created a sensation is drawing it mildly. From both sides of the street men stepped out and looked and exclaimed, "Well!" But nobody had a chance to tell of it as news on the streets afterward, because everybody seemed to have seen it. No sooner would one start out by saying, "I saw something just now that—" when the other fellows would break in, "Yes, I saw it, too." It created a genuine sensation along the street and was the talk of the gossips most of the evening, and many watched for the lady's return, but some had to give it up, as they hadn't the time.—Galveston News.

Electric Bitters.

Electric Bitters is a medicine suited for any season, but perhaps more generally needed in the spring, when the languid exhausted feeling prevails, when the liver is torpid and sluggish and the need of a tonic and alterative is felt. A prompt use of this medicine has often averted long and perhaps fatal bilious fevers. No medicine will act more surely in counteracting and freeing the system from the malarial poison. Headache, indigestion, constipation, dizziness yield to Electric Bitters. Only 50c per bottle at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

Karl's Clover Root will purify your blood, clear your complexion, regulate your bowels and make your head clear as a bell; 25c, 50c and $1. Sold by all druggists.

LOVED THE ARTIST.

Of course, it was very wrong of her, for we all know that you should not talk to gentlemen who have not been introduced to you. But when you are sweet and twenty, and are staying at a country house all alone, and are rather bored, and a handsome young man comes to your rescue in a wood, when your poor little dog has caught its foot in a cruel trap, how can you possibly pass him the very next day as if he were a stranger? And he was so kind to the dog. He bound up its poor little bleeding foot in his handkerchief and carried it in his arms to the lodge gate. Then he said:

"Do you often walk in the wood?"

She was feeling too grateful to him to resent his impertinence as she should have done. So she only said, "Sometimes," and thanked him again with all her heart in her pretty eyes.

He looked up to where, through the trees, the big red house showed its twisted old-fashioned chimneys, and said:

"My name is Lavender. You are Miss Verinder, I suppose?"

She looked at him quickly.

"I am Miss Verinder's humble companion. My name is Smith."

"We are comrades in servitude," he said. "I am Lord Halibut's secretary. You walk in the woods sometimes. Then it isn't goodby. Do they let you come out often?"

"I am my own mistress at present," she said. "A lot of people will be coming down on the 25th for the heiress's coming of age. They give a grand entertainment to the tenants. Lord Halibut is to be there. What is he like?"

"Oh!" said the young man indifferently, "he's not a bad sort of fellow. There's some talk of their families wishing him to marry the heiress. The estates go very well together. But he's never even seen her; he's been so much abroad, you know."

"I don't believe the heiress will have him," the girl answered sharply, and turned away with her poor little dog in her arms.

Now, it is quite clear that she ought not to have walked in the wood—at least, not so soon as the next day; or, if she walked there the next day, she ought not to have chosen the very hour when poor Troll had met with his misfortune. But to the bored much may be pardoned, and as for Lord Halibut's secretary, he had a right, one may suppose, to amuse himself. And that meeting was not the last. How could it have been? And when you meet a person every day without chaperons or other tiresome people, you soon make friends. Before the week was out Mr. Lavender had heard how Miss Smith was left an orphan and had to earn her living; and sue had learned that Mr. Lavender's part in life must always be that of a subordinate.

"Is she kind to you?" he asked one evening, as they sat on a mossed tree trunk and watched the red sun set across the valley, where the corn grew.

"Oh, yes, she's kind enough," the girl said; "at least, I am sure she means to be."

"She's revoltingly clever, I hear. Beat the Senior Wrangler at Cambridge, or something."

"She did. But that's not criminal; and Lord Halibut is, at least, her partner in iniquity. He took a first class in Greats, didn't he? Oh, how I do hate clever men!"

"You have my sympathy. I abhor clever women."

They both laughed. And the days went on; and July melted into August, and August grew in grace, till the time came near for the coming of age of Miss Verinder; and if, during these days, there had been a hand pressure so slight as not to be worth resenting, or a look so nearly tender as to make a man's heart beat high with hope; if he had treasured the forget-me-nots she gathered by the woodland pond and pressed them in the volume of Browning from which he had read to her in the woods; and if she kept a certain handkerchief, stained with poor little Troll's blood, in a locked sandalwood box, and took it out and laid it against her face for all its bloodstain, when no one else was by—all that concerned only the companion and the secretary, and no one else in all the wide world.

It was bright noontide, and they walked through the woods; and presently they came to the wishing-tree, with its two trunks growing from one root.

"If we pass through the wishing-tree," she said, "and wish as we go, the fairies will give us the wish of our hearts."

So they went through, hand in hand, because the way was rough. As she passed out of it, a bramble caught her dress, and he stooped to disentangle it, but the folds of her gown were electric, and his hands trembled.

"How tiresome it is!" she said, "I believe that bramble will never let me go."

"Can you blame it?" he asked, looking up at her; and she turned her face away. They walked on. "A whole month," he said, "and seeing you every day! When did such good fortune ever before come to a poor secretary?"

"Or to a humble companion? No, I don't mean that. But it has been pleasant."

They walked in silence to the little gate that divided the woods from the grounds. Here they stopped, and she said, looking at him for a moment half shyly, half proudly:

"Come in; I should like you to see the garden. All the smart people are coming to morrow, to keep the heiress's birthday."

He hesitated, and she laughed. "Oh, we needn't go in sight of the house. The grounds are big enough."

He flushed, and stammered in wordless denial of the thought she had read in him that his being seen with the companion might compromise her, and together they walked under the arching trees to the old lawn where the sundial stands.

"This is where the tenants dance, I believe," she said; "and all the grand people dance with the cottager folks, which seems to me rather silly, for I am sure each set would rather dance with themselves. Lord Halibut is coming. Will you be here?"

"I shall certainly come if Lord Halibut does. May I dance with you?"

She laughed. "I don't think you know what dancing on turf is like. Beside, probably our steps don't suit."

"Let's try now," he said.

He laid his arm on her waist. The next moment her hand was on his arm and they were whirling down the lawn toward the sundial.

"What foolish people we are!" she said breathlessly, and half moved to pause. But his arm held her closer, and they waltzed to the end of the lawn, past the sundial and into the shade of the great copper breech; and there, before she had time to move her hand from his arm, both his arms were around her and he was raining kisses on her soft, flushed face. She shrank a litttle, and then laid her soft face against his and put her hand up to his neck.

"Ah!" he said, "the wish is granted. I have my heart's desire."

"And I," she whispered softly.

"You do love me, don't you?"

She clasped her hands behind his neck and hung back, looking at him at arm's length, with half ashamed, half laughing eyes.

"Oh, yes, I love you, Lord Halibut," she said.

He put his hands up and laid them on hers. "Then you know?"

She laughed again. "I have known all the time. Your handkerchief, at least, was not ashamed of your name."

Not one thought that was traitor to his love for her stirred in him at her confession. Lord Halibut knew true love when he saw it.

"Why did you deceive me?" she asked.

"Oh! the landscape painter idea, I suppose," he said. "The Lord of Burleigh, and that sort of thing!"

She laughed once more. "The worst of it is," she said, "that I have a vow in Heaven never to marry Lord Halibut."

"Surely Lord Halibut can absolve you from that if any one can!"

"I am glad you think so, for you have a vow—somewhere or other—not to marry Miss Verinder, and you, too, will need absolution. Take it from me——"

"Then you are—you are not Miss Smith?"

Her dainty chin went up. "Now, do I look like it?" she said.

"But why——!"

"The landscape painter's part," she answered, "seems to be universally attractive!"—The Sketch.

Eel Fishing in the Kaw.

W. C. Hunter dropped in the other day and reeled off the following story to the editor of Profitable Advertising:

"A week ago I had a strange experience in Kansas City. You have often heard Kansas City referred to as the 'City by the Kaw' and the Missouri as the 'Big Muddy.' The Kaw River is for the purpose of furnishing mud to the Missouri, into which it empties, so that the latter can be called 'Big Muddy.' The Kaw River is 912 miles long, and its average width is 11 1-2 inches. Being filled with mud, it is a great place for eels. In fact, this stream is filled with eels. These eels are compelled to go tandem style. One after the other they go up one side of the river and down the other. I noticed them going up the river in this manner and grasped one by its tail, and in pulling him out I found that he had grasped the tail of the preceding eel, and this eel in turn had a hold of the tail of the eel in front of him. I pulled out the eels in this manner until I had some thirty yards on the bank.

"I was in a predicament as as to what to do with so big a catch, when I noticed eight horses coming up the street, hauling a large empty cable spool, such as they use for winding cables on for shipment. I struck a bargain with the driver, and we commenced winding the eels on the spool, tail foremost. Each eel, as I have stated, was connected with the preceding eel, thus forming a continuous rope. We wound the eels on this rope until we had exhausted the supply. In this shape we hauled them to the Kansas City Fish Company and sold them for $130. By actual measurement there were fourteen miles 1,246 1-2 feet."

A WASHINGTON ROMANCE.

With Verbatim Reports of Some Conversational Episodes.

CHAPTER I.

"Is it hauteur or is it a maiden's coyness that causes you to turn away your head, love?"

George Lindsey stood with his arm about the willowy form of Imogene St. Lawrence. The scene was the ancestral halls of the St. Lawrence family, in the northwest quarter of the city. George Lindsey had asked Imogene St. Lawrence to be his bride. That was just prior to the remark which opens our story. And the dear girl had softly promised; and the lovers stood there in the gloaming drinking that sweet intoxication that never comes but once.

"It is not hauteur, George," replied Imogene St. Lawrence, in tones like far off church bells. "But, George—don't spurn me—I have eaten of the common onion of commerce, and my breath, it is so freighted with its trenchant bouquet it would take the nap from your coat collar like a lawn mower. It is to spare the man she loves, George, which causes your Imogene to bury her nose in your vest."

"Look up, darling," and George Lindsey's tone had a glad note of sympathy. "I, too, have battened upon onions."

The lovers clung to each other like bats.

"But we'll have to put toe weights on pa, George! He'll step high and lively when he hears of this."

"Does not your father love me, pet?"

"I don't think he does," replied the fair girl, tenderly. "I bade him to ask you to dinner once, George. That was on your last trip up. He said he would sooner sleep with a wet dog, George, and refused. From that I infer his opposition to our union."

"We'll make a monkey of him," and George Lindsey hissed the words through his set teeth.

"And my brother?"

"As for him," said George Lindsey, and at this he began pacing the room like a lion, "as for your brother, if he so much as looks squint-eyed at our happiness he goes into the soup. From your father I would bear much, but when the balance of your family get in on the game they will pay for their chips in advance."

"Can we not leave them, George; leave them and fly together?"

"Your father is rich, Imogene; that is a sufficient answer." There was a touch of sternness in George Lindsey's tone, and the subject of flying was dropped right there.

CHAPTER II.

George Lindsey lived in the far off hamlet of Cumberland. He returned to his home. In three months he was to wed Imogene St. Lawrence. Benton St. Lawrence had a fit when it was first mentioned. At last he gave his consent.

"I had planned a title for you, Imogene." That was all he said.

CHAPTER III.

Three months are supposed to elapse.

CHAPTER IV.

It was dark when the train came to a panting pause in the Baltimore and Ohio depot. George Lindsey picked his way through the crowd with quick, nervous steps. It was to be his wedding night. He wondered if Imogene would meet him at the train. All at once he beheld the dear form walking just ahead.

"To-night, dearest, you are mine forever," whispered George Lindsey, tenderly seizing the sweet young creature by her larboard pinion.

The shrieks which emanated from that young woman could have given the best efforts of a wronged panther cards and spades. It was not Imogene St. Lawrence.

CHAPTER V.

"You make me weary," remarked the brutal turnkey to whom George Lindsey told his tale.

The cell door clanged, the lock clanked, the cruel key grated as it turned. George Lindsey was a prisoner. The charge the blotter bore against the prisoner was:

"Insulting women on the street."

When George Lindsey was once more alone he cursed as if his heart would break. At last he was calm.

CHAPTER VI.

Oh, woman, in our hours of ease,
Uncertain, coy, and hard to please;
But seen too oft, familiar with her face,
We first endure, then pity, then embrace.

CHAPTER VII.

The palace St. Lawrence was a flare and glare of lights. The rooms were jungles of palms and tropical plants. Flowers were everywhere, while the air tottered and fainted under the burden of their perfume.

Imogene St. Lawrence never looked more beautiful. Hour followed hour into the past. The guest moved from room to room. The preacher notified Benton St. Lawrence to pay or play. And still George Lindsey did not come.

"The sucker has laid down on us, my child," whispered Benton St. Lawrence to the weeping Imogene, "but may my hopes of heaven die if I have not my revenge. No man shall insult the proud house of St. Lawrence and get away with it; not on your cuff buttons."

CHAPTER VIII.

Imogene St. Lawrence's dream was over. The next night George Lindsey stood on the St. Lawrence porch and rang the bell. His eye and his pocket and his stomach were wild and vacant.

"Sic him, Bull!" said Benton St. Lawrence, bitterly. Bull bore several specimens from the quivering frame of George Lindsey, who vanished in the darkness with a hoarse cry.—Washington Post.

A MYSTERY OF HEROISM

A DETAIL OF AN AMERICAN BATTLE.

BY STEPHEN CRANE.

(Copyright, 1895, by Irving Bacheller.)

The dark uniforms of the men were so coated with dust from the incessant wrestling of the two armies that the regiment almost seemed a part of the clay bank which shielded them from the shells. On the top of the hill a battery was arguing in tremendous roars with some other guns and to the eye of the infantry, the artillerymen, the guns, the caissons, the horses, were distinctly outlined upon the blue sky. When a piece was fired a red streak as round as a log flashed low in the heavens, like a monstrous bolt of lightning. The men of the battery wore white duck trousers, which somehow emphasized their legs, and when they ran and crowded in little groups at the bidding of the shouting officers, it was more impressive than usual to the infantry.

Fred Collins, of A Company, was saying: "Thunder, I wisht I had a drink. Ain't there any water round here?" Then somebody yelled: "There goes th' bugler!"

As the eyes of half of the regiment swept in one machine-like movement there was an instant's picture of a horse in a great convulsive leap of a death wound and a rider leaning back with a crooked arm and spread fingers before his face. On the ground was the crimson terror of an exploding shell, with fibres of flame that seemed like lances. A glittering bugle swung clear of the rider's back as fell headlong the horse and the man. In the air was an odor as from a conflagration.

Sometimes, they of the infantry looked down at a fair little meadow which spread at their feet. Its long, green grass was rippling gently in a breeze. Beyond it was the gray form of a house half torn to pieces by shells and by the busy axes of soldiers who had pursued fire-wood. The line of an old fence was now dimly marked by long weeds and by an occasional post. A shell had blown the well-house to fragments. Little lines of gray smoke ribboning upwards from some embers indicated the place where had stood the barn.

From beyond a curtain of green woods there came the sound of some stupendous scuffle as if two animals of the size of islands were fighting. At a distance there were occasional appearances of swift-moving men, horses, batteries, flags, and, with the crashing of infantry volleys were heard, often, wild and frenzied cheers. In the midst of it all, Smith and Ferguson, two privates of A Company, were engaged in a heated discussion, which involved the greatest questions of the national existence.

The battery on the hill presently engaged in a frightful duel. The white legs of the gunners scampered this way and that way and the officers redoubled their shouts. The guns, with their demeanors of stolidity and courage, were typical of something infinitely self-possessed in this clamor of death that swirled around the hill.

One of a "swing" team was suddenly smitten quivering to the ground and his maddened brethren dragged his torn body in their struggle to escape from this turmoil and danger. A young soldier astride one of the leaders swore and fumed in his saddle and furiously jerked at the bridle. An officer screamed out an order so violently that his voice broke and ended the sentence in a falsetto shriek.

The leading company of the infantry regiment was somewhat exposed and the colonel ordered it moved more fully under the shelter of the hill. There was the clank of steel against steel.

A lieutenant of the battery rode down and passed them, holding his right arm carefully in his left hand. And it was as if this arm was not at all a part of him, but belonged to another man. His sober and reflective charger went slowly. The officer's face was grimy and perspiring and his uniform was tousled as if he had been in direct grapple with an enemy. He smiled grimly when the men stared at him. He turned his horse toward the meadow.

Collins, of A Company, said: "I wisht I had a drink. I bet there's water in that there ol' well yonder!"

"Yes; but how you goin' to git it?"

For the little meadow which intervened was now suffering a terrible onslaught of shells. Its green and beautiful calm had vanished utterly. Brown earth was being flung in monstrous handfuls. And there was a massacre of the young blades of grass. They were being torn, burned, obliterated. Some curious fortune of the battle had made this gentle little meadow the object of the red hate of the shells and each one as it exploded seemed like an imprecation in the face of a maiden.

The wounded officer who was riding across this expanse said to himself: "Why, they couldn't shoot any harder if the whole army was massed here!"

A shell struck the gray ruins of the house and as, after the roar, the shattered wall fell in fragments, there was a noise which resembled the flapping of shutters during a wild gale of winter. Indeed the infantry paused in the shelter of the bank, appeared as men standing upon a shore contemplating a madness of the sea. The angel of calamity had under its glance the battery upon the hill. Fewer white-legged men labored about the guns. A shell had smitten one of the pieces and after the flare, the smoke, the dust, the wrath of this blow was gone, it was possible to see white legs stretched horizontally upon the ground. And at that interval to the rear, where it is the business of battery horses to stand with their noses to the fight awaiting the command to drag their guns out of the destruction or into it or wheresoever these incomprehensible humans demanded with whip and spur—in this line of passive and dumb spectators, whose fluttering hearts yet would not let them forget the iron laws of man's control of them—in this rank of brute-soldiers there had been relentless and hideous carnage. From the ruck of bleeding and prostrate horses, the men of the infantry could see one animal raising its stricken body with its fore-legs and turning its nose with mystic and profound eloquence toward the sky.

Some comrades joked Collins about his thirst. "Well, if yeh want a drink so bad, why don't yeh go git it?"

"Well, I will in a minnet if yeh don't shut up."

A lieutenant of artillery floundered his horse straight down the hill with as great concern as if it were level ground. As he galloped past the colonel of the infantry, he threw up his hand in swift salute. "We've got to get out of that," he roared angrily. He was a black-bearded officer, and his eyes, which resembled beads, sparkled like those of an insane man. His jumping horse sped along the column of infantry.

PRECISELY LIKE A STAKE.

The fat major standing carelessly with his sword held horizontally behind him and with his legs far apart, looked after the receding horseman and laughed. "He wants to get back with orders pretty quick or there'll be no battery left," he observed.

The wise young captain of the second company hazarded to the lieutenant colonel that the enemy's infantry would probably soon attack the hill, and the lieutenant colonel snubbed him.

A private in one of the rear companies looked out over the meadow and then turned to a companion and said: "Look there, Jim." It was the wounded officer from the battery, who some time before had started to ride across the meadow, supporting his right arm carefully with his left hand. This man had encountered a shell apparently at a time when no one perceived him and he could now be seen lying face downward with a stirruped foot stretched across the body of his dead horse. A leg of the charger extended slantingly upward precisely as stiff as a stake. Around this motionless pair the shells still howled.

There was a quarrel in A Company. Collins was shaking his fist in the faces of some laughing comrades. "Dern yeh! I ain't afraid t' go. If yeh say much, I will go!"

"Of course, yeh will! You'll run through that there medder, won't yeh?"

Collins said, in a terrible voice: "You see, now!" At this ominous threat his comrades broke into renewed jeers.

Collins gave them a dark scowl and went to find his captain. The latter was conversing with the colonel of the regiment.

"Captain," said Collins, saluting and standing at attention. In those days all trousers bagged at the knees. "Captain, I want t' git permission to go git some water from that there well over yonder!"

The colonel and the captain swung about simultaneously and stared across the meadow. The captain laughed. "You must be pretty thirsty, Collins?"

"Yes, sir; I am."

"Well—ah," said the captain. After a moment, he asked: "Can't you wait?"

"No, sir."

The colonel was watching Collins' face. "Look her, my lad," he said, in a pious sort of a voice. "Look here, my lad." Collins was not a lad. "Don't you think that's taking pretty big risks for a little drink of water?"

"I dunno," said Collins, uncomfortably. Some of the resentment toward his companions, which perhaps had forced him into this affair, was beginning to fade. "I dunno wether 'tis."

The colonel and the captain contemplated him for a time.

"Well," said the captain, finally.

"Well," said the colonel, "if you want to go, why, go."

Collins saluted. "Much obliged t' yeh."

As he moved away the colonel called after him. "Take some of the other boys' canteens with you an' hurry back now."

"Yes, sir. I will."

The colonel and the captain looked at each other then, for it had suddenly occurred that they could not for the life of them tell whether Collins wanted to go or whether he did not.

They turned to regard Collins and as they perceived him surrounded by gesticulating comrades the colonel said: "Well, by thunder! I guess he's going."

A BLAZE OF GLORY.

Note.—Mrs. Katherine O'Leary, owner of the cow that kicked the lamp that fired the barn that set the blaze that burned Chicago, died in that town July 3.

Dead is Mrs. O'Leary,
Dead in Chicago now;
Finished her earthly labors,
Gone to meet her cow:

Cow that is ever famous,
More than heart could desire;
Famous because she started
The Great Chicago Fire:

Fire that swept the city;
City of brick and frame
Went up in a blaze of glory,
That brought unfading fame:

Fame for being the biggest Fire that ever blazed
In any other city,

Amazed that from her ashes
Chicago could arise,
And grow with magic swiftness
To such enormous size:

Size that is simply wondrous;
Distended everywhere,
With the wind which is de facto,
Coagulated air:

Air that is filled with thickness,
That makes the sun as red
As the blood in her slaughter houses
Where the wine of her life is shed:

Shed that her wealth and glory
Might decorate the brow
Of the one and only city
Kicked to fame by a cow:

Cow of Mrs. O'Leary;
A lamp, a kick, and a shed,
A wonderful combination
Numbered now with the dead.

Dead is Mrs O'Leary,
Gone to the by and by;
Go build her a tomb of granite
A hundred stories high!

"BROTHER JONATHAN."

The Name of Jonathan Does Not Seem to be Very Popular Among Us.

The Englishman is John Bull, the Irishman is Pat or Paddy, the Scotchman is Sandy or Sawney, the Welshman is David, the Frenchman is Jean Crapaud or Micaire, the German is Cousin Michael, the Swiss is Colin Tampon, the Jew is Sheeny, and the American is Brother Jonathan. There is a nickname for the people of almost every country on earth.

It is a singular circumstance that, while John is a popular prenomen in England, and Patrick in Ireland, and David in Wales, and Jean in France, and Michael in Germany, the name of Jonathan has never become popular in the United States.

All that is necessary to give any one evidence of this statement is that he shall examine the directory of the city of New York from beginning to end, or shall look through the directories printed in Philadelphia, Boston, New Orleans, Chicago, Brooklyn, Jersey City, San Francisco, or any other American city. He may see Jonathan once in a while, as he turns over the leaves of the book; but he may go through ten or twenty pages without seeing it even once. Patrick is on every page of a Dublin directory, as John is on every page of an English directory; but as for the name of Jonathan, it is seen about as often in an English as in an American directory. It is possible that one reason for the unpopularity of the name with fathers and mothers lies in the fact that Brother Jonathan is always pictured as a very grotesque and unattractive personage, costumed in a ridiculous fashion, and calculated to raise laughter rather than command respect.

John Bull is always pictured as a solid business personage; Brother Jonathan is depicted as a circus clown.

It is a wonder that no American artist has ever drawn a worthy figure of the great and mighty and majestic Brother Jonathan, one that would be characteristic, significant and impressive, without too marked a violation of the traditions that are associated with the name. It cannot be said that the "Uncle Sam" of the picture makers is any better than the Brother Jonathan.

Paid the Expenses.

A good story is told of a well-known Hartford landlord who has been having any amount of trouble during the hard times to collect rents from his tenants. There was a certain man with a large family who had occupied a part of one of his houses in the surburbs for a number of years.

The man was thoroughly honest but down on his luck. The landlord bore the loss of his rent with considerable fortitude until he thought it was some one else's turn to help the fellow a little; then he went to him one day and told him with all seriousness that he intended to give the house a going over; it was out of repair, and he had decided to expend a little money on it and make some important alterations, and, as it would be some expense for the man to move, he generously offered to order a team for him and settle the bill himself.

The matter was arranged with the utmost friendliness on both sides, and the landlord went his way feeling quite a little like the celebrated Pharisee. A week later he asked his agent about some flats that had been empty for a month or two.

"All rented," said the agent, and he named the parties, whereupon the landlord immediately descended on the plane of publicans and sinners. When he had recovered himself sufficiently to talk English, he proceeded to inform the astonished agent that one of his acquisitions was the man who had just moved at his own expense out of the house in the suburbs.

Precaution All Around.

A carpenter, sent to make some repairs in a private house, entered the apartment of the lady of the house with his apprentice.

"Mary," the lady called to her servant, "see that my jewel case is locked at once."

The carpenter understood. He removed his watch and chain from his vest with a significant air and gave them to his apprentice.

"John," he said, "take these right back to the shop. It seems that the house isn't safe!"—Youth's Companion.

ENDLESS CAR TRACKS

WELDING THE ENDS OF RAILS BY ELECTRICITY.

The Contraction and Expansion Caused by Cold and Heat Overcome by Artificial Compression of the Iron. A Description of the Process.

The Detroit Free Press says: Tom L. Johnson's welder began operation on the new Jefferson avenue track just east of Dequindre street at 8:30 o'clock the other evening, and a large crowd of people hovered around until a late hour watching the interesting process of making an endless rail. The machinery is carried on three cars, which, when seen from a little distance looks like a railroad wrecking train.

The first car, weighing eight tons, is the compressing machine by means of which contraction and expansion of the rails are overcome artifically. The patents covering the machine are owned by the Johnson company, and this is the first time the apparatus has been used in the electric welding of rails.

At the end of the car is a hydraulic jack, which is operated by a band and develops a pressure of about 100 tons. After the fish plates, which are temporarily put on the joints in order to hold the rails in position, have been removed the jack is placed over the joint. It is so arranged that one jaw seizes one rail and the other jaw takes hold of the adjoining rail. The pump is started, and the force compresses the rail sufficiently to overcome the contracting effects of cold temperature on iron.

Thus in cold weather the rails have no tendency to contract, and the possibility of a defective weld breaking is thus obviated. When the rails are made the ends are cut with a slight bevel to insure a tight fit on the top and bottom. After the rails have been artificially compressed the ends are forced apart from one-sixteenth to one-quarter of an inch, and a section of rail, fitting the opening, is inserted to prevent the rails from expanding again.

The third car is the welder proper. It weighs 32 tons, and contains a lot of electrical machinery. There are two large motor dynamos, one of which is used to increase the voltage of the current coming from the trolley, which varies on the trolley from 400 volts up to 500 volts. From this dynamo the current passes to the alternator, which changes the direct current of 500 volts to an alternating current of 330 volts, at the same time increasing the current from 300 to 500 amperes. The current then passes to the real welding apparatus, which consists of two transformers in multiple and is filled with copper jaws for applying pressure to the weld after heating the rails.

In these transformers the current is changed from 500 to abone 30,000 amperes. This current is applied to the end of the rails, and heats them in from five to six minutes to a temperature of nearly 2,500 degrees Fahrenheit.

The only thing used in addition to the electric force is powdered borax, applied with a copper spoon, for the purpose of removing any dirt adhering to the rails and aiding fusion. The copper jars of the welder are kept cool by means of water pumped up from a tank underneath the car.

THRIFTY, THOUGH A BEGGAR.

Miss Gillespie Reads Warden Dunphy a Lecture on Economy.

In a batch of men and women received at the Workhouse on Blackwell's Island, was Miss Margaret Gillespie, aged 72, who was committed on a charge of vagrancy. She gave her address as No. 206 West Houston street, N.Y., a house in which she did not reside. When asked for an explanation of the discrepancy she declared that as she stood in front of that house to solicit alms more frequently than anywhere else she considered it her legal domicile.

When she was searched there was found in the folds of her dress a bag containing 20 pounds of pennies and $380 in bills. Warden Dunphy reproved her for begging when she was so well off, and the old woman became highly indignant.

"I am a beggar by profession," she exclaimed, "and I should not think that fact should prevent me from exercising habits of prudence. I have always heard that thrift was a virtue, and I do not see how it can be made a vice simply because it is exercised by a mendicant.

"Beside," she added, "I expect to grow old some day, and I do not want to become a charge on the community. I am surprised at a public official advising my indirection that I spend all my money on strong drink, like other beggars. If I came here without a cent I suppose you would pity me, and not say a word by way of reproof. Simply because I have provided an insurance fund against bad times and old age you denounce me severely.

"I do not think that such sentiments that you express should be held by a man who comes so much in contact with the indigent poor, and whose duty it is recommend them to learn habits of economy. When I get out I shall certainly report you to the Charity Commissioners."

This was a view of the case that had not occurred to Mr. Dunphy before, and he turned hurriedly and occupied himself with the pedigree of the next convict on the list.—N.Y. World.

To Get Evidence in Ireland.

In the Orphans' Court at Elizabeth yesterday the contest over the will of the late Sylvester Cahill, founder of the town of Cranford, was renewed. Judge McCormick appointed Thomas Broggy, of Kilkenny, Ireland, to take testimony there as to the exact age of Mr. Cahill, and also ascertain whether there were any heirs in that part of Ireland. There is a dispute as to Mr. Cahill's age, which at his death was given as eighty. It is claimed by some of the beneficiaries that he was ninety years old.

THE WHEELMEN'S FESTIVAL.

T. A. B. Hall was gay last evening with the festival of the Victor Wheelmen. The colored people of Plainfield turned out in force and the hall was thronged with the wheelmen and their friends. At eleven o'clock the wheelmen's march took place and the wheelmen with their friends paired off and promenaded about the room to the music of Prof. Peterson's string orchestra. There was no dancing and the evening was spent in social chat and enjoying the excellent refreshments which were for sale. The proceeds of the festival are to go for the benefit of the Mt. Zion Methodist church. The officers of the club and the committee in charge were as follows:

President, W. H. Jones; vice-president, Alfred Wilson; secretary, William Fisher; treasurer, Buel Gibson; captain, Israel Jones; committe of arrangements, Mrs. A. Wilson, Mrs. Hooper, Mrs. Marsh, Mrs. Johnson, S. Henry, Mrs. G. Cannon, Mrs. Dunham, John Raid, B. Harvey, Joel Bolden, W. Burton, James Welby, Nathaniel Pollard, Howark Binn, Cyrus Binn, A. Venable, Forest Jones, Tucker Johnson, Wm. Mayhew, Miss Anna Fisher, Miss Commodore, and Miss Mary Mills.

All the officers and the committee wore handsome badges provided for the occasion.

A MIDNIGHT VISIT,

Mrs. Jerry M. Cash's Wash Disappears When Left Out All Night.

Some of the residents of Netherwood have had the rather unpleasant experience of having their wash stolen. Mrs. Jerry M. Cash, of South avenue, who washes for a number of Netherwood people, had her clothes-lines full last Monday, and as they were not dry decided to leave them out all night. But, sorrowful to say, in the morning the lines were empty, for during the night a party of rag-pickers came along with a wagon, and as the exhibition was too tempting, they bundled up $45 worth of the garments, and took their departure as silently as they came. The police, thus far, have been unable to locate the thieves.

A Wonderful Cake.

On the shores of Lake Hopatcong there is a party of Plainfield young men encamped. They are Walter B. Rittenhouse, J. Vincent Rittenhouse, Everett J. Peck and George F. Rose, and have been there for almost two weeks. They are having a splendid time while their letters home are full of wonderful fish stories. Their camp is known as "Camp Plainfield" and that is what Mr. Franklin, of Waynewood place, one of their Plainfield friends, has had put on top of an immense cake that he has just sent them. The letters are made of frosting and the cake itself is delicious but in the centre of it there is a brierwood pipe, all wrapped in parafine paper, ready to be cut into or eaten.

Analyzed the Word.

"What does the demonetization of silver mean?" asked a farmer who had heard of the silver debate. The man in town, to whom the question was put and who never liked to confess ignorance, answered in a puzzled way: "Demonetization!—Demon—that means devil. I can't tell you exactly, but I know it means making the devil with silver somehow."

SEEING EUROPE BY SUNSHINE

A. V. D. HONEYMAN WRITES INTERESTINGLY FROM SWITZERLAND.

England Was "Bonnie," Giving the Touring Americans Much Beauty and Feast for Eyes and Soul.

The request of The Press for some letters from Europe concerning the '95 tour abroad, in which many of your readers are interested, has been unattended to, because time has not permitted. The single traveler among the party who can accomplish everything, from investigating a feudal structure on a mountain top to rummaging galleries of antiquities, and from tripping down the valleys, gathering flowers on the hills, riding a mule to glaziers, and writing until midnight, all in a single day, is Dr. Larrabee, and he is corresponding for other journals. The Plainfield dailies should have pre-empted his pen.

And yet I can report in a few words that on none of my three previous trips abroad has there been anything like the pleasure of this one, measured by the success of seeing Nature under unrivalled skies and in perpetual sunshine. Last year's English coaching party was delighted, because even in bad weather there is no way to see England comparable with a four-in-hand, visiting the wayside towns and inns, and passing through a garden of Hawthorn and flowers and oaks and castles, from, say Oxford to Nottingham. But it then rained. The weather was uncertain and the acme was not reached. This year not a drop of rain fell, nor was there a hot day, while we passed through Oxfordshire, Berkshire, Wiltshire, Hampshire, and the Isle of Wight; and now, in the most wonderful country on earth, we are having the same good fortune. There has been perhaps two hours' rainfall in Switzerland, harming no one, and the sky is as clear as opal and every mountain summit a perpetual poem.

England was "bonnie" and every minute of time there was enjoyed. Whether along the humble highway or in the cathedral we each praised God for permitting so much beauty to enter our eyes and feast our souls. Yet, of course, this free, great, little country, seen in sunny days, is to be compared with none other, and we are richer in thoughts and words today, and every day since we entered Geneva, than we could possibly be where man made the views before us.

I count it one of the rarest and most transcendent glories of existence to view the whole chain of the Alps, which have the Matter horn for their king, on a Sabbath day like this, when there is not a cloud in the sky, nor a tremor of haze in the air. Here it is this moment, still, and as we are about to leave it the eye lingers on at the prospect. It is indescribable. Prof. Tyndall must have felt this when he penned his numerous sketches of this giant stag (as its name implies) in so unimpassioned a way, he knew he could not do it justice.

I write this facing that ragged mass of rock and ice which Prof. Tyndall was so eager to ascend in years gone by and succeeded only at the third attempt. The Riffle step on which I am sittting at lunch with Dr. Larrabee at my side is 7,300 feet above the sea and the Matterhorn over 7000 feet still higher a mile and a quarter, that great peak is so lordly, so unique, in its defiant head and battlemented sides, that I do not wonder there is a craze to ascend it. But many a human life has been lost there, just at the point I am looking at. Only on Tuesday last a party were partially overthrown with an avalanche of small rocks, and one of them is now lying seriously ill from injuries at a house in Zermatt. Yet several of our party regret they cannot wait here long enough to make the ascent.

Hark! there was distant thunder! It was an avalanche. We have heard two, the one sound, long and clear, like the reverberation of cannon.

There are from three to four glaciers of high dimensions in plain sight and the sun glitters each with sheens of silver. It is a glorious day and as our panorama is superb, we hesitate to go down again to the valley, whence by a three hours climb, we have ascended. Zermatt is at our feet, a half-mile lower than we go, and we will walk to it through a profusion of lackspurs and rhododendrons radiant with bloom.

And Zermatt is the quaintest village you ever saw, it is the highest all-the-year round inhabited village in Europe, but our Mrs. Barry says it can only be likened to an oriental town like Damascus, which is over a thousand miles away. How came the resemblance?

Speaking of great scenes, we had one of rarest beaty and enchantment a few days ago, in a view of the Rhone valley in approaching Martigny over the Cal de Trient. We saw a transformation scene which none who witnessed can ever forget.

Here were clouds and a thunder shower, and hardly had the reverbreations among the glaciers and crags of the Aizuelle du Tour Alps ceased when, lo! a mile, almost, below us, and stretching far away was an Eden, with its trees of healing and river Euphrates, on which the sun shone in one mass of glory, and it seemed too heavenly to be a reality.

Every day in fact has opened up to us new delights in nature, since we left the gaieties of Paris, and we cry out even in our sleep: "Switzerland crowns all!"

I did think the Yosemite and some views in Scotland were masterpieces, but I had never been to Switzerland, except in the rain and fog. It must be confessed that these noble Swiss peasants, who for a thousand years have refused to be enslaved, have the most magnificent scenery on the civilized portion of the globe, and if for nothing else they are to be envied for the Jungfraus and the Matterhorns, and for Lakes Lucerne and Thun, and a hundred more peaks, glaciers, lakes and valleys, which are enough in the whole to make every State of our Union forever rich to painters and poets.

We carry the American flag wherever we go; and the white cross on the red field of Switzerland follows. Many an old lady bows her head, and many an aged man doffs his hat, as he sees the Star-Spangled Banner waved in the air, and thinks, perhaps, of their boy in far-off America. The free people of earth all respect our dear old Stars and Stripes.

Our party is a unit in feeling, and the first word of disaffection or disloyalty to one another has yet to be uttered. Each has been in perfect health and in fine spirits. The Plainfield teachers are bronzing and have the best of appetites, and will return home full of healthful zest and rich experiences. Miss Kellogg has done as much as twenty miles of mountain climbing in a single day.

Few American travelers come to Zermatt. It is off the beaten track. Yet the approach to it is through the most wild and picturesque scenery imaginable, and besides its proximity to six or eight Alpine summits and glaciers, it has an admirable hotel for 300 guests.

Tomorrow we go by carriages fifty miles to and past the Rhone Glacier and over the Furka Pass, and next day will stand on the great St. Gothard Pass and look over into Italy.

LIGHTNING HITS OLD MAMMY.

Now She Is Paralyzed, and Old John Will Take Good Care of Her.

An aged colored woman, familiarly known in the hamlet of South Branch as "Mammy Jackson," was maimed for life during the thunder storm over that section last Saturday night. "Mammy," who is more than seventy years old and known the country around for her remarkable vitality, started in the evening, accompanied by her aged husband, John, to walk from the cabin to the village of Neshanic, a distance of six miles.

She left her husband in a saloon and started for home again. She struggled against the storm until she sank exhausted under a tree. Then a streak of lightning cut the tree in two and stretched "Mammy" prone upon the earth.

Old John reached home the next morning. All day he waited for "Mammy," but it was not until Monday morning that his anxiety induced him to make her absence known to the villagers. A searching party found her many miles from home still stretched upon the grround beneath the shattered tree.

Old "Mammy" is now in her cabin and is tenderly cared for by old John. Her arms are burned and paralyzed and she has lost the use of them forever. It is believed she will recover.

Plainfield is soon to lose a young man who promises to rise high in his profession. Oscar Campbell, of Netherwood avenue, leaves in a few days to spend his vacation near Livingston Manor, Sullivan County, New York, and will probably never return to Plainfield except perhaps to visit some of his friends. From there he will leave for West Virginia where he will take a year's course in the University of West Virginia, after which he will practice law in that State. Campbell was a graduate of the High School in '93, and while there one of the prominent members of the High School Lyceum. After graduating, he has been studying law with the prominent New York law firm of Wilcox, Barcley & Brodea, and has already won several cases.

FROM FUNERAL TO JAIL.

With a Constable Young Sheridan Sees His Grandfather Buried.

Lawrence Sheridan was arraigned before Justice Kelly yesterday afternoon, at Summit, charged with forging the name of D. C. Tingley to a mechanic's release for $370. He was arrested late Tuesday night after being releaseed from jail on bail, charged with having sold a bicycle upon which there was an unpaid cancelled mortgage.

Himself and his grandfather were the sole occupants of a house in Huntley, in which they conducted a beer saloon. The grandfather died on Monday night and the nephew attended the funeral yesterday forenoon from St. Rose of Lima's church, in Short Hills, in the custody of Constable McGrath.

Owing to failure of important witnesses and the Prosecutor of the Pleas to appear, Justice Kelly was compelled to adjourn the examination until three o'clock Monday afternoon. The defendant was taken to the county jail until that time by Constable McGrath yesterday afternoon.

His grandfather deeded his property to him two years ago, and recently discovered that his stepson had mortgaged it to the full value and had enlarged the saloon and purchased a costly bar, none of which he paid for, and within the past few days numerous suits were begun, which caused the aged grand father much uneasiness and perhaps hastened his death.

THEY LET HIM LIE HELPLESS.

VanArsdale, With Bones Broken, Beckoned in Vain for Help.

Jacob VanArsdale was driving a team attached to a heavy hay-wagon, on the old coach road near Finderne, Tuesday night, when his horses became frightened by what was apparently a flash of lightning from a clear sky. The horses gave a plunge and VanArsdale was pulled from his seat and fell to the ground.

The horses trampled upon him, and the wheels passed over his body. His ankle and several ribs were broken. He lay by the roadside so badly hurt that he was unable to utter a cry.

Several vehicles passed him, and he waved his hand feebly for help, but the passers thought he was drunk and refused him assistance. He was picked up late at night by Leopold Geissman and taken to Somerville.

French, the miller, a short time since while loooking about in a second-hand furniture store in this city came across and purchased a very fine photograph of the late John Rosell, who a number of years ago kept a livery stable on Park avenue, corner Second street. CAMPOS HEMMED IN Virtually a Prisoner in Bayamo.

Spanish Troops Prevented from Going to His Aid by the Insurgents—Soldiers Dying from Yellow Fever in Great Numbers—Spain's Strength on the Island.

Santiago de Cuba, via Key West, Fla., Aug. 2.—Excitement here about affairs in Bayamo does not diminish. The people are all anxious for news from there. News, however, is very difficult to obtain as the government is cautions, and besides that communication between Manzanilla and Bayamo is almost impossible at present, as the insurgents are very numerous around there and do not allow any one to pass. Of seven messengers that the Spaniards sent from the first mentioned city to the latter, five were caught and hanged by the rebels.

Unable To Leave Bayamo.

Of course it is known that something very serious is going on. Marshal Martinez Campos is unable to leave Bayamo and is morally speaking a prisoner of the insurgents. The government has sent about 10,000 soldiers to Bayamo, having taken troops from here, Santa Cruz, Holguin, Gibara, Cienfuegos and Manzanilla, but it is said that the rebels do not allow them to reach Bayamo. According to news received here the battle with Martinez Campos on his way to Bayamo was a terrible one, the Spaniards receiving a severe whipping, the insurgents taking as prisoners a lieutenant-colonel, a commander, two captains and two lieutenants. The Spaniards entered Bayamo in such haste that they left great numbers of wounded soldiers in the field. They were taken care of by Maceo and his people. Maceo ordering his men to kill chickens to make broth, he himself assisting the giving the broth.

Dying from Yellow Fever.

The sanitary condition of this city grows worse every day and the yellow fever has increased to such an extent that the consuls of Columbia and Venezuela have asked the governor to inform them whether or not the disease can be considered as epidemic, they desiring to communicate to their governments the true situation. The governor consulted the board of health, which body answered affirmatively. The soldiers are dying in great numbers daily in the military hospital.

Spain's Forces on the Island.

The Spanish troops in the island at present are forty-two battalions and fifteen additional companies of infantry; eleven squadrons, one battalion of artillery; one battalion of military engineers, twenty-six companies of infantry and thirteen squadrons of the civil guard, one battalion of military police. Total number of soldiers 52,326. One captain-general, seven generals of division, twelve brigadier generals, twenty-eight colonels, eighty-one lieutenant-colonels, 194 captains, 949 first lieutenants, 295 second lieutenants.

The arrangements for decorating public and private buildings are also proceeding apace. Hotels, homes and business places all over the city will be adorned with flags and bunting. One of the conspicuous features of the conclave will be the advent of the general Grand Chapter of the order of the Eastern Star, which holds its triennial session in Union hall. The Two Coombes Boys Convicted by the Coroner's Jury.

London, Aug. 2.—The finding of the coroner's jury in the case of Robert and Nathaniel Coombes, the two boys who were accused of having murdered their mother, has been officially announced. The jury found a verdict of wilful murder against Robert, the older son, while Nathaniel was held as an accessory before the fact. The jury added a rider to their verdict, urging that the sale of inflammatory and shocking literature should be stopped on the ground that it is answerable for many crimes. Acting on the advice of the coroner the jury ignored the case of Fox, the half-witted man who helped the boys to spend the money obtained by them by pawning the goods taken from the house after the murder of their mother. Foxes case is considered distinct from that of the two youthful criminals.

STORMS IN THE WEST

Loss of Life and Property Increases.

Scenes of Desolation Presented Everywhere—Farm Houses and Crops Swept Away—Bodies Recovered and Identified—Railroads Washed Out in Many Places.

Albuquerque, N. M., Aug. 2.—Another cloudburst has occurred, and the Atlantic & Pacific Railroad company's new brigde at Rio Puerce has been wrecked. Much suffering is reported by Mexicans and small farmers near the water's edge. Their homes are flooded and their fields ruined. Hail accompanied the rain, and the crops on high ground are lying flat as if a roller had passed over them. A train was sent to meet the eastbound train at Rio Puerce, and endeavor will be made to transfer the passengers. The storm was general, and the country is flooded as far south as El Paso and as far west as Williams. Rumors are plentiful regarding loss of life. Railway tracks are in places very dangerous, and much care is exercised by the officials to have weak places closely watched.

Lives and Property Lost.

Socorro, N. M., Aug. 2.—Further details increase the loss of life and property caused by Tuesday's cloudburst and resulting flood in and about the city. At first it was hoped the flood would be confined to the lower part of the city, but soon three feet of water began to rush through the principal streets. The shrieks of women and children mingled with crashing and falling houses. The water came in waves, each succeeding one being apparently higher than the other. Parts of houses, household goods, carriages, stoves, and farm implements, mingled with huge boulders, railroad ties and bridge timbers were borne through the streets by the waters. For two hours the work of destruction continued, the terror being increased by vivid lightning, crashing thunder and blinding rain. Gradually the waters subsided sufficiently to allow a partial inspection of the destruction. Only two bodies were taken from the waters before dark, those of a mother and her child. An attempt was made to reach the people living in the river bottoms, but darkness and the absence of boats prevented success.

Scenes of Desolation.

Yesterday morning a scene of desolation was presented. A majority of the business houses escaped heavy damage or destruction, but hundreds of poor people lost everything. More than fifty houses are known to have been destroyed, while almost every residence in the city is more or less damaged. Since the water has receded many adobe houses have fallen in, and many others must be abandoned. The two bodies recovered Tuesday were identified as members of the Durane family. Four more bodies were taken out yesterday and identified as Duranes. Other bodies are reported as having been seen. Another victim is an infant son of H. Baca, who died after being rescued from drowning.

Heavy Losses.

Reports from north and south of here tell of heavy losses. For 12 miles south the destruction of property was great. Farmhouses and crops were swept away. The Santa Fe track was washed out between here and San Antonio in several places. The branch road from this city to Magdalena is practically destroyed for ten miles out. A large portion of railway track on both sides of the city, running east and west, was torn up. The damage is estimated at more than $1,000,000.

Another Flood in Colorado.

Denver, Aug. 2.—Another terrible rainstorm swept this region last evening and all railroads continue to suffer great losses. Trains will be delayed for twelve hours. The Arkansas river is a raging torrent, and all travel on roads crossing it has been stopped. The Florence and Cripple Creek road has not been able to run trains for several days, and wires are down all along the line. In the city the storm again flooded everything. Cloudbursts at Morrison and Salida threatened much paoperty.

The American branch of the league was organized at Notre Dame, Ind., a year ago, the director general for the United States being the Rev. Bede Maier, O. S. B., of St. Meinrad's Abbey, Indiana. Cardinal Gibbons will be the president of the congress, and the programme committee will consist of Archbishops Elder of Cincinnati and Kane of St. Louis and Bishop Maes of Covington.

Mine Troubles in West Virginia.

Bluefields, W. Va., Aug. 2.—The non-union men are being forced to leave the coal fields by the strikers, who threaten personal violence to those who refuse to quit work. Gov. MacCorkle has reached here, and his hasty return is attributed here to these threats. Serious trouble is expected within the next few days.

YOUNG LADIES' TROUBLE.

FACTS MADE KNOWN TO FRIENDS

Lady Stenographers, Typewriters, and all Working Girls Interested.

[SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.]

This class of women are more or less afflicted with illness brought on by constant application in one position. Therefore all will be interested in the candid expression of this bright young lady of Denver, Col., who writes Mrs. Pinkham as follows:—

"This is the first opportunity I have found to write and thank you for the good your Compound has done me. I feel better than I have for years. It seems a seven days' wonder to my friends. Where I used to be pitied, everything is the opposite, and there is not a day but what some one wants to know what I have done to work such a wonder.

"Before taking the Compound I had constant headaches; was constipated; bloated; eyes weak, with watery whites; bearing down pains; pains in the small of my back and right side; took cold very easily, which always caused intense pain in ovaries. I did not want to go anywhere or see any one.

"I was called cross, but I could not help it, feeling as I did. I could not lift anything or do any hard work without suffering for days afterward. Menstruation lasted from eight to ten days, the first two or three days being in almost constant pain, day and night.

"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has made a new girl of me; am now well, happy, and strong." Yours truly, A STENOGRAPHER, Denver, Col.

EXPLAINED.

Confidence in Their Product Led the Shakers to Make an Unusual Offer.

People of this day and generation are not disposed to give things away. When therefore the Mount Lebanon Shakers recently stated that any one could get a bottle of Digestive Cordial by calling in person at their New York office, it excited a great deal of talk.

One of the leading dailies of the metropolis sent a reporter to find out what was meant. It developed that the preparation in question has proven beneficial in so large a majority of cases that nine-tenths of the people who are sufficiently anxious to call for a sample, find so much relief that they continue the product's use and tell their friends about it. As a result a very large demand has been created.

The Shakers have a long record of success at inventors and their various medicinal products have always enjoyed a high reputation. The Digestive Cordial is not only nourishing in itself but it digests other foods when taken as directed.

Sleepless nights, spots before the eyes and a sense of heaviness after eating, loss of weight and general weakness are among the common symptoms of indigestion which it promptly relieves, and it is gratifying to know that such a positive and harmless remedy as the Digestive Cordial should have at last been devised.

The common idea about consumption is that it is a lung trouble, but this is not all. Why is it the consumptive gets thinner and thinner until he has wasted to a skeleton? Because the food he eats does not nourish him. It is not digested.

The first sign of the appearance of consumption is growing thin, wasting. This is before the cough; before the expectoration. Stop the wasting and recovery will follow in the incipient stages, and the disease will be retarded in advanced cases.

KILLED IN SCOTLAND

Missing Rev. Dana Davenport's Body Found.

Injured by a Train He Dies and Is Buried by the Railroad Company in Scotland—The Young Baltimore, Md., Minister Was Probably Demented.

Washington, Aug. 2.—A letter received at police headquarters yesterday from the superintendent of constabulary at Glasgow, Scotland, contains information which apparently clears up the mysterious disappearance of the Rev. Dana Davenport, a young Episcopal clergyman, the son of Rev. Mr. Davenport of Anacosta, a suburb of Washington. The letter stated that on July 20 a young man was found lying beside the tracks of the Caledonian railway at a town five miles from Glasgow. He was so badly injured that he died on that day. He was able to say, however, that he was Dana Davenport, a medical student of Washington, D. C. The body was interred by the Caledonian railroad officials. A description of the deceased given in the letter tallied with that of the missing young minister, except in that the clothes were not the ones he wore when he left home.

State Department Aids.

The Washington police notified Rev. Mr. Davenport, the young man's father, and, accompanied by two detectives, he went to the state department, where a request was made that the department cable the United States consul at Glasgow to forward the clothing and other effects of the young man to Washington in order that they may be examined. The cable message was sent without delay. Young Davenport's father has little doubt that the man killed near Glasgow was his son. Dana Davenport was evidently demented. He was 23 years old, and had had charge of an Episcopal church at Harrisonville, Baltimore county, Md., 12 miles from Baltimore. He was last seen on July 5, when he left his home at Harrisonville for Baltimore and called upon a friend there. When he left the house that night all traces of him disappeared.

THE CHINESE LOAN.

Russia Will Be Responsible if China Fails.

Washington, Aug. 2.—The terms of issue of Chinese loan have been communicated to the department of state by consul general John Karel at St. Petersburg. The loan is for 400,000,000 francs, or 1,000,000,000 of rubles—$77,200,000. The Chinese government binds itself not to proceed either to the conversion or redemption of the loan for a term of 36 years and not to issue, or permit to be issued, any gold loans guaranteed by the government before January 15, 1896. The loan is guaranteed by the Chinese Maritime customs, and the deposit of the receipts is provided for. In case China should fail to make punctual payments of the interest or principal at the stipulated periods, Russia will assume the responsibility of meeting the obligations according to the agreement, and for that purpose, the Czar issued July 7th, 1895, an imperial ukase relating to the guarantee.

Washington, Aug. 2.—Paul H. Bray, stepson of ex-Consul Waller, has received a letter from Port Louis, Mauritius island, announcing the arrival of Mrs. Waller in that island from Madagascar on June 16. Mrs. Waller and her four children were reported well so far as health is concerned, but they are nearly distracted over the misfortunes that have overtaken ex-Consul Waller. The state department received official notice of Mrs. Waller's arrival at Port Louis, together with a request that the department aid her and her children to reach the United States.

DESPERATE RUSSIAN ROBBERS.

A Force of 200 Cossacks Who Try To Capture Them Defeated.

St. Petersburg, Aug. 2.—Six organized bands of robbers armed with Remington rifles have for a long time harrassed the district of Eriwan, in Transcaucasia. These bands recently united under the command of a notorious leader, Abdul Heyder Khan, and attacked and burned a number of isolated farm-houses. Finally becoming bolder the robbers attacked in broad daylight several villages, which they captured and burned. All the men in the villages and all male occupants of the farmhouses who were unable to escape were put to death, while the women and children were carried off by the bandits. The police were unable to stop these outrages, and a force of 200 Cossacks was sent to punish the robbers. On the night of July 25 the Cossacks encountered the bandits at Nachitschewan. After a sharp fight the bandits, who are now armed with modern magazine rifles, repulsed the Cossacks. Reinforcements to the number of 300 men have been sent to assist the defeated Cossacks, and the troops are now billetted throughout the harried districts.

ANTHRAX IN NEW JERSEY.

Dread Cattle Disease Spreading with Alarming Rapidity.

Trenton, N. J., Aug. 2.—Reports received by the state board of health and dairy commissioner George McGuire from inspectors throughout the state give details of the rapid spread of a disease known as anthrax among the cattle and horses. The disease is most prevalent in Salem and Cumberland counties, in the southern part of the state. Dr. H. G. Powell, president of the board of health of Bridgeton, and a corps of assistants, are going to make a tour from farm to farm with the hope of stamping out the disease. All the healthy cattle, horses and other live stock will be given injections to prevent them from catching the deadly malady.

CRISP AT HIS BIRTHPLACE.

London, Aug. 2.—Charles F. Crisp, speaker of the United States house of representatives, is sightseeing in London. The Bimetallic league has invited Mr. Crisp to a conference and he will be dined previous to his departure for home by the speaker of the house of commons, William C. Gully, and by John Hare, the actor.

MILES OF WHALES.

A School Reaching as Far as the Eye Could See.

Washington, Aug. 2.—Third officer N. H. Gibson of the British steamer Lancastrian, captain G. W. Muir, reports to the naval hydrographic office that at 10 a. m., July 6, while in latitude 44 degrees north, longitude 48 degrees, 46 minutes west the Lancastrian passed through a very large number of whales, extending as far as the eye could reach north and south and eight miles east and west. Mr. Gibson says there must have been many thousands of them, and that this was the fourth time the Lancastrian had passed the school.

Court Decides That She Must Allow Liquors on Her Estate.

London, Aug. 2.—In the chancery court Justice Chitty decided a case against Lady Henry Somerset, who sought to refuse the renewal of a license for the sale of liquor in a hotel situated upon her estate in Reigate. The justice informed the lady that she must not allow her personal opinions to affect her actions in her fiduciary capacity, she merely holding her estate as a tenant for life, and decided that the license should be renewed.

IS HOLMES A MURDERER

It Looks Dark for Him in Toronto Only.

Believed That the Chicago Officials Have Discovered Nothing So Far Except Weak Circumstantial Evidence—Some of His Supposed Victims May Be in Hiding.

Chicago, Aug. 2.—Notwithsanding the confidence maintained by the police at one time in their search for evidence to convict Holmes of murder it is believed by some now that outside of very weak circumstantial evidence nothing has been discovered. There has also been expressed the opinion that possibly Holmes is not a murderer after all, although the disclosures made in Toronto point closely that way. Holmes has confessed to wholesale swindling of insurance companies, and it is barely possible that some of the missing people, now believed by the authorities to have been murdered by Holmes, were conspirators with Holmes in his swindling schemes and are purposely keeping in hiding, and that genuine cadavers procured at medical colleges were palmed off on the insurance companies. Were it not that several of Holmes' supposed victims were children too young to enter partnership in the swindling business, this opinion might hold good.

No Faith in Allen.

Attorney William Capps, of Fort Worth, who is in Chicago representing the heirs of the Williams sisters, left last night for Little Rock. He goes with a letter from States Attorney Kern of Cook county authorizing him to represent Kern in the negotiations concerning Caldwell alias Hatch, alias Allen, now in the Little Rock penitentiary. At best the Chicago authorities do not believe Allen can give information that will develop evidence that will prove murder and they say his statements are contradictory and that the evidence of his having had absolute knowledge of murders committed by Holmes is decidedly weak. Attorney Capps has convinced them, however, that there is proof of the identity of the prisoner as A. E. Allen, alias A. E. Bond, alias Mascot.

Insurance Companies' Position.

It is now clear that the police have been conferring with the life insurance companies. An inadvertent remark from an official at police headquarters was: "You can bet they (meaning the insurance companies) will not admit having paid losses to Holmes or upon any of his alleged victims until they have proof that will convict every conspirator against them." The foregoing remark was called out in a discussion over Holmes' statement that he is worth $200,000, it being believed he collected insurance upon the lives of many persons supposed to be his victims.

Wanted To Hypnotise Quinlan.

A well-known local hypnotist called upon Chief of Police Bananoch and requested that he be permitted to try his art upon Quinlan, the proposition being to secure a confession from Quinlan, while the latter was in the hypnotic state. The chief refused to test the hypnotist's powers.

Doubts Allen's Stories.

Memphis, Tenn., Aug. 2.—Police Captain Hackett, one of the oldest in the country, doubts that Convict Allen knows anything about Holmes, and thinks he is merely working for his own benefit.

WOULD BENEFIT AMERICA.

London Times Opposes an International Bimetallic Agreement.

London, Aug. 2.—A financial article in the Times yesterday, in a discussion of the possible consequences of an international bimetallic agreement, says: "Not France, whose monetary position is secure, but America, would be the first to take advantage should we be foolish enough to enter into such an agreement. America is the only great country which would really gain by the agreement. She would try to dispose of her silver here for gold. But the mere hint that we would enter into an international bimetallic agreement would cause such a scramble for gold that it is very doubtful if any would be left in the Bank of England by the time the agreement was signed."

A Dying Man Pardoned.

Washington, Aug. 2.—Charles V Decker, who has been serving a sentence of eight years for bigamy in the Petersburg penitentiary and the son of wealthy Gloucester parents, has been pardoned by Governor O'Ferrall. Decker is dying of consumption. He married twice in New York and also has two wives in Virginia.

For a New Railroad.

Winsted, Conn., Aug. 2.—The Philadelphia, Reading & New England railroad company has placed a gang of engineers at work making surveys for a new railroad between Tariffville and Springfield, Mass. The company already owns the right of way, having purchased the land during the McLeod reign.

Canadian Customs Frauds.

Ottawa, Ont., Aug. 2.—The customs department has been defrauded out of a large amount of money by a Glasgow clothing firm. This scheme which has been worked for a long time was to ship cloth by parcel post to Ottawa and furnish false invoices which are used for custom entries.

The Courier-News editor says that he has been criticising Republican city officials for un-Republican acts. Really, it was not thought that he would carry jokes into the arguments which he uses to bolster up the ridiculous position he has got himself into.

The Newark Daily Advertiser takes exception to the statement of the Jersey City News that it was Union and not Essex county that was the pioneer in the matter of county road building. The Advertiser quotes Public Roads Commissioner Edward Borrough in his last annual report as follows:

"The first practical operations for improved stone roadways in New Jersey began in Essex county." and "inspired by the example of Essex county * * the adjoining county of Union procured the passage of a general law allowing counties to issue bonds for road purposes" under which was built "a complete system of telford and macadam roads." The State Commissioner also testifies in his report to the fact that Essex county "has built more than 200 miles of fine telford and macadam roads, many of them boulevards."

The Advertiser adds that the Essex road system was constructed under a special law, passed prior to the constitutional amendment of 1875 prohibiting special legislation, while the Union county system was begun under a general law, known as the "Union county law," which was enacted long after the constitutional amendment was adopted.

Marvelous Results.

From a letter written by Rev. J. Gunderman, of Dimondale, Mich., we are permitted to make this extract: "I have no hesitation in recommending Dr. King's New Discovery, as the results were almost marvelous in the case of my wife. While I was pastor of the Baptist Church at Rives Junction she was brought down with pneumonia succeeding la grippe. Terrible paroxysms of coughing would last hours with little interruption and it seemed as if she could not survive them. A friend recommended Dr. King's New Discovery; it was quick in its work and highly satisfactory in results." Trial bottles free at L. W. Randolph's drug store. Regular size 50c and $1.

Getting Into Line.

The Rahway politicians are beginning to bestir themselves, and the indications are that it will be a lively contest between the Kean and Voorhees men for the delegates from Rahway. Just how Editor Rollinson, of the Advocate, seems to be the leader of the Voorhees forces, while Mayor Daly will probably champion the cause of John Kean. County Clerk Howard is rather on the fence at present and is sizing up the situation. Ex-Senator Vail, another popular man in the Republican party, is likewise holding himself in reserve. In a couple of weeks more, however, all the leaders will have definitely ranged themselves on one side or the other. —Newark News.

No Reduction of Fares.

The rumors that the railroad fares between Elizabeth, Newark, New York and intermediate points would be lowered have not been verified yet. Scorns His Own Appointments.

Mayor Lebkuecher, of Newark, has changed his mind about the Board of Health he appointed soon after going into office. He says now that he knew nothing about the men he appointed and had no opportunity of investigation, but it was not long before he found out the true condition of affairs.

"I then spoke to some of the members of the board and told them that under the circumstances I thought they were in honor bound to hand the appointments back to me.

"But they are not that kind of men. They are political tricksters who take no care of the city's health, but look after their own selfish interests. They have a lot of inspectors who are of no use to the city. These men are incompetent, and about all they do is messenger work and drawing salaries."

A Georgia Romance.

The marriage of Stonmore Brooks Townes, a prominent young lawyer, and Miss Fannie Rosa Atkinson is the culmination of a romance. Miss Atkinson was deeded to Mr. Townes when she was one year old and he was two. Their parents were close friends, and the mother of the little girl so loved the little boy that she made a formal gift in writing of her child to him.

The families separated shortly after this. It was not until Townes was 20 that he saw the charming Miss Atkinson. Knowing nothing of the peculiar gift of eighteen years before, he fell in love with the young woman.

He was then a student of Columbia College. After graduation he came to Atlanta. She in the mean time had come here to teach school. When he heard of the deed of gift he declared that he was going to hold her to it, and the mother who had written it ..... present

THE CONEY ISLAND CHUTE.

It Terrifies You the First Time, Then Fascinates.

Coming in at Coney Island on the Sea Beach route the first thing one sees is a lofty platform on the right opening into a long toboggan-slide sort of an affair, which in turn leads to a big, round pool. Down the toboggan slide ripples a shallow stream of water, bubbling into little wavelets and pouring into the pool, which is about eighty yards in diameter.

From time to time a long, dark object appears at the top of the slide. It fills with people. Then it topples on the verge, shunts forward into the stream, while a chorus of shrieks fills the air, flashes down the long slide, strikes the water with a tremendous concussion, bounds, rebounds, bounds again, and when the blinding spray has cleared away appears, to the astounded amasement of the unsophisticated, floating placidly along at the far end of the pool, while in its wake the torn water boils and swirls in a thousand eddies.

That is the great Coney Island chute. It is warranted to reproduce faithfully all the sensations of jumping down a precipice, being carried over Niagara Falls and encountering a water-spout head-on, for the modest sum of ten cents.

The first impression one gets from it is that it is the invention of a misanthrope, managed by murderers for the benefit of persons of suicidal intent. Then, as one sees boatload after boatload of shrieking humanity go whizzing down that awful course and come out alive, one feels a pressing desire to get nearer and see how it is done.

Ten cents admits you to the inclosure, where you can see the whole thing plainly from beginning to end, and hear the band play in a well meant but futile endeavor to drown out the shrieks and yells of the chuters. A sign informs you that for ten cents more you can do it yourself.

Nothing so fascinating as the chute has yet appeared at Coney Island. Beside it the roller coasters are tame. The chute is the first one built in the east. There was one at the World's Fair, and nearly every capital in Europe has one.

The attendance at the Coney Island chute on fine days is from 8,000 to 10,000 and on holidays from 15,000 to 25,000. All day yesterday there were hundreds of spectators crowding the inclosure, beside the thousands that shot the chute.

Electric Bitters.

Electric Bitters is a medicine suited for any season, but perhaps more generally needed in the spring, when the languid exhausted feeling prevails, when the liver is torpid and sluggish and the need of a tonic and alterative is felt. A prompt use of this medicine has often averted long and perhaps fatal bilious fevers. No medicine will act more surely in counteracting and freeing the system from the malarial poison. Headache, indigestion, constipation, dizziness yield to Electric Bitters. Only 50c per bottle at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

Shiloh's Cure, the great cough and croup cough, is in great demand. Pocket size contains 25 doses, only 25c. Children love it. Sold by all druggists.

Karl's Clover Root will purify your blood, clear your complexion, regulate your bowels and make your head clear as a bell; 25c, 50c and $1. Sold by all druggists.

SAVED HIS BOOTS.

About the Only Satisfaction the Old Man Had On the Modern Train.

The old man had just arrived at his son's house from the country.

"Well, father," said the boy, "I hope you came through in the sleeping car, as I told you to, and had a good night's sleep."

The old man smiled a sickly, sarcastic smile.

"Oh, yes," he said, "I had a good sleep; first rate sleep; went to bed early."

"Did you wake up during the night?"

"Only twicet; only went to sleep twicet."

"Say, father," said the young man, "you've got two great bumps on the top of your forehead. What have you been doing?"

"Them's the two times I woke up. Passed another train both times, an' when I heard the big engine whizzin' by, an' the bell ringin' I thought 'twas a fire, an' jumped up slam agin' the ceilin'. It's lucky I was awake one time, though."

"Why, how so?"

"The high an' mighty importer that laughed when I ast to go to my room early in the evenin' was sneakin' off with my boots."

"Why, he was only going to shine them for you."

"Oh, go 'way," said the old man. "I never ast him to shine 'em. Any way, I took 'em to bed with me after that, an' never slep' another wink. Say, Henry, you ain't got an old pair of suspenders, have you?"

"I guess I can find a pair for you—yes."

"Busted mine tryin' to put my pantaloons on lyin' down. Done it though. Got all dressed laying flat—boots, pantaloons, coat, collar and necktie—hull business."

"Why didn't you get out of your berth to put on your collar and coat?"

"Wimmin in the car. Got a handy place where I kin wash up, Henry? There was a well o' water in the car an' I pumped some; but the train was going so fast I couldn't stand at the sink. Say, Henry, what time's dinner ready? I'm so hungry I bin eatin' my whiskers."

"Didn't you get breakfast in the dining car, as I told you to?"

"Oh, yes," said the old man; "oh, yes; but I didn't want to go it too expensive, so I told the feller I'd just take a cup of coffee an' some buckwheat cakes."

"Pretty light breakfast, that's so," said Henry.

"Yes," said the old man, "light breakfast—two pancakes."

"Well, come downstairs and we'll fix up something to eat right away. You mustn't wait for dinner."

"Charged me a dollar," continued the old man. "Feller sat next to me eating grapes and oranges and oysters and stewed chicken and boiled eggs, and I don't know what all. When we got back in the bedroom car I told him I calculated that breakfast he et cost $13. And then he told me breakfast was $1 anyway, whether you et much or little. You'd oughter wrote me about that, Henry."

"Well, father, a man can ride pretty comfortably nowadays, after he gets used to it," said Henry, as he started to lead the old gentleman to the bathroom for a wash.

"Oyes, oyes; a man can ride all right when he knows how," replied the old man, and the smile lasted till he started to wash his face from the faucets over the bathtub.—Rehoboth Sunday Herald.

Origin of Christian Endeavorers.

The first national convention of the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor was held in Portland, Me. (its birthplace), in 1882. The membership then was 481, comprising six societies. At the twelfth convention, held in Cleveland, O., in June, 1894, 28,741 societies, with a membership of 1,724,400, were represented.

Rev. Dr. Francis E. Clark, of the Williston Church, of Portland, Me., was the originator of the society. Being desirious of interesting the young people in church work he invited them to his house and talked to them about it, and their enthusiasm being aroused, he asked them to sign this pledge:

"Trusting in the Lord Jesus Christ for strength, I promise Him that I will strive to do whatever He would like to have me do; that I will pray to Him and read the Bible every day, and that, just so far as I know how, throughout my whole life, I will endeavor to lead a Christian life. As an active member I promise to be true to all my duties, to be present at and to take some part aside from singing in every meeting, unless hindered by some reason which I can conscientiously give to my Lord and master, Jesus Christ. If obliged to be absent from the monthly consecration meeting, I will, if possible, send an excuse for my absence to the society."

The first name subscribed to this pledge was that of W. H. Pennell, who has ever since been prominent in the society. It was not long before every church in Portland had a similar society. A member of Williston Church moved to Lincoln, Neb., and carried the idea there. Another member moved to South Hadley, Mass., and started a society there. And so it spread, not only throughout this country, but to foreign countries, until it has reached every civilized country in the globe, and, in fact, some which are not civilized.

KING GEORGE III.

Ruler of England When Uncle Sam Established Himself.

George III. was king for sixty years. He was 22 years old when he became king and 82 when he died. Many things happened during his reign, but it is impossible for me to tell you all. I can only tell you two or three things that are of the most consequence. One was the war between England and the American colonies. You who have studied American history know that it was caused by the English wanting the Americans to pay taxes without the right of representation. You know also that the English were beaten and America became a great and free nation.

England, during the reign of George III., was also engaged in war with France. The French had a very clever and brave but ambitious man called Napoleon Bonaparte for their leader and ruler. He was called the Emperor of the French. He conquered many countries and wished to conquer England. His great idea was to make the countries of Europe into one large empire, but the English, after many battles, finally conquered Napoleon. Lord Howe won the first victory. Lord Nelson gained three great battles; one in Egypt, another at Copenhagen, and a third at Trafalgar, near Spain. In this last victory he was mortally wounded, but before he died he knew his ships had won the battle. Just before the battle began he sent to every ship these memorable words, "England expects that every man will do his duty."

Many great battles were fought on land and sea, and there were many brave generals and soldiers who won battles for England. There were Abercrombie and Moore, both of whom were killed, but the most successful general was the Duke of Wellington, who ended the long war by a complete victory over the French at Waterloo, Bonaparte being defeated.

Soon afterward George III. died. Before this, however, he had lost both his sight and his reason. His son acted as king for him and was called the Prince Regent, and this period—about eight years—is called the regency. During this reign there was a rebellion in Ireland, which happily ended by the Irish people sending members to the English Parliament, which met then in London.

GOLD OUT OF SEA WATER.

A St. Louis Professor Thinks He Will Be a Monte Christo.

Prof. A. H. Hunicke, of Washington University, St. Louis, claims that sea water contains gold and that he has discovered the process of extracting it. Prof. Hunicke passed last summer on the California coast, where he claims to have made his great discovery. The following interview with the professor appears in the St. Louis Post-Dispatch:

"After a long period I discovered that sea water is possessed inherently of gold properties, and that the maximum amount of gold in the sea is about 4 cents to the ton, the average being 2 to 2 1-2 cents a ton."

"Do you think that proportion worth the working of the water?"

"Do I? Well, I should say so. Your sea water costs you nothing and is illimitable. The charcoal wherewith to work out your wealth costs only $1 for $10,000 worth of gold. So there is no work whatever. You can simply sit beside the sea and wring out money to your heart's content."

"But is not the golden property of sea water characteristic only of the Pacific Ocean, where it washes the hills and mountains of California?"

"No. Gold is in the sea, just as salt is in it. No man can measure the period of its beginning or its development. It is there, and all that man need do is work it out with charcoal."

Patriotism in a Schoolhouse.

State Superintendent W. W. Stetson describes a picturesque incident that he witnessed recently in the Madawaska district. In a neighborhood in the township of Lake the people had assembled at the schoolhouse to celebrate a flag raising. The little building was packed to the doors and all persons in the audience except the State Superintendent and his companion were French Canadians. The priest was there, of course, a Parisian who has come to these people to lead and teach them. Lifting Old Glory in his hands, he addressed the throng in French, exhorting them with Gallic earnestness of gesture and rhetoric.

"This," said he, "is your country, this your flag from now henceforth. Live to be citizens worthy to stand beneath its folds."

Then in his enthusiasm he raised the fabric and kissed the red, the white and the blue. And oh, what a patriotic hurrah shivered out through the little windows of that primitive schoolhouse!—Lewiston Journal.

A Great Grief.

She had rejected him. He rose to his feet. The tears were trickling down his cheeks. Hard-hearted as she was, she could not help pitying him. There was something dreadful in seeing a man cry.

"George," she said, "I hope this rejection——"

"Rejection!" he cried angrily. "Do you think that I am crying because you refused to be my wife? No, but I knelt so long at your feet that my trousers have lost all their creases."

And then another sob shook his frame as he departed from her sight.—Syracuse Post.

Positively No Credit.

"I trust," began the seedy customer, argumentatively.

"I don't," responded the grocer, decisively.

Somehow the conversation languished after that.—Albany Argus.

JUST TWO KINDS OF PEOPLE.

There are two kinds of people on earth today,
Just two kinds of people, no more, I say.

Not the sinner and saint, for 'tis well understood
The good are half bad, and the bad are half good.

Not the rich and the poor, for to count a man's wealth
You must first know the state of his conscience and health.

Not the humble and proud, for in life's little span

Bring each man his laughter and each man his tears.

No; the two kinds of people on earth I mean,
Are the people who lift and the people who lean.

Wherever you go, you will find the world's masses
Are always divided in just these two classes.

And oddly enough you will find, too, I ween,
There is one lifter to twenty who lean.

In which class are you? Are you easing the load
Of overtaxed lifters who toil down the road?

Or are you a leaner, who lets others bear
Your portion of labor and worry and care?

—Ella Wheeler Wilcox, in Harper's Weekly.

Where He Drew the Line.

It was on a ferryboat crossing to Windsor the other afternoon. A young and good looking chap sat beside a young and good looking girl, and they loved and loved.

When the boat reached midstream the girl was struck with a sudden thought and anxiously queried:

"George, if I should happen to fall overboard, what then?"

"I'd chuck you a life preserver," he calmly replied, as he glanced at a row of them overhead.

"But if I didn't catch it?"

"Then I'd chuck you a chair."

"But the chair might not fall within my reach," she persisted.

"Then I would chuck half a dozen over."

"George, I might be sinking, drowning, going down to my death in the cool limpid waters which are hurrying to the lake. If the chairs failed, if the life preservers failed, what then? Would you, George, would you chuck yourself overboard to—to——?"

She was testing him, and her whole future happiness hung upon his answer. He knew it, and yet he stretched out a leg to rest his foot upon an empty chair and placidly replied:

"No, dearest. I am no chucker from Chuckersville. I'd buy the boat and back her up to you!"

And then the river rolled on and on, and the girl sighed and sighed, and a gulf came between them which can never, never be bridged nor pontooned.—Detroit Free Press.

Do Flies Talk.

An ingenious inquirer, armed with a microphone, or sound magnifier, has been listening patiently through long hours to the curious noises made by house flies, and reports his belief that they have a language of their own.

The language does not consist of the buzzing sound we ordinarily hear, which is made by the rapid vibration of their wings in the air, but of a smaller, finer and more widely modulated series of sounds, audible to the human ear only by the aid of the microphone.

Probable this fly conversation is perfectly audible to the fly ears, which, as every schoolboy knows who has tried to move his hand slowly upon them, are very acute. The hope is expressed that, since the heretofore inaudible whispers of flies have been detected and recorded some inventor may construct a microphone which will enable us to make out the language of the microbes, and so surprise them in the horrible secret of their mode of operations.—London Public Opinion.

Found the Missing Word.

A hotel clerk told this story:

Three men from the country came in and registered for lodging, and a few minutes later two of them went out to see the town.

"I will stay here," said the third, "and look at things," and he took a seat near the door.

At 10 o'clock, a half hour later, the man who was left went up to the clerk.

"I want to remain," said he.

"All right, sir," answered the clerk.

The man stood and looked at the clerk and finally went back to his chair near the door.

He sat still another hour and returned to the desk.

"If you please, I'll remain," he said.

"That's all right, sir," was the response. "We hope you'll be with us some time."

The man hesitated and went back to his chair.

It was away after midnight when he went up to the clerk for the third time.

"I think I'll remain, sir," he said.

"We have no objections," answered the man behind the desk.

The guest did not go back to his chair, however, but stood still. Shortly afterward another guest came up and asked the clerk for his key, "and I'll retire——"

"Retire! Retire! That's the word I've been trying to think of for three hours. "For heaven's sake let me retire," interrupted the man who had so desired to remain, and he was at last happy.—Courier-Journal.

Six Thousand Carloads of Melons.

Georgia will have the average crop of watermelons this year—that is, so far as the size of the crop is concerned—while as to quality it is expected that they will be ahead of the average. There are 12,000 acres planted along the lines of one road in Georgia, and all in the southwestern section of the State. The melons average about a car to two acres, which means that Georgia will yield this year about 6,000 cars.—Savannah News.

BY STEPHEN CRANE.

(Copyright, 1895, by Irving Bacheller.)

Second Part.)

Collins appeared as a man dreaming. In the midst of the questions, the advice, the warnings, all the excited talk of his company-mates, he maintained a curious silence.

They were very busy in preparing him for his ordeal. When they inspected him carefully it was somewhat like the examination that grooms give a horse before a race; and they were amazed, staggered by the whole affair. Their astonishment found vent in strange repetitions.

"Are yeh sure a-goin'?" they demanded again and again.

"Certainly I am," cried Collins at last furiously.

He strode sullenly away from them. He was swinging five or six canteens by their cords. It seemed that his cap would not remain firmly on his head, and often he reached and pulled it down over his brow.

There was a general movement in the compact column. The long animal-like thing moved slightly. Its four hundred eyes were turned upon the figure of Collins.

"Well, sir, if that ain't th' derndest thing. I never thought Fred Collins had the blood in him for that kind of business!"

"What's he goin' to do, anyhow?"

"He's goin' to that well there after water."

"We ain't dyin' of thirst, are we? That's foolishness."

"Well, somebody put him up to it an' he's doin' it."

"Say, he must be a desperate cuss."

When Collins faced the meadow and walked away from the regiment he was vaguely conscious that a chasm, the deep valley of all prides, was suddenly between him and his comrades. It was provisional, but the provision was that he return as a victor. He had blindly been led by quaint emotions and laid himself under an obligation to walk squarely up to the face of death.

But he was not sure that he wished to make a retraction even if he could do so without shame. As a matter of truth he was sure of very little. He was mainly surprised.

It seemed to him supernaturally strange that he had allowed his mind to maneuver his body into such a situation. He understood that it might be called dramatically great.

However, he had no full appreciation of anything excepting that he was actually conscious of being dazed. He could feel his dulled mind groping after the form and color of this incident.

Too, he wondered why he did not feel some keen agony of fear cutting his sense like a knife. He wondered at this because human expression had said loudly for centuries that men should feel afraid of certain things and that all men who did not feel this fear were phenomena, heroes.

He was then a hero. He suffered that disappointment which we would all have if we discovered that we were ourselves capable of those deeds which we most admire in history and legend. This, then, was a hero. After all, heroes were not much.

No, it could not be true. He was not a hero. Heroes had no shames in their lives and, as for him, he remembered borrowing $15 from a friend and promising to pay it back the next day, and then avoiding that friend for ten months. When at home his mother had aroused him for the early labor of his life on the farm, it had often been his fashion to be irritable, childish, diabolical, and his mother had died since he had come to the war.

He saw that in this matter of the well, the canteens, the shells, he was an intruder in the land of fine deeds.

He was now about thirty paces from his comrades. The regiment had just turned its many faces toward him.

From the forest of terrific noises there suddenly emerged a little uneven line of men. They fired fiercely and rapidly at distant foliage on which appeared little puffs of white smoke. The spatter of skirmish firing was added to the thunder of the guns on the hill. The little line of men ran forward. A color-sergeant fell flat with his flag as if he had slipped on ice. There was hoarse cheering from this distant field.

Collins suddenly felt that two demon fingers were pressed into his ears. He could see nothing but flying arrows, flaming red. He lurched from the shock of this explosion, but he made a mad rush for the house, which he viewed as a man submerged to the neck in a broiling surf might view the shore. In the air, little pieces of shell howled and the earthquake explosions drove him insane with the menace of their roar. As he ran the canteens knocked together with a rhythmical tinkling.

As he neared the house, each detail of the scene became vivid to him. He was aware of some bricks of the vanished chimney lying on the sod. There was a door which hung by one hinge.

Rifle bullets called forth by the insistent skirmishers came from the far-off bank of foliage. They mingled with the shells and the pieces of shells until the air was torn in all directions by hootings, yells, howls. The sky was full of fiends who directed all their wild rage at his head.

When he came to the well, he flung himself face downward and peered into its darkness. There were furtive silver glintings some feet from the surface. He grabbed one of the canteens and, unfastening its cap, swung it down by the cord. The water flowed slowly in with an indolent gurgle.

And now as he lay with his face turned away he was suddenly smitten with the terror. It came upon his heart like the grasp of claws. All the power faded from his muscles. For an instant he was no more than a dead man.

The canteen filled with a maddening slowness in the manner of all bottles. Presently he recovered his strength and addressed a screaming oath to it. He leaned over until it seemed as if he intended to try to push water into it with his hands. His eyes as he gazed down into the well shone like two pieces of metal and in their expression was a great appeal and a great curse. The stupid water derided him.

There was the blaring thunder of a shell. Crimson light shone through the swift-boiling smoke and made a pink reflection on part of the wall of the well. Collins jerked out his arm and canteen with the same motion that a man would use in withdrawing his head from a furnace.

He scrambled erect and glared and hesitated. On the ground near him lay the old well bucket, with a length of rusty chain. He lowered it swiftly into the well. The bucket struck the water and then turning lazily over, sank. When, with hand reaching tremblingly over hand, he hauled it out, it knocked often against the walls of the well and spilled some of its contents.

In running with a filled bucket, a man can adopt but one kind of gait. So through this terrible field over which screamed practical angels of death Collins ran in the manner of a farmer chased out of a dairy by a bull.

His face went staring white with anticipation—anticipation of a blow that would whirl him around and down. He would fall as he had seen other men fall, the life knocked out of them so suddenly that their knees were no more quick to touch the ground than their heads. He saw the long blue line of the regiment, but his comrades were standing looking at him from the edge of an impossible star. He was aware of some deep wheel ruts and hoof-prints in the sod beneath his feet.

The artillery officer who had fallen in this meadow had been making groans in the teeth of the tempest of sound. These futile cries, wrenched from him by his agony, were heard only by shells, bullets. When wild-eyed Collins came running, this officer raised himself. His face contorted and blanched from pain, he was about to utter some great beseeching cry. But suddenly his face straightened and he called: "Say, young man, give me a drink of water, will you?"

Collins had no room amid his emotions for surprise. He was mad from the threats of destruction.

"I can't," he screamed, and in this reply was a full description of his quaking apprehension. His cap was gone and his hair was riotous. His clothes made it appear that he had been dragged over the ground by the heels. He ran on.

The officer's head sank down and one elbow crooked. His foot in its brass-bound stirrup still stretched over the body of his horse and the other leg was under the steed.

But Collins turned. He came dashing back. His face had now turned gray and in his eyes was all terror. "Here it is! Here it is!"

The officer was as a man gone in drink. His arm bended like a twig. His head drooped as if his neck was of willow. He was sinking to the ground, to lie face downward.

Collins grabbed him by the shoulder. "Here it is. Here's your drink. Turn over! Turn over, man, for God's sake!"

With Collins hauling at his shoulder, the officer twisted his body and fell with his face turned toward that region where lived the unpeasable noises of the swirling missiles. There was the faintest shadow of a smile on his lips as he looked at Collins. He gave a sigh, a little primitive breath like that from a child.

Collins tried to hold the bucket steadily, but his shaking hands caused the water to splash all over the face of the dying man. Then he jerked it away and ran on.

The regiment gave him a welcoming roar. The grimed faces were wrinkled in laughter.

His captain waved the bucket away. "Give it to the men!"

The two genial, sky-larking young lieutenants were the first to gain possession of it. They played over it in their fashion.

When one tried to drink the other teasingly knocked his elbow. "Don't, Billie! You'll make me spill it," said the one. The other laughed.

Suddenly there was an oath, the thud of wood on the ground, and a swift murmur of astonishment from the ranks. The two lieutenants glared at each other. The bucket lay on the ground empty.

ODD USES FOR PAPER.

Horseshoes and Coffins Are Now Manufactured from Wood Pulp.

We have had the golden age and the iron age and various other ages, but the present will probably be known as the wooden or paper age.

Paper dress material masquerading as silk is the lasest invention in the paper line and threatens to drive the silk worm out of business. Spruce saw dust cotton or jute waste and alcohol are put into the machine and come out at the other end shining, delicately colored, rustling silks, suitable for the most fastidious lady's gown. Of course this paper silk does not wear so well as the real fabric, but think how much cheaper it will be!

Enthusiastic paper manufacturers say the new woman and the new man will dine off paper dishes. It is not improbable that the hat of the future will be an indestructible paper affair, impervious to fire or water. Over in Paris an enterprising milliner will be able to show you stylish bonnets and hats made entirely of paper, frame, trimming, ornaments and all. Parasols of paper do not seem to have been thought of yet, but satchels and trunks of paper are common enough. The paper trunk, despite its frail sound, is the despair of the baggage smasher. It refuses to smash.

So do paper car wheels. They have been in use for years on some of the most important railroads in this country. It must not be supposed that they are made entirely of paper. This material only forms the interior shell. Having been subjected to terrific pressure, it is moulded and bolted firmly to the outer rim, which is of steel. Greater durability and lightness are claimed for these wheels, but don't let the idea of lightness lead you to get under one. If you do you may possibly have use for one of the paper coffins which are being turned out at wholesale by a firm at Westfield, Mass.

The railroad train of the future is likely not only to have paper wheels, but to run on paper rails. These are made entirely of paper and are formed in moulds under great pressure. They have been used to some extent in Russia and Germany, and are said to be free from many of the defects of the ordinary steel rails.

Paper horseshoes are another European invention. Among the advantages claimed for them is that they maintain a rough surface, enabling the horse to get a good grip on the smooth pavement. German paper makers have put on the market a substance called "papier sculptor," which is used instead of clay for modelling. It is simply paper pulp kept soft enough to be worked.

Papier mache ceilings and wall decorations are very fashionable. They may look like leather or brocade or a thousand and one handsome embossed effects, but they are wood pulp just the same.

The housefurnishing departments in the big shops furnish interesting evidence of the extent to which paper enters into ordinary life. Paper pails and tubs are appreciated by the surburban dweller who hasn't "set" tubs. They are much lighter and easier to keep clean as well as cheaper than the old style. Water coolers are made of paper. So is the much abused cuspidor.

Peach baskets, berry baskets and butter boxes are made of paper and almost everything under the sun—salt, which used to come in pretty blue and white bags, oatmeal, crackers, ice cream, candy, shoes, corsets, dresses—is sent home in a paper box.

In Japan, they say, some folks live in paper houses, and in the country paper boats are in use. Nor must the necessary sewer pipe be forgotten. Paper pipes for carrying water, steam or electricity are not uncommon. As conduits for electricity they are considered cape, even though the wire are be not insulated.

Chicago's Plain Smiths Distanced.

The Smiths are hopelessly beaten in the race for numerical superiority in Chicago unless the average paterfamilias of that name can boast that he is the father of seven children. The Johnsons came to the front two years ago, and this year they have shown the Joneses, Browns and all the rest a few things about the human multiplication table.

Sixteen pages in the new city directory have been preempted by the Johnsons, who muster about 3,663 names. At the average rate of five to a family, the Johnsons will number 18,320. The Smiths can fill only thirteen pages with a total of 2,997.

One explanation given for the distancing of the Smiths is that they have become tired of being "the greatest family" and donned disguises. The number of Smyths and Smythes has increased at an abnormal rate. The hyphen has done much to the same end, and the directory is teeming with Lloyd-Smiths, Jones-Smiths and Jenkins-Smiths.—Chicago Record.

She Had Him.

Mrs. Newed—How are the biscuits, George?

Newed—A trifle heavy, dearest.

Mrs. N.—And the soup?

N.—Too much seasoning in it.

Mrs. N.—And the duck?

N.—Done a little too much.

Mrs. N.—I'm so sorry, dear, that your dinner does not suit you. Your mother prepared it.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Entirely Too Fresh.

Mr. Stoffleigh—I don't see why you people should be making such a fuss over the new woman. You don't hear us talking about the need of a new man.

Miss Fin de Siecle—No. As a rule men are new enough.—Judge.

Politics and Statecraft.

The difference between a statesman and a mere politician, my son, consists in the fact that whereas the statesman understands the art of deceiving without lying, the politician lies without deceiving.—Boston Transcript.

PATENTS BY WOMEN.

Fifty-two Hundred Are Registered in Uncle Sam's Office.

Up to the present date 5,200 patents have been registered in the United States Patent Office by women.

Many of these are as curious as ingenious. An Ohio matron devised a combination washing machine and seesaw, it containing a rotary clothes holder, which is revolved by the action of the seesaw. The merit of the invention is supposed to lie in the fact that a washerwoman can save her own energy and at the same time afford pleasure and recreation to the children of the neighborhood by inviting them to "teeter" the machine, inside which the linen to be washed and a proper complement of soap and water has been placed.

A fair Philadelphian, in protest against the unbecomingness of the ordinary life preserver, has designed a shapely life-preserving corset, to be worn by either men or women, when a boating accident is anticipated. One woman wanted a patent on a crimping pin, which could be used also as a paper-cutter, skirt-supporter, letter-file, child's pin, bouquet holder, shawl-fastener and bookmark. Another woman took out a patent for a skipping-rope, the handle of which contained a music-box. As soon as the child began to skip the music started.

A Pennsylvania maiden tried to convince the public that, as a rule, human bodies were not kept at the proper temperature in the interval between death and burial, and to emphasize her ideas she took out a patent for a corpse cooler. One of the most novel patents ever issued was secured by a Boston woman on a device for restoring facial symmetry. The idea embodied in the patent was that if a gentle, continuous, outward pressure was maintained on the cheeks from within the mouth, the full and plump effect of the youthful face would in the course of time be restored. To effect this two discs, mounted on prongs, were made to press on the inside of the cheeks by means of a spring attached to the teeth.

The gem of the collection, however, is a request for a patent on "artificial dimples." A small spot is to be smeared on the cheek or chin with colorless shellac varnish, mixed with glue, and the center of the spot is to be pressed firmly with a pencil point until the substance on the face becomes dry and hard. "The stiffened indentation thus remains the exact shape of a dimple, and a little face powder dusted carefully over it will completely conceal the varnish glue compound."

The person who adopts this wily device is warned not to "smile too suddenly, or the dimple may be broken, although with gentle usage it will last a whole evening, if not longer." The specification concludes with an important reservation: "While the dimple process is applicable to those whose faces comprise a soft, velvety or plump surface, as then a very deceptive dimple can be produced, it is not so available for thin or bony faces, nor where the skin is very thick and unyielding."—Pittsburg Dispatch.

THE SUBTERFUGE DIDN'T WORK.

She Had no Use for Men With Convictions.

I stopped my horse at the top of the hill just as a man came out of the woods with a gun on his shoulder. I asked him about dinner, and he said he lived half a mile up the road and thought I could get a bite. As we went along in company, he observed:

"Stranger, my ole woman is a leetle pecooliar 'bout sartin things, and I reckon I orter tell you in advance."

"Well!"

"Reckon yo' was in the late wah?"

"Yes."

"On the Yankee side?"

"Yes."

"Wall, I don't care shucks which side yo' fout on, but the ole woman is different, yo' see. She'll ask yo' the very fust thing which it was. If you say Confed yo'll git a squar' meal; if yo' say Yank she'll run yo' outer the cabin.

"I'll tell you how to bamboozle her. Yo' jest say yo' fout to uphold yo'r convictions. That'll mix her all up, and she won't say no mo' fur fear of giving herself away."

As I was pretty hungry I agreed to follow his advice. The woman stood in the door as we came up, and after the husband remarked that I wanted a bite to eat she looked me over and queried:

"Stranger, was yo' in the late wah?"

"Yes'm."

"On this side er t'other?"

"Madam, I fought to uphold the strength of my convictions," I replied, as I got a sly wink from the man.

"Oh! yo' did, eh!" she said, after puzzling over it for half a minute. "Wall, ye can ride on! There is plenty of sassafras for yo' if yo' ain't too lazy to dig it! I like a Confed, and I kin manage to put up with a Yank for half an hour, but when it comes down to a feller who was upholdin' his convictions I ain't got no use fur him.

"It was jest that sort of a feller who gobble'd up three of dad's mules and driv off five of his hogs, and drat me if you don't look a heap like him in the face!"—Detroit Free Press.

Took it Literally.

Mother—Where did you get that sixpence, Fritz?

Fritz—You gave it to me yesterday for the heathen, you know.

Mother—But why did you not give it to the teacher?

Fritz—Because teacher said I was a regular heathen.—Die Ostschweiz.

At The Seaside.

"Are there many men here?" asked the newcomer.

"No," replied the girl who had been there a week, as she tightened her belt, "not enough to go around."—Truth.

Mrs. Norris—I wonder why they print the marriages over the death notices?

Mr. Norris—Probably to show that not all the fools are dead yet.—Puck.

THE DAILY PRESS

ESTABLISHED MAY 10, 1887. PLAINFIELD, N. J., SATURDAY, AUGUST 3, 1895. TWO CENTS A COPY—$5 A YEAR

A CAMPAIGN OF ABUSE.

Why the Mayor and the Council Are Attacked.

DISGRUNTLED ONES WANT TO RULE.

The Courier-News Editor Is Doing His Best to Prejudice People Against the Present City Administration, in Order that the Clique of Which He Is the Mouthpiece May Run the City to Suit Themselves—Last Year They Wanted to Use the Democratic Party as a Tail to Their Kite, But They Couldn't Tie the Knot and So It Did Not Fly—Will They Succeed This Year.

Midsummer madness is a peculiar disease and effects people in peculiar ways. In Plainfield the trend is in the direction of politics, and to the stranger or uninformed who reads The Courier-News the political gridiron seems to be redhot. Week in and week out for a long time this sheet has been bitterly assailing the present city administration—sometimes by inuendo, sometimes by sarcasm, sometimes by ignorance—quite often in this way—but always without any real or justifiable cause. The animus of the attacks, which have ranged from sly intimation and wrong constructions of public acts of officials to bold utterances that almost reek with libel and slander, have all along been known to those who keep in the drift of municipal affairs.

It was a quaint and trite old saying of the martyred President that "you can fool all of the people part of the time and part of the people all the time, but you can't fool all of the people all the time."

The causes leading up to the bitter attacks of the Courier-News upon the official transactions of the Mayor and Common Council, date back to what has been termed the school board fight, in which the officials of the city scored a victory. As will be remembered, that contest between the Board of Education and the Mayor and Common Council was waged with much bitterness, and a very natural result was that a political and factional enmity developed in Republican ranks.

On the part of those who wanted a new school building, war was declared and it was resolved to defeat for public office all those who supported the Mayor's policy.

It is well known among those who were acquainted with the inside of that fight that as soon as a victory was gained for the policy of the Mayor, a number of his disgruntled opponents held frequent conclaves and mapped out a line of antagonism which they calculated would retire Mr. Gilbert from the Mayor's chair.

It was to wait until the Rupublican and Democratic conventions had placed their nominees in the field, it being a foregone conclusion that Mayor Gilbert would be renominated. Then they intended to spring a citizens movement and nominate an independent ticket, which, while it would not be elected, would result in a scattering of Republican votes and the election of a Democratic Mayor. They cared but little about their own party at that time, and knew that by this method they might eventually succeed. At any rate the malcontents figured that they would retaliate to the degree of tying the hands, so to speak, of the Councilmen who supported the Mayor in the fight which left The Courier-News editor and his friends outside the breastworks.

The plans were cut and dried and were working along so nicely that the projectors were laughing up their sleeves. About this time the Democratic party decided not to place a candidate in the field, believing that the Mayor and Council were working for the interests of the city and not for the Republican party. The proposed citizens movement manipulators calculated to fly their kite with the Democratic party as a tail, but when that important feature did not make connections the kite fell into the political mausoleum with a dull thud that was sickening. The corpse has been lying quietly there ever since, but it has, nevertheless, been nourished by the faithful few so that it has not kicked the bucket entirely. The nourishment prescribed has been administered in doses of various sizes by The Courier-News editor who was deputized to took after the frail thing.

It was decided to nurture the citizens movement through the year by a systematic campaign of abuse. The principal line of attack for a long time was against the police force in which it was sought to bring discredit upon the city, and to pander to the class who think that is a great thing to roast some one all the time and to have what is termed "a mind of your own." But, of course, this class never thought of the string that made jack jump, or the story of "thumbs up" and how quick thumbs went up.

This line of attack was followed up all through the winter and spring, with sundry threats of other kinds, until the negotiations for a proposed bond issue were brought before the Council.

Here is where The Courier-News editor was to make the great jump of his life. He started off with a hop and a step that made some people believe he knew a thing or two. He jumped. But where did he jump? He wanted to know why money could not be procured from the Plainfield banks? He was told the reason. Then he said money could be borrowed for one and a-half per cent. in New York. He was shown that this was only his ignorance. Then he claimed that the bonds should bring a premium. Here it was explained to him that the city had no bonds on which premiums could be secured.

All of these things were sufficient to prove to most people that The Courier-News editor did not know what he was talking about. Turning from one argument to another he finally drifted into charges and intimations concerning the loan of money and commenced to talk about "club car" government. This would have been laughable if he were not hurting the credit of the city, as a stranger, reading his perorations, would think that Plainfield was governed by a Tweed or McKane, who were in power to enrich themselves by public plunder. It is plainly apparent that the intention is to spring the citizens movement again this winter in order to tie the hands of Mayor Gilbert, by electing an antagonistic council, and thus strip him of any influence he might exercise in the management of city affairs. But whether or not their plans will be consummated depends, as it did one year ago, on the stand the Democrats take in the fall.

And The Courier-News is and will continue to do its best to bring the citizens movement into active existence by endeavoring to prejudice those whoare not thoroughly conversant with city affairs against Mayor Gilbert and the councilmen who it is desired to relegate to the rear.

The why and whereof of the anxiety of the people for whom The Courier-News editor is critic under the garb of reform and better government will gradually make themselves public.

Better Indexing Wanted.

The Board of Freeholders met at Elizabeth Thursday and received a communication, signed by most of the members of the bar and the real estate men in the county, stating that the system of indexing the records in the County Clerk's office is inadequate. It was adopted when the county was small in population, and does not meet the necessities due to the great growth and the increasing business. Searchers experience great inconvenience and delays, and it was asked that a new indexing system, to meet present requirements, be devised.

The petition was received on motion of Freeholder Clark, and later, on the resolution of Freeholder Littell, it was referred to a special committee of three to report a plan and cost for the changes asked.

'Twas Only a Man.

To have seen Front street yesterday afternoon at about four o'clock one would have thought that there was a runaway or a tragedy of some sort going on. The people crowded to the curb and the clerks rushed out of the stores.

The innocent cause of all this excitement was a colored man. He wore one of those silver high hats, an eye-glass in one eye, a magnificent cane, and a cutaway coat with a tail that almost reached the ground. It was of a light colored checked material, but the tails were simply superb.

He Lost His Drink.

Randolph's soda has always been far-famed and today a horse attached to a buggy that was standing in front of U. B. Crane's hat store thought he wanted some too. He left his position at the curb and started down the street on a trot. A young boy who was left in charge of the animal, started in pursuit but before he could reach it a woman, who was passing by, coolly walked out to the middle of the street and held the horse until the lad caught up.

Over the Mountains.

A delightful ride over the mountains to Lamington and return formed a pleasing day's outing for a number of Plainfield young people on Thursday. It consisted of Miss Gussie Stelle, of Bound Brook, Miss May Thompson, Miss Essie Thompson, Miss Stella Shotwell, Harry Thompson and Aaron Thompson.

A GROWTH OF POWER.

Christian Endeavorors Hold a Big Boston Rally.

HELPFUL AND INTERESTING TALKS.

Echoes From the Convention that Showed Its Great Work—The Endeavor Society Helps the Young as Well as the Old—Who Made the Addresses, and the Points Brought Out By the Observers of Christian Unity.

Christian Endeavor is a synonym for a bright, earnest worker, and the recent convention of the Christian Endeavorers in Boston showed that they have lost none of their brightness or earnestness. The Boston rally held in the Trinity Reformed church last evening was one of the numerous echoes of that great gathering which are spreading the inspiration and enthusiasm gained there over all this broad land.

A song service began the meeting, in which a chorus of about twenty-five female voices led in some of the hymns of the convention while a grand harmony pealed out from the organ under the skilful touch of A. L. Titsworth. Scripture reading and a prayer by Rev. J. A. Davis followed.

President F. E. Smith, of the Trinity Reformed Christian Endeavor society, presided and, after another hymn, made a few introductory remarks which he ended by introducing John E. Lindsay, delegate from the Christion Endeavor society of the First Presbyterian church of this city, who spoke on "The arrangements and reception by the committee of thirteen." First he told of the preliminary preparations and then of the wonderful decorations, the arches in particular, the like of which had not been seen in Boston for many a day. He then told of the reception of the 56,435 delegates, how they were met and escorted about and closed by telling of the reception of the New Jersey delegation.

"Advance of Christian Endeavor as shown by the convention" was the subject of the next speaker, Rev. J. A. Davis, of Nyack, N. Y. He said in part: "The Christian Endeavor society reaches all around the world, and has its branches in nearly every country. Fourteen years ago there were but a handful of Endeavorers in Maine, but it soon spread and is now spreading everywhere through every country on this globe. Its advance is not simply growth in size but growth in power. It takes hold of everything bad and makes it good, there is nothing too large for it to handle. It has entered politics, but not into partisanship, and already it has done much, as for example the recent reforms in New York and Syracuse in which many of the leading men were Christian Endeavorers. Can you realize what we can do with our 2,500,000 members, what a vast power we wield? It has its work in the missionary field. It keeps us alive and active in the Lord's work. The Christian Endeavor movement is doing something more, the Junior movement is growing very rapidly, it is taking the children of the church and preparing them for the future. Woman is also brought forward, and is fast learning to do her share of the work in the church and elsewhere."

Mrs. Bolland, of the South Bound Brook Dutch Reformed Church, spoke on "The Junior Rally," and told how she and some of her friends waited three hours to attend one of the most interesting meetings of the convention. Forty-four States were represented on the platform, while a Junior orchestra of thirty pieces furnished the music. Walter Campbell, a lad of thirteen, delivered the opening address which was followed by many interesting speakers, and the meeting closed with "Blest be the tie that binds."

The next address was by the Rev. A. I. Martine on "Fellowship as shown and taught by the Convention." He said in part: "I can remember the day when there was no affiliation between the sects, but at the convention there was the spirit of brotherly love which appeared very prominently. I roomed with a Congregational minister, for there was none of the sectarian differences. You scarcely reached Boston before you realized that spirit. It was the spirit of the the convention, loyalty to your church, but above all to Christ; when they came together there was one banner above them all. There was an advance in the Boston Convention over all them and that was its oneness of purpose." At the conclusion of his address, the congregation joined in singing one verse of the hymn "Blest be the tie that binds." That great Christian Endeavor song "Scatter Sunshine" was sung by the choir with all uniting in the chorus.

"Convention Aftermath" by Rev. B. V. D. Wyckoff was the next talk. He told of the wonderous blessing that Boston and the commonwealth of Massachusettes had received from the convention and said, "If ever a city gave royally, it was Boston." He told of his own welcome and how a cabman offered to take him to his hotel for nothing, and the reverend gentleman further said, "I was afraid of him, for I have seen cabmen in New York, but at last I went and he carried me safely, and when he left he told me he was a Christian Endeavorer, gave me his card and invited me to call at his place of business." They took the signs 'Keep off the grass' and changed them to 'Keep on the grass,' and these echo meetings are being duplicated all over the United States, and the echoes of the convention will not die out until some of us meet again in Washington. The people are waking up and asking questions about us."

Rev. L. B. Goodrich, of Bound Brook, spoke next on "Did the Boston Convention Pay?" and gave a very eloquent address. He said in part:

Boston has been the scene of many gatherings but it has never witnessed such an assemblage with such an influence and such infinite possibilities. Could not the million of dollars spent be used in a better way? It was an education to travel and to learn about other people and places. It is a good thing to bring people together, and it was a great object lesson to see a christian governor speaking to a christian assemblage and in touch with them. And it destroys denominational bigotry, while it encourages the worker to greater efforts and inspires us all to new service.

"The Consecration Meeting" was the theme of Rev. T. E. Davis' talk. He told of the last and grandest meeting of the convention and of the profound impression it made upon him.

After the offering and hymn, Rev. Mr. Martine pronounced the benediction and most of those present repaired to the Sunday-school rooms where a reception was held. The reception committee consisted of the Misses Carrie Mehl, Jennie Smith, Hattie Powelson and Mrs. Marshall.

The ushers at the rally were John H. Van Winkle, Jr. James Love, Elmer Garretson, Wiliam Crawford and Frank Woodruff.

A Lively Day In Court.

Justice Newcorn's court was very busy yesterday. In the case of Kline against Dunham, landlord and tenant, judgment was given for the premises and the dispossess warrant issued. Newell against Susan Schaeffer, on contract, returnable August 9th, Clarence L. Murphy counsel for Newell; Welch against Kenney, in tort, returnable on August 9th; Schiff Brothers against George and Wallace Miller, on contract, returnable on August 12th; Jildett Clipping Machine Company against Stelle, on contract, returnable August 12th.

Good Trolley News.

In all probability another petition for the extension of the street railway in this city will be presented at the Common Council meeting Monday night, the last one not having been acted upon within the time limit prescribed by law.

While in Elizabeth yesterday a prominent Plainfielder was told by a man who knows whereof he speaks that the Consolidated Traction Company would be laying rails towards Plainfield by the first of September.

Jolly Midsummer Dancers.

A jolly party of young people went to Bound Brook last night and enjoyed a dance at the Mansion House. Those in the party were: Miss Richardson and Miss Coyne, of Jersey City; the Misses Lottie Messersmith, Alice Jenkins, Jennie Giles, Mary Giles, Mamie Steiner, and Judson Giles, Will Havens, Bert Steiner, Frank Blatz, of Plainfield; Fred Haynes, William Slape, Bert Fletcher, and Charles Mattis, of Dunellen.

Engagements Announced.

The engagement is announced of Miss Henrietta R. Clarkson, of Stelle avenue, to George H. Bellis, formerly of Port Richmond, S. I.

A Fishy Tale.

Captured at Asbury Park.

A turtle, weight 875 pounds, will probably be on exhitition on the day of the Jr. O. U. A. M. excursion August 15th.

A RESPECTED CITIZEN DEAD.

Jacob VanDyke Passed Peacefully Away Yesterday.

It was with saddened hearts that the people of Plainfield learned of the death of Jacob VanDyke which occurred yesterday at the home of his son, John C. VanDyke, on East Front street. For the past year and a half Mr. VanDyke has been a great sufferer and his suffering has increased steadily, but through it all he has been patient and not a complaining word has escaped from his lips. The fact that he was a thorough Christian man and lived a life of holiness gave him sufficient grace and strength to pass peacefully over the dark river. His death was expected, but he passed away sooner than was looked for. In the morning he was as well as usual, and no particular change was noticed in his condition till afternoon, when he began to grow weaker. Up to the last he was conscious, knowing everyone near him, while death came without a struggle.

Everything possible has been done to relieve the severe suffering which he experienced and he was truly thankful for the unceasing tender care that has been given him. His death leaves a vacancy in his home that can never be filled.

Jacob VanDyke was born 78 years ago on a farm about four miles from Somerville, on what is known as the old Morristown road.

He lived home and worked at farming until 1868 when he moved to Plainfield. He erected a house and store on West Fourth street where he conducted a grocery business for many years. He was married to Miss Catherine Mundy, daughter of Lewis Mundy, of Millington, and they lived happily together for several years till her death.

While living near Somerville Mr. VanDyke was a faithful member of the Bedminster Reformed church and served the society as deacon for a long time. After he retired from the grocery business he lived a retired life with his children. For the past six months he has been living with his son John on East Front street, where bad health and feebleness kept him at home. His condition required constant attendance, which he received, and the last part of his life was made more comfortable thereby.

He leaves three sons, John C. VanDyke and Lewis VanDyke, of Plainfield, and James VanDyke, of Morristown.

The funeral services will be held from the Bedminster Reformed church tomorrow morning at 10:30, and interment will be made at that place.

AIDING A WORTHY CAUSE.

Endeavor Societies Assist in the Fresh Air Work at Westfield.

The Fresh Air work at Westfield was the subject of a missionary meeting held by the Christian Endeavor society of the Park avenue Baptist church, last evening. The meeting was led by Miss Emma V. Fish, chairman of the Missionary Committee. Special singing was provided by a quartette composed of Miss Laura Runyon, Miss Adelia Runyon, Wm. Stimpson and David Runyon. Mrs. Baker, of Westfield, made a very interesting address on the work. A collection of $8 was taken up for the benefit of it and will be used to furnish the food for them on Tuesday when the society will hold a meeting there. On Wednesday the Christian Endeavor society of the Congregational church will take charge of the meetings and supply the provisions.

Dr. Riggs' Last Sermon in Trinity.

The engagement of Rev. Dr. Riggs, who has so acceptably occupied Trinity Reformed church pulpit, as supply for Rev. Mr. Schenck, during the past six weeks, terminates with tomorrow evening's service. Dr. Briggs has prepared two sermons for the occasion, per request, one of them being on "Faith and Prayer." As this will be his last day in Plainfield for the summer, a large attendance is hoped for.

Coming Events.

Coming events cast their shadows before—the least blur on the sight is the shadow of trouble that may eventuate in total blindness. To neglect care of the eyes is to imperil your happiness and health. Do not wait then the development of any symptom of failing sight, but avail yourself at once of the opportunity for a free examination of the eyes at Colliers 103 Park avenue.

His Cares Were Pugilistic.

William Roantree, of North Plainfield, threw off all care and responsibility last night and sought pleasure in the flowing bowl, after which he wanted to beat his wife. She made a cemplaint to Chief VanHorn who arrested him. This morning Justice Crosley fined him $4 which he paid.

READY FOR ADOPTION.

Watchung Avenue Extension Ordinance Lacks Final Passage.

BOROUGH STREETS TO BE IMPROVED

Regular Council Meeting Transact Considerable Important Business, and Incidentally the Spectators are Entertained by a Cat Show Not Down on the Calendar — Adjourned to August 16th.

The visitors gallery in the North Plainfield Council rooms was filled with an expectant crowd of borough citizens at last night's regular meeting, but nothing unusual happened except that Councilman Schutt very unconsciously placed his left foot on a cat's tail, which had slyly crept under his desk and when he arose to offer a resolution everyone was startled by hearing the most unearthly yells imaginable. For a minute the cause was unknown, no one knowing who was to blame for the affair. It all passed off in hearty laughter and the business continued.

Councilmen Peck, Valiant, Smith and Schutt were present, and the meeting was called to order by Mayor Hegeman, Jr., at 8:30 o'clock. The proceedings of the last meeting were then read by Clerk Arnold which were approved. He then presented his financial report, which was received and filed for the month ending July 31st, which was as follows:

	Balance	Deficit
Borough	$319.68
Fire Department		$306.49
Light Account		295.86
Roads	930.09
Poor		200.00

Total amount of money received, $3,271.07, which includes the borough's share of the division with the township.

A large batch of bills were presented and after being audited were ordered paid, excepting Mr. Wilson's bill of $711.51 which Mr. Smith had not time to examine. He offered a resolution which prevailed, that $600 be paid on account.

Mr. Peck, from the fire, water and lamps committee, stated that a new roof had been placed on the engine house, and some other improvements made, which would not exceed $85 in cost, also that 1,500 feet of hose had been ordered and would be delivered shortly.

Mr. Smith, of the streets and public health committee, stated that there were still a few sidewalks to be laid, and that the heavy rains had done some damage, the most of which had been repaired. He also said that certain pipes used as drains had been lowered so as to carry off the water.

In his report, which was read by the Clerk, it showed that for the month of June $456.35 had been expended on borough streets, $38.50 of which was paid by the street railway; and for the month of July $84.12 had been expended. The report was received and filed.

Mr. Smith introduced an ordinance to open Watchung avenue.

Mr. Schutt made a motion that it be placed on first reading, which was carried. He then moved it be adopted on first reading and passed to second reading which was also carried, and finally moved it be adopted on second reading, and laid over till next meeting for final reading and adoption. It was so decided.

Mr. Schutt offered a resolution that the street commissioner be authorized to purchase a road scraper, the cost not to exceed $120. It was carried.

A resolution was offered by Mr. Schutt that whereas L. A. Hummer of Somerset street; Mrs. Nellie P. Lyman, of Washington avenue; C. P. Sebring, of Prospect place; Mrs. Estella Sebring, of Prospect place; and William M. Stillman, representing the Peter Wooden estate on Somerset street had failed to comply with the ordinance to put down sidewalks, that the Street Commissioner proceed to do so and that the Corporation Counsel take steps to effect a lien on the property for the payment of the same. It was carried.

Another resolution by Mr. Schutt was adopted that Prospect place from Grove street to Washington avenue be macadamized in accordance with the usual custom. Assessor Cooley stated that his books would be ready by August 15th, and Mr. Peck offered a resolution which was carried, that when council adjourn it be to meet August 16th.

Mr. Smith stated that the plans and specifications for improving Harrison street were out but as yet no bids had been received. He said he would be ready to report August 16th.

Mr. Schutt offered a resolution that $1,600 of the money received from the township be used on borough roads and that the same amount be transferred to the road account. It was so decided, council then adjourned.

MAY BE INDICTED YET

Negroes Want Miss Flagler Prosecuted.

The Killing of the Negro Boy by the Chief of Ordnance's Daughter Caused Great Excitement in Washington—Only Intended To Frighten the Boy.

Washington, Aug. 3.—Although Miss Elizabeth Flagler, daughter of Brigadier General Daniel W. Flagler, chief of ordinance, U. S. A., who shot and killed the youth named Ernest Green yesterday afternoon who she detected stealing fruit at the suburban residence of her father, was discharged by the coroner on the ground that the homicide was unintentional, the matter is likely to be brought to the attention of the grand jury so great is the excitement among the colored people. No tragedy of recent years in Washington has caused such a sensation or been fraught with more immediate excitement in the neighborhood of its occurrence.

Only Intended To Frighten.

The residence of General Flagler is in the northwestern section of Washington, on California avenue, and the grounds surrounding are filled with fruit and flowers. Yesterday afternoon when Miss Flagler, who is between 25 and 30 years of age, saw some one busily engaged in breaking the branches and gathering fruit from one of the trees in their garden and a demand to leave the premises not being immediately complied with, the lady without, it is asserted by herself and her friends, any further intention than to frighten away the intruder, discharged the contents of an army revolver in the direction of the plunderer.

Surrendered to the Authorities.

The bullet ploughed through the body of the boy who was about 15 years of age, and his death followed on the instant. An alarm was soon sounded and a policeman found the boy lying dead upon the ground, the bullet having passed entirely through his body and he could hardly have breathed a moment after he was shot. In the meantime Miss Flagler had left the house, and her parents being absent from the city on a summer pleasuring, sought Captain Shaler, also of the ordnance department, U. S. A., and accompanied by him proceeded to the office of Major Moore, the chief of police, and surrendered herself to the civil authorities.

Negroes Greatly Excited.

A police ambulance had been summoned to take away the yet unidentified body, and the congregation of a large crowd, principally composed of colored persons, who were greatly excited and murmuring profusely their indignation at the killing, gathered upon the approach of the ambulance. Whether any demonstrations would have been made against Miss Flagler herself or not had she remained at home is rather uncertain; but while the murmuring and excited comments were loudest that lady was safe in the custody of the chief of police, accompanied by Captain Shaler and a Miss West.

Admitted Firing the Fatal Shot.

She was outwardly calm and dignified, having but little to say beyond acknowledging that she fired the fatal shot, and averring that it was not aimed at the intruder nor intended to have any effect beyond scaring him away. She was very quiet during the day at the police station, where she was detained, not under lock and key, in the chief's private room awaiting the coroner's inquest late in the afternoon. Gen. Flagler was telegraphed for, and it is announced that he is now en route to Washington and will reach here this evening from Canada, where he has been outing.

Acquitted by the Coroner.

Miss Flaglar's testimony before the jury was brief. She admitted having fired two shots to frighten the boys away from the vicinity. The jury reached a verdict within a short time after hearing the evidence. But one ballot was taken, and was unanimous in the expression that the shots were fired without murderous or harmful intent, and that Miss Flagler could not be held responsible for the unfortunate death of the little colored boy.

Sentiment of Disapproval.

The scene in front of the police station during the inquest was somewhat unusual. The crowd was large and composed principally of colored people, though there were many well dressed white people, some of whom came in vehicles, and lingered about the neighborhood waiting for the verdict. Dissatisfaction in looks and manner, rather than speech, was expressed by the colored people in waiting when the result of the inquest was made known. There was little outspoken comment but among the colored people mutterings of discontent at the result showed the sentiment of disapproval.

STRANGLED HIMSELF AT SEA.

Peculiar Suicide of a Sailor—Buried Wrapped in Stars and Stripes.

Philadelphia, Aug. 3.—Mate Thos. Boyle, of the schooner Henry F. Mason, of Bath, Me., just arrived in this port, committed suicide at sea on Sunday morning last under most peculiar circumstances and in an extraordinary manner. Boyle was about 33 years old and his home was Manchester, England. He sailed in the Mason for over a year as first mate. Last Sunday morning Boyle was found in his bunk strangled to death. Around his neck was a cord drawn so tightly as to almost cut the flesh. The cord formed a running sailors' noose and the end was brought down and tied tightly below the man's knees. The man must have sat in his bunk with his knees drawn up to his chin, the cord was then arranged in a running noose around his neck, and the end tied tightly around his legs below the knees. When all was ready he must have thrown himself back on the bed and with a swift motion threw his legs straight out. This drew the rope taut and made the noose so tight around his neck as to strangle him. On Tuesday the body was wrapped in an American flag weighted with an old anchor and cast overboard.

DEFENDER'S FIRST DEFEAT.

She Breaks a Gaff and Vigilant Wins the Goelet Cup.

Newport, R. I., Aug. 3.—Defender lost her first race yesterday and great was the pity of it, for she had walked away from her three competitors and was nearing home when a new-fangled gaff at the top of her mainsail broke and most ingloriously the aspirant for cup honors was obliged to retire from the race, allowing Vigilant to win. The $500 cup offered by Ogden Goelet was the nominal prize for which the new syndicate boat was racing, but the fair fame of a craft that seeks international honors was at stake. Pitted against her were her persistent antagonist George J. Gould's Vigilant, the preserver of the America's cup in 1893, and Gen. Charles J. Paine's unknown quantity Jubilee, built for a cup defender in '93 but not chosen, and also J. Malcom Forbe's successful cup defender of 1886, the Volunteer.

GEN. HARRISON DECLINES.

Refused Another Invitation To Break His Vacation.

Old Forge, N. Y., Aug. 3.—General Harrison has declined another invitation to leave his camp during vacation, to make a speech. Representatives of the New York state grange called at the general's camp and invited him to go to Clayton on the 20th inst., when the New York state grange are holding their annual session there. In response to the invitation General Harrison said he could not accept it, declining it on the ground that he had thus far refused all invitations to leave here and go outside to speak. The grange committee did not tell the general that they would expect him to make a speech, but he evidently thought he would be called upon to do so if he went to Clayton.

COAL MINERS' WAGE DISPUTE.

Operators Willing To Grant the Desired Advance After Oct. 1.

Pittsburg, Aug. 3.—The threatened general coal miners' strike will probably be averted and the miners granted the advance demanded, provided they consent to wait until the first of October. A meeting of the coal operators was held yesterday at which the committee was empowered to act at the conference to take place to-day. The operators agreed to grant the miners' demands in full on Oct. 1, and promised to see that the rates of sixty-four and sixty-five cents were made uniform in this district. It was claimed that present contracts would have to be filled at existing rates, but that after they were closed all contracts would be made at the new price.

SHARP NOTE TO FRANCE

Delay in the Waller Case Becomes Annoying.

Ambassador Eustis Instructed To Insist That a Full Copy of the Records in the Case Be Furnished This Government—Failure Must Be Assumed as Indefensible.

Washington, Aug. 3.—It is understood that within the last forty-five hours a dispatch was sent to Ambassador Eustis instructing him to further press the Waller case upon the attention of the French government and to insist that a full copy of the record in the trial be furnish this government. A significant part of this instructions was that which directs Mr. Eustis to convey to the French government the fact that this government in the event of further refusal to furnish the records requested, would be compelled to assume that the sentence of Waller is indefensible on the part of the French authorities.

MRS. DWYER DEAD.

Before Her Last Marriage She Was the Duchess of Castelluccia.

New York, Aug. 3.—The lady who was known in New York for many years as the Duchess of Castelluccia, and who became Mrs. Dwyer by a marriage in Florida last spring, died yesterday of heart disease at Cranston's hotel, West Point. Mrs. Dwyer was born of American parents in Italy in 1821. She first married a wealthy New Yorker named Cornwall, and after his death she was married in 1882 to the Duke of Castelluccia, whom she met while traveling in Italy with her first husband. The duke served with distinction in the Crimean war and was an artist of some note and had several pictures hung at the Chicago fair. He and his wife came to New York in 1883, and in 1888 the duchess bought the Burlington, where they lived thereafter. The duke died there on April 22, 1893. The duchess had much valuable uptown real estate as well as property at Lenox, Mass.; Plainfield, N. J., and extensive orange groves on Dix island, Fla.

ALLEN IS A HUGE FAKE.

Not the Kind of a Man Holmes Would Deal With.

Memphis, Tenn., Aug. 3.—Hatch, alias Allen, alias Caldwell, alias Fogg, alias Mascot, the convict doing time in the Arkansas penitentiary and who has been alluded to as one of the right-hand confederates of Holmes, is undoubtedly a huge fake, so far as any connection he may have had with Holmes and his crimes is concerned, and it is most probable that the police of Memphis will be able to show that at the time this man of many aliases claimes to have been operating with Holmes in Texas, he was doing a term in the penitentiary of Tennessee. His first penitentiary sentence in this state was for horse stealing and was for twenty-one years, but he was pardoned and at once resume his old habits. He is not at all the kind of a man Holmes would select for his confederate and his travels have not carried him outside Tennessee and Arkansas.

FOREST FIRES IN MICHIGAN.

Much Damage Threatened if the Flames Gain Headway.

Houghton, Mich., Aug. 3.—Small bush fires are burning all through the heavily wooded parts of the upper peninsula, but so far little damage has been done except in Delta and Schoolcraft counties. The exceedingly dry weather, however, favors the spread of the fires, and high winds would be a signal for a sweep of the flames through the forest in many places. In addition to the danger to standing timber, some 250,000,000 feet of logs last spring could not be driven down the streams to the mills, and are in considerable danger unless rain falls at once. The Diamond Match company has 80,000,000 feet of longs on the Ontomagon river alone.

He states that he will return home soon and arrange all his financial matters satisfactory to his creditors. He is now in New York.

GEO. ALLEN LOCKED UP

Returned to Buffalo and Fell into a Trap.

Called on Cottle To Demand a Settlement for Emery—His Attorney Says Now the Other Side of the Recent Abduction Case Will Be Made Known.

Buffalo, Aug. 3.—George Allen, the partner of Claude Strong, alias John C. Emery, the abductor of Lawyer Cottle, was secretly arrested at the Mansion house Thursday night and is confined in the Erie county jail. Allen arrived here Wednesday morning and registered at the Mansion house as J. W. Mason. Thursday afternoon he proceeded to the office of Mr. Cottle and presented a letter from Emery, stating that a settlement of the account between them could be made for $2,500 and authorizing Allen to receive that sum. After some negotiation an appointment was made for yesterday morning, but when Allen had returned to his hotel, the police were notified and his arrest followed.

Says His Name Is McDonald.

To police Superindendent Bull he stated that his righ name was George W. McDonald and that he came here from New York. Further than this he refused to give any information. Late in the day Hugh O. Pentecost, the well-known New York attorney, arrived here, having been summoned by telegraph by Allen, and he proceeded to the jail, where he had a long consultation with his client. To a United Press representative, Mr. Pentecost said:

Allen's Lawyer Talks.

"The arrest of Allen will mak public the untold part of the Cottle kidnapping story, which the latter refused to disclose at the time of his abduction, and the people of Buffalo will find that so far they have heard only one side of it. It was no surprise to Allen when the officers arrested him. I do not say that he expected it, but he was not trying to dodge it. It was the only way that the injustice that has been done Emery can ever be brought to light. You may be very sure of one thing, the Cottles' will never prosecute the matter if they can help it, but we intend to force them to it."

Why Abduction Was Planned.

It will be remembered that Emery claimed to have paid Cottle a large sum of money for the purpose of obtaining for him a pardon for violating the postal laws, for which crime he had been convicted in Cincinnati and sentenced to prison, but escaped and fled to Canada. The pardon was not obtained and Emery demanded the return of the money which Cottle refused, and then Emery planned the abduction for the purpose of compelling restitution, but failed to secure the ransom he demanded for Cottle's release. Allen's share in the kidnapping was that he took the note to Cottle which lured him to the Baynes street house, where he was confined for two days.

Paid Strong and Cottle $17,500.

According to Mr. Pentecost, Emery's brother, Carlton Strong, an architect of this city, was the first to begin the work of getting money from Emery ostensibly to procure him a pardon. This was four years ago. About two and a half ago years O. O. Cottle was brought into the case. Altogether Emery, it is alleged, paid Carlton Strong and Cottle $17,500, of which Cottle got $5,700.

Driven To Desperation.

"Emery took the only course open to a man in his position," said Mr. Pentecost. "He put his faith in these men and gave them his money. When he saw that they were not intending to do anything for him, he tried every honorable means to get it back, but they laughed at him and asked him what he could do about it. This act of kidnapping was, of course, a crazy thing to do—it was, in reality, the act of a crazy man—but Emery was determined to do something to bring the matter before the people. When Cottle refused to tell any facts and the true story did not come to the surface, of course, little had been gained, and Allen determined to again try to force him to give up the money, or bring the matter into the courts."

Says Cottle Will Skip Out

Mr. Pentecost told an interesting thing, demonstrating how thoroughly confident Allen was that he could safely come to Buffalo and permit himself to be arrested. "He told the district attorney," said Mr. Pentecost, "after he was arrested, that if he wished to hold him he would better arrest O. O. Cottle and Carlton Strong. 'If you don't,' Allen said, 'you'll not be able to prove anything, for they will skip out as soon as they know I'm under arrest. They dare not stay.' And Mr. Allen, I think, knows what he is talking about." Mr. Pentecost said that he had been informed that Cottle left Buffalo immediately after McDonald's arrest. "If he's gone he will not return," said the lawyer, "until McDonald has been released and the indictment for kidnapping quashed."

OUTRAGE ON MISSIONARIES.

A Bad State of Affairs Said To Exist in Equador.

New York, Aug. 3.—Father J. Mebrouski, who has been in Equador for some time past conducting religious revivals, was a passenger on the Columbian line steamship which arrived in port yesterday. During the past month three parties of missionaries have fled to this city from the persecution of the natives. Father Mebrouski reports a very bad state of affairs in Equador. Many of the missionaries, including priests and sisters, have been maltreated and barely escaped with their lines. Churches and convents have been burned and destroyed and the inmates have suffered untold outrages. Father Mebrouski has gone to a convent in Elizabeth, N. J.

Found Dead in Bed.

Buffalo, Aug. 3.—Wm. B. Sirritt, a prominent citizen and politician, was found dead in bed at his residence on Main street yesterday afternoon. Heart trouble is assigned as the cause of death. Mr. Sirritts served four tearms as county treasurer and several terms in the common council.

Prague, Aug. 3.—The new municipal brewery at Pilsen was partly burned yesterday. The loss is 1,000,000 florins.

FRANK LENZ'S WILL FILED.

No Further Doubt That He Was Murdered by Arabs.

Pittsburg, Aug. 3.—After hoping against hope for over two years the relatives of Frank Lenz, the missing biycle rider, have come to the conclusion that Frank has been murdered and in accordance with this fact have filed his will. The news which brought them to this decision was received by Arnold Schneider, the representative of the Turkish government in this city. The information procured consisted of a transcript of the records of the state department in Washington, which were sent to them from the Turkish officials at Constantinople. The letter said there was no doubt that the rider had perished and that he had met death at the hands of eight Arabs who have been trailed and detected by means of the police force of that country. The will leaves everything to Frank's mother, Mrs. Maria Anna Lenz. No inventory accompanied the document, so it is impossible to ascertain the value of the property. As soon as the word was received at Washington, a special counsel was appointed to attend to the recovery of the body which was buried near Erzeroum. As near as can be learned Lenz was killed between the villages of Kuttali and Dehar about sixty-five miles from Erzeroum. United States consul Robert M. Chilliton, left for Turkey some days ago and expects to recover the body,

FUGITIVES SAFE IN MEXICO.

All That Is Necessary Is To Become a Citizen of That Republic.

Washington, Aug. 3.—Hon. Matt W. Ransom of North Carolina, United States minister to Mexico, called at the state department to-day and had a talk with Acting-Secretary Adee about the embarrassment which confronts the United States government through the refusal of the Mexican government to a request for the extradition of Chester Rowe, the fugitive Iowa embezzler, and his brother, Richard Rowe. As matters now stand any criminal may flee from the United States to Mexico and secure himself from extradition by taking out naturalization papers, an easy thing in that country, where the purchase of property and a declaration of allegiance to the government is a sufficient qualification for citizenship. When Mr. Ransom returns to Mexico he will probably make an effort to have the naturalization law amended so that it will not allow fugitives from the criminal laws of the United States to become citizens. Meanwhile he will ascertain the views of Secretary Olney on the subject. Mr. Ransom is much improved in health and expects to be able to return to his post in a short time. He has been recuperating in North Carolina.

WITHDRAWAL OF GOLD.

Over $2,000,000 Ordered in New York for Export.

Washington, Aug. 3.—Treasury officials were surprised last evening when informed that a demand had been made on the sub-treasury at New York for a considerable sum of gold for export. The amount exceeds two millions and opens up another gap which the Morgan-Belmont bond syndicate may feel called upon to fill. One million was called for by the bank of Montreal, and upwards of a million and a quarter by the coffee importing houses.

SHE'S OLLIE LAKE AGAIN.

Mrs. James J. Corbett Secures Her Decree of Divorce.

New York, Aug. 3.—Upon the report of Referee Jacobs, Judge Gildersleeve, in the special term of the superior court, yesterday granted Ollie Corbett a decree of absolute divorce from her husband, the champion pugilist. By the terms of the decree Mrs. Corbett is permitted to resume her maiden name and, if she chooses, she may marry again. The alimony of $5,200 a year ceases on the day that she again enters the matrimonial state.

Gold Mine in Maine.

Portland, Me., Aug. 3.—A prominent Portland man owns a tract of land in the town of Byron, on which is situated the Swift River Gold mine. Hitherto the land has been used as a lumber region, but now it is thought that the gold is abundant enough to pay for working the mine. The owner says he worked there two hours lately and washed out two dollars worth of gold.

After the Gilbert Car Works.

Troy, N. Y., Aug. 3.—Representatives of the St. Louis Car company have visited the big Gilbert car plant on Green island, and it is said that the western company desires to purchase the Gilbert plant to run in connection with the western plant.

The Columbia Holds the Warship Record.

No Fighting Vessel Afloat Can Touch Her as to Speed—Naval Circles Pleased with Her Achievement. Could Have Made Even Better Time with Forced Draught.

Washington, Aug. 3.—The performance of the United States cruiser Columbia in her run home from Southampton has caused great enthusiasm in naval circles. Why Capt. Sumner disregarded his instructions to speed the vessel under forced draught for the last twenty-four hours was because he was unable to pass the coal from the wing passages into the bunkers fast enough. Only one man could work at a time in the wing passages, and the coal had to be trollied there to the bunkers. The Columbia passed the Needles at 2 p. m., July 26, and Sandy Hook lightship at 8:59 a. m. yesterday. Her average hourly speed for the whole run was 18.41 knots. The whole run was made under natural draught. Twenty-six hours of fog was encountered, but no delay resulted therefrom. The record for the western trip from Southampton is 6 days, 7 hours and 14 minutes, made Sept. 8, 1894. The Columbia's time is therefore 16 hours and 35 minutes behind the record, which was made by the American liner New York.

Fastest Fighting Vessel Afloat.

This record shows the Columbia to be the fastest fighting vessel belonging to any country in the world. The Columbia's daily runs on the present trip were as follows: 405, 467, 470, 457, 455, 453, 405, making a total distance of 3,112 miles and an average speed of 18.53 knots per hour. The Columbia had fine weather all the way over. When off Newfoundland, on July 30, there was a heavy sea and considerable fog, and it appeared as if a heavy storm was coming up. For four hours she was slowed down to about eight knots an hours and then started up again. That was the only interruption of the continuous running of the Columbia from the time she left Southampton till she came abreast of the lightship.

Average Speed Was 18.41 Knots.

According to the log of Lieut. William H. Griggs, who is the navigator of the Columbia, the average of the speed was 18.41 knots an hour and all under natural draught. Three screws were employed and all of the eight boilers furnished steam. They used between 200 and 230 tons of coal a day. The Columbia made bursts of speed reaching almost 21 knots. She did that on several occasions and different days. Her best run for four consecutive hours was about 80 1-2 knots.

Could Have Done Better.

Chief Engineer Harris said if the ship had run under forced drought, at the least calculation she would have made two knots more in every hours that she was forced. This trip of the Columbia is the most memorable run ever made by a war vessel. It is supposed that the navy department knew, when it permitted the Columbia to start last Friday on a special trial from Southampton to Sandy Hook, that the cruiser would be practically racing across the ocean with two of the finest twin-screw vessels of the merchant marine, the American liner St. Louis and the Augusta Victoria of the Hamburg-American line.

Departure of the Racers.

The Columbia passed the Needles, bound from Southampton to American, at 1.20 o'clock on Friday afternoon. The Augusta Victoria left Cherbourg, France, where she had stopped to take on passengers, probably 100 miles behind the Columbia. The American liner St. Louis passed the Needles at 1.40 o'clock on Saturday afternoon, being 24 hours and 20 minutes behind the Columbia. The Augusta Victoria, from Hamburg via Southampton and Cherbourg, was sighted off Sandy Hook at 10.50 a. m. yesterday. The Augusta Victoria sailed from Cherbourg on July 26 at 7 p. m., being about 100 miles astern of the cruiser Columbia.

A Commerce Destroyer.

The Columbia was launched at Cramp's shipyard on July 27, 1892. She cost $2,725,000. The coal capacity of the vessel is 2,550 tons, and moving at a speed of ten knots an hour she has an endurance of about 109 days or a radius of action of 26,140 knots. Each of her engines is placed in a separate water-tight compartment. The Columbia is a commerce destroyer, and for this reason carries no very big guns. Her speed would allow her to move away from any heavily armed and protected vessel with which she did not care to cope. Her offensive strength lies in a number of small rapid firing guns. For a bow chaser she carries her largest, an 8-inch rapid-fire piece. She carries two 6-pounder rapid-fire and eight 4-pounder rapid-fire guns. Her secondary battery is composed of twelve 6-pounder rapid-fire guns, four 1-pounder rapid-fire guns and four Gatling guns.

Hamburg Line Objects.

New York, Aug. 3.—The following has been received from the Hamburg-American line: "As comparisons have been made between the trips of the United States cruiser Columbia and our steamer Augusta Victoria, we beg to call attention to the fact that the Augusta Victoria did not sail direct for New York, but touched at Cherbourg, leaving latter port July 26 at 7:10 p. m. The distance from Cherbourg to New York is about the same as from Southampton to New York, and as the Augusta Victoria reached Sandy Hook yesterday at 10:42 a. m. her actual time of passage was 6 days and 20 hours and 20 minutes.

ANOTHER SMASH AT MALTBY'S.

J. Gould Has His Bicycle Badly Damaged By an Accident.

Five spokes and a chain were smashed in a bicycle accident on Maltby's track last evening. Peter Simms, the colored rider, who has been riding so well was about to try a mile against time. John Gould was to pace him, and as Simms came down to the start, Gould started to turn around on the track. He did not see John Simpson who was directly behind him, and the consequence was the two came together with a crash. Neither of the riders were hurt, but the chain to Gould's wheel was broken and five spokes knocked out. Simms, however, rode the mile aright in 2:28.

BE WELL THIS SUMMER.

Paine's Celery Compound Restores Lost Nervous Energy.

For those many women who have suffered through the in-door life of winter and spring, with tired nerves, sleeplessness, neuralgia, rheumatism, the dyspepsia that is best expressed by the words "no appetite"—for the many worn-out women, many of whom will get no real vacation, but must attend the whole summer long to household duties—for such women there is every need now of a brisker feeding of the reduced blood and nervous tissues by means of the best nutritive agent in the wide world today, Paine's celery compound.

After building up the body by the use of this great modern restorative, diseases of the special organs, heart troubles, kidney disease, dyspepsia and sleeplessness will disappear.

Neglect to satisfy the demands of the nervous system by rapid, complete nourishment of all its parts, carries heavy penalties. Paine's celery compound, more effectively than anything else the world has yet known, restores health to men and women whose blood has been robbed of vitality from whatever cause, and whose nerves have lost their healthy tone. Persons suffering from rheumatism, neuralgia and any of the countless results of loss of nerve power find a marked change for the better almost at once upon faithfully using Paine's celery compound.

"I suffered for three years with neuralgia and rheumatism. I tried different remedies which would give me only temporary relief. Last year in January and through the spring months I suffered terribly. I could walk only a short distance, and some days not at all. But then I began for the first time to use Paine's celery compound. It cured me permanently and I have not been troubled since. My knees were so bad last year that I could not sit down or get up alone. Now I walk every day, and it causes no stiffness or lameness in the joints."

Testimonials from men and women in every State and county and town in the country might be published telling of similar speedy cures. They carry this plain advice to other sufferers: Take Paine's celery compound!

Marvelous Results.

From a letter written by Rev. J. Gunderman, of Dimondale, Mich., we are permitted to make this extract: "I have no hesitation in recommending Dr. King's New Discovery, as the results were almost marvelous in the case of my wife. While I was pastor of the Baptist Church at Rives Junction she was brought down with pneumonia succeeding la grippe. Terrible paroxysms of coughing would last hours with little interruption and it seemed as if she could not survive them. A friend recommended Dr. King's New Discovery; it was quick in its work and highly satisfactory in results." Trial bottles free at L. W. Randolph's drug store. Regular size 50c and $1.

Poor Game Laws.

A meeting of sportsmen was held Thursday at North Branch. Quite a number from Plainfield were present, among them Dr. W. B. Mathewson and Percy Ohl. Somerville, Newark and New Brunswick were represented. The present game laws were greatly ridiculed and the compilers roundly condemned. Mr. Ohl will likely canvass the State in this interest, visiting Burlington and Mercer counties next week.

Getting Ready for Good Times.

The Scott Printing Machine Works are making changes in their engine room preparatory to converting their Corliss engine into a compound condencing one. When completed it will develope 220 horse power. The boilers will carry a presure of 130 pounds per square inch. They are also erecting two new electric dynamoes which will generate currents for 44 arc and 600 incandescent lights.

Hard Luck.

The prospects of going camping next week are not very bright for William J. Roome, Jr., today. He playing tag with some of his companions when he slipped and fell off the piazza, spraining his ankle. Dr. Hallock was called and took charge of the injured lad, and says that he will not be able to walk for two weeks.

Afraid of the Cars.

A farmer's wagon was standing in front of Kirch's grocery on Somerset street this morning, when the trolley car came by and frightened the horse attached. He tried to climb all over the sidewalk, but one of the trolley wire poles got in his way, and the dashboard and shaft gave way, badly wrecking the wagon.

Lounging Allowed.

Silence and Fun.

A joker on the little joker, he was called to Westfield; but he won't go there any more. He doesn't mind a little fun when it comes from Baltimore.

ENGLISH LIVING.

HOW AN AMERICAN FARED IN ENGLAND ON SIX MEALS A DAY.

Daily Bread in a Middle Class Home. Breakfast at 7, Supper at 9. Yorkshire Pudding and Bubble and Squeak. Odd Serving of Food.

Any Englishman will acknowledge with perfect good humor that it is an old saying in his country that "an Englishman considers his stomach first and his back afterward," but no American can realize how universally true the love of good living is all over England unless he has been fortunate enough to be invited to spend several months as a guest in a middle class English home.

The house where such a stay was had, and to which the writer will always look back with longing for a return of the delightful days spent there, was presided over by a typical English hostess, round, ruddy, and so jolly that, though she must have been sixty, one always thought of her as young. Her house was managed in good old English style, and from the moment we greeted her in the morning until we took our candles to go to bed at night, her one thought was to make us comfortable and happy.

Breakfast began at 7 o'clock, and we always found our hostess waiting for us in the breakfast room, in her place at the head of the table. English etiquette demands that each person as he enters the breakfast room should shake hands with the hostess first, and then with every one else in the room. This practice was, of course, new to the American guest, but it was soon acquired, though more difficult was the getting used to interruption half a dozen times in the course of the meal to shake hands with the late risers as they came in, one by one.

There would always be two or three kinds of cold meat, beef, mutton, ham, etc., left over from the day before, hot sausage or eggs, and, in season, a Melton-Mowbray pork pie. Along with these would be the most delicious of toast and tea. Coffee was little drunk, and was not particularly good, but the tea was always so much nicer than any tea which can be had in this country that one easily preferred it.

About 11 o'clock comes what they call "a bite and a snatch." This is merely bread and beer and a bit of pastry, set informally on an end of the dining table and eaten as one chooses. It follows one about the house or into the garden, a maid bringing your share on a tray. This luncheon was to be dodged, when possible, as it only spoiled the appetite for dinner, which, in this house, was served at 12:30.

Dinner is a substantial meal, beginning with an enormous roast of beef, a leg of mutton or a boiled ham. There was very seldom soup, but whenever the roast was of beef or mutton there was always delicious Yorkshire pudding, which was served before or with the roast. To make this dish, comparatively unknown in America, the roast is put to cook upon an iron frame called a "horse," which raises it from the bottom of the roasting pan. An hour or so before the roast is done, the pudding batter, made of flour, milk and eggs, is poured into the pan and left to cook beneath the drippings of the meat, the juices of which penetrate and flavor it. One might reasonably think, to read how it is made, that a Yorkshire pudding would be solid enough to sole a shoe with, but it isn't. When properly made, it is light and delicious.

Of course everything is carved on the table. The Englishman has a lofty contempt for side dishes, and your meat, potato, Yorkshire pudding and two kinds of vegetables are always heaped upon one plate, which, fortunately, is a large one.

Of pies, as we make them in this country, they know nothing. The nearest approach which they have to them are their tarts, made with one crust, about as large as a saucer, and filled with various kinds of fruit jam.

By the middle of the afternoon, when our hostess was fairly relieved of her domestic duties for the day, she liked to have us drop in at her own little sitting room for a bit of cake, some fruit and a glass of her home-made wine.

At 5 o'clock, by which time we naturally needed something to eat, came tea; and this was no "four o'clock" affair, with tiny cups and wafers of paper thinness. The table was spread in the dining-room, and we sat down to a generous meal of potted meat, salad, big plates piled high with thin slices of bread and butter, more toast, tea and pastry.

At 9 o'clock comes supper—next to dinner, the most solid meal of the day. This is also the social meal, when conversation is at its best, and we are apt to linger, loath to leave. If a neighbor dropped in, or more than one, as was often the case, extra plates were put on, and they must have at least a mouthful for the sake of hospitality.

The cold roasts from dinner, and usually from dinner of the day before, always came up for supper, with roast potatoes or "bubble and squeak," made regularly after the first night, because the traveler liked it so well. "Bubble and squeak" is simply the cold potato and cabbage from dinner chopped together, and then done in a frying pan to a crisp brown. It doesn't sound nice, but try it and see how good it is. This is not the notion of one particular house, for directions for cooking it were found in an old cook book published in 1837.

A leading literary light in one of the best known woman's colleges says that there are just three books that everybody should know by heart. "The Arabian Nights," "Alice in Wonderland" and "Mother Goose." "A thorough knowledge of those masterpieces," she says, "will do more toward cultivating the imagination than any other process that I know of. And I regard imagination as the most important of all mental faculties." This is a direct and significant opposition to the ideas held by many parents and teachers that fairy tales are injurious reading for the young.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer one hundred dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

Electric Bitters.

Electric Bitters is a medicine suited for any season, but perhaps more generally needed in the spring, when the languid exhausted feeling prevails, when the liver is torpid and sluggish and the need of a tonic and alterative is felt. A prompt use of this medicine has often averted long and perhaps fatal bilious fevers. No medicine will act more surely in counteracting and freeing the system from the malarial poison. Headache, indigestion, constipation, dizziness yield to Electric Bitters. Only 50c per bottle at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

EX-KING IN JERSEY.

EX-KING JOSEPH BONAPARTE PASSED HIS YEARS OF EXILE IN JERSEY.

Very Popular With the Town Folk. His Fourth of July Celebrations and Skating Carnivals Are Still Remembered. Many Distinguished Visitors.

Bordentown, N. J., enjoys the distinction of having had a king as a taxpayer—Joseph Bonaparte, once King of Spain and Sicily, who had become an exile. He used to stir things up every Fourth of July for the whole town. He bought a wagonload of fireworks, and he brewed enough punch to keep an ordinary Long Island clambake in good spirits. Everybody who knows a thing or two about the Bonaparte family—and in these days of the Napoleonic revival there is no trouble to get any amount of family gossip—knows that Joseph Bonaparte was Napoleon's "light-minded" brother, who was carried by the "Little Corporal's" tidal wave of prosperity on to two thrones, and by the backward tow into Jersey exile.

Long before the air of France became too heavy for him he had made up his mind when he had to take French leave that about half-way between New York and Philadelphia would be a good place to locate, because it would be handy to get news from the French ships coming to these two ports.

Old Commodore Stewart met the ex-King at his Philadelphia club and told him about the glories of Bordentown, and induced him to locate on the Stephen Sayre estate, and to buy a farm and go to raising vegetables. The New Jersey Legislature gave him the right to own property, and he set up a good deal of an establishment, considering that he was supposed to be a poor king and always in debt. Napoleon told him once that his finances were "deplorably conducted, apparently on metaphysical principles. Believe me, money is a very physical thing." Joseph, however, did not come over empty handed, for he went into American securities by the wholesale, and had considerable gilt-edged stock to give away to his relatives when he died.

Joseph did not like the Bordentown people at first. They annoyed him. They were busybodies and kept him in a bad humor. One day when he went up to Trenton his house burned down, and the townsfolk turned out and saved much of his property, and every house in the town sheltered some of the royal bric-a-brac and valuables. Everything was returned, even to some little trinkets belonging to the little sad faced Emperor, then at St. Helena. The honesty of these Jersey people impressed him to tears, and he was profuse in his thanks and expressed his gratitude in a hundred other ways. He began to associate more with his neighbors and threw open his great park. Then began the jolly Fourth of July celebrations and the ice carnivals which were his principal diversions.

Joseph was a royal gentleman more by accident than anything else. His Jersey neighbors did not know that in the eyes of his fiery little brother he had been a youth ne'er-do-well. He was educated to be a bishop, not being courageous enough to make a good soldier. Napoleon thought he had talents at flattery and would get on well in society, but never in war. He, however, did do some fighting in Naples and earned for himself a crown. It was a small crown on a large head. Napoleon himself is the authority for this statement, for when he was on the throne of Naples Joseph boasted considerably about his kingly powers, and this often caused Napoleon to lose his temper. "Joseph must forget all our ties of childhood. Let him make himself esteemed. Let him acquire glory. Let him have a leg broken in battle. Then I shall esteem him. Let him give up his old ideas. Let him not dread fatigue."

With all his sharp criticism of Joseph, Napoleon loved him. In the business time of his life he often wrote him a daily letter on matters of State, and actually kept him busy at one time trying to inspire his pretty sister-in-law, Desiree Clary, to contemplate an alliance with him, but Napoleon had been practically cashiered out of the army for disobedience, so Desiree waited and became the Queen of Sweden.

Henry Clay was the first American to accord a welcome to Joseph. He had the only available apartments in the hotel where Joseph and his friends applied, and Henry Clay gave them up instantly, and, strange to say, a dinner was spread at the time, so the ex-King sat down to a royal good meal and Henry Clay took his party around to a chop house. The friendship begun this day was a lasting one. Joseph reciprocated at Bordentown, where the eloquent Henry Clay often stretched his long limbs under kingly mahogany and absorbed punch with the ardor which unwritten history says the great statesman was capable of. Daniel Webster, John Quincy Adams, Gen. Scott and old Commodore Stockton were some of the Americans who called to cheer the exiled king in his loneliness.

They Like Titles.

It is the privilege of an English Prime Minister when he lays down office to furnish a list of names to the Sovereign with the titles he desires for the bearers. These requests are always honored. Lord Roseberry has not proved an exception to the rule. A number of his supporters are to be created Earls and Barons. And yet it is only a few months since the Liberal Government, to which these soon to be enobled persons belong, was proposing to sweep the country to the tune of "Mend or end the House of Lords."

The British Radical still dearly loves a peer. Provincial brewers and distillers keep their eyes fixed on the Upper House as a happy haven of retreat. It does not seem that the habit of paying campaign contributions by titles is to fall into disuse. The latest station of this method leaves ry and his friends open to the of the Conservatives.

CHAPTER I.—THE TRAGEDY.

As I take my pen to write this, I have a feeling that I am on the witness stand—for or against myself, which? The place of the criminal in the dock I will not voluntarily take. I will affirm neither my innocence nor my guilt. I will present the facts of the case as impartially and as coolly as if I had nothing at stake. I will let all who may read this judge me as they will.

This I am bound to do, since I am condemned to something infinitely worse than the life-cell or the gallows. I will try my own self in lieu of judge and jury; my guilt or my innocence I will prove to you all, if it be in mortal power. In my despair I am tempted to say I care not which it may be, so something be proved. Open condemnation could not overwhelm me like universal suspicion.

Now, first, as I have heard is the custom in courts of law, I will present the case. I am Sarah Fairbanks, a country schoolteacher, 29 years of age. My mother died when I was 23. Since then, while I have been away teaching at Digby, a cousin of my father's, Rufus Bennett, and his wife have lived with my father. During the long summer vacations they returned to their little farm in Vermont, and I kept house for my father.

For five years I have been engaged to be married to Henry Ellis, a young man whom I met in Digby. My father was very much opposed to the match, and has told me repeatedly that if I insisted upon marrying him in his lifetime he would disinherit me. On this account Henry has never visited me at my own home. While I could not bring myself to break off finally my engagement, I wished to avoid an open rupture with my father. He was quite an old man, and I was the only one he had left of a large family.

I believe that parents should honor their children, as well as children their parents, but I had arrived at this conclusion: In nine-tenths of the cases wherein children marry against their parents' wishes, even when the parents have no just grounds for opposition, the marriages are unhappy.

I sometimes felt that I was unjust to Henry, and resolved that if ever I suspected that his fancy turned toward any other girl I would not hinder it, especially as I was getting older, and, I thought, losing my good looks.

A little while ago, a young and pretty girl came to Digby to teach the school in the south district. She boarded in the same house with Henry. I heard that he was somewhat attentive to her, and I made up my mind I would not interfere. At the same time it seemed to me my heart was breaking. I heard her people had money, too, and she was an only child. I had always felt that Henry ought to marry a wife with money, because he had nothing himself, and was not very strong.

School closed five weeks ago, and I came home for the summer vacation. The night before I left Harry came to see me, and urged me to marry him. I refused again; but I never before had felt that my father was so hard and cruel as I did that night. Henry said that he should certainly see me during the vacation, and when I replied that he must not come he was angry, and said—but such foolish things are not worth repeating. Henry has really a very sweet temper, and would not hurt a fly.

The very night of my return home Rufus Bennett and my father had words about some maple sugar which Rufus made on his Vermont farm and sold to my father, who made a good trade for it to some people in Boston. That was father's business. He had once kept a store, but had given it up, and sold a few articles that he could make a large profit on here and there at wholesale. He used to send to New Hampshire and Vermont for butter, eggs and cheese. Cousin Rufus thought father did not allow him enough of his profit on the maple sugar, and in the dispute father lost his temper and said that Rufus had given him underweight. At that Rufus swore an oath and seized father by the throat. Rufus' wife screamed, "Oh, don't! don't! Oh, he'll kill him!"

"YOU LET GO MY FATHER!"

I went up to Rufus and took hold of his arm.

"Rufus Bennett," said I, "you let my father go!"

But Rufus' eyes glared like a madman's, and he would not let go. Then I went to the desk-drawer where father had kept a pistol since some houses in the village were broken into; I got out the pistol, laid hold of Rufus again, and held the muzzle against his forehead.

Then Rufus let go, and father dropped like a log. He was purple in the face. Rufus' wife and I worked a long time over him to bring him to.

"Rufus Bennett," said I, "go to the well and get a pitcher of water." He went, but when father had revived and got up Rufus gave him a look that showed he was not over his rage.

"I'll get even with you yet, Martin Fairbanks, old man as you are!" he shouted out, and went into the outer room.

We got father to bed soon. He slept in the bed-room downstairs, out of the sitting-room. Rufus and his wife had the north chamber, and I had the south one. I left my door open that night, and did not sleep any. I listened; no one stirred in the night. Rufus and his wife were up very early in the morning, and before 9 o'clock left for Vermont. They had a day's journey and would reach home about 9 in the evening. Rufus' wife bade father good-by, crying, while Rufus was getting their trunks down stairs, but Rufus did not go near father nor me. He ate no breakfast; his very back looked ugly when he went out of the yard.

That very day, about 7 o'clock in the evening, after tea, I had just washed the dishes and put them away and went out on the north doorstep, where father was sitting, and sat down on the lowest step. There was a cool breeze there; it had been a very hot day.

"I want to know if that Ellis fellow has been to see you any lately," said father all at once.

"Not a great deal," I answered.

"Did he come to see you the last night you were there?" said father.

"Yes, sir," said I, "he did come."

"If you ever have another word to say to that fellow while I live I'll kick you out of this house like a dog, daughter of mine though you be!" said he. Then he swore a great oath and called God to witness, "Speak to that fellow again, if you dare, while I live!" said he.

I did not say a word; I just looked up at him as I sat there. Father turned pale, and shrank back, and put his hand to his throat, where Rufus had clutched him. There were some purple finger-prints there.

"I suppose you would have been glad if he'd killed me," father cried out.

"I saved your life," said I.

"What did you do with that pistol?" he asked.

"I put it back in the desk-drawer."

I got up and went around and sat on the west doorstep, which is the front one. As I sat there the bell rang for the Tuesday evening meeting, and Phoebe Dole and Maria Woods, two old maiden ladies, dressmakers, our next door neighbors, went past on their way to meeting. Phoebe stopped and asked if Rufus and his wife had gone. Maria went around the house. Very soon they went on, and several other people passed. When they had all gone it was as still as death.

I sat alone a long time, until I could see by the shadows that the full moon had risen. Then I went up to my room and went to bed.

I lay awake a long time crying. It seemed to me that all hope of marriage between Henry and me was over. I could not expect him to wait for me. I thought of that other girl; I could see her pretty face wherever I looked. But at last I cried myself to sleep.

At about 5 o'clock I woke and got up. Father always wanted his breakfast at 6 o'clock, and I had to prepare it now.

When father and I were alone he always built the fire in the kitchen stove. But that morning I did not hear him stirring as usual, and I fancied that he must be so out of temper with me that he would not build the fire.

I went to my closet for a dark-blue calico dress which I wore to do housework in. It had hung there during all the school term. As I took it off the hook, my attention was caught by something strange about the dress I had worn the night before. This dress was made of thin summer silk; it was green in color, sprinkled over with white rings. It had been my best dress for two summers; but now I was wearing it on hot afternoons at home, for it is the coolest dress I have. The night before, too, I had thought of the possibility of Henry's driving over from Digby and passing the house. He had done this sometimes during the last summer vacation, and I wished to look my best if he did.

As I took down the calico dress I saw what seemed to be a stain on the green silk. I threw on the calico hastily and then took the green silk and carried it over to the window. It was covered with spots—horrible great splashes and streaks down the front. The right sleeve, too, was stained, and all the stains were wet.

"What have I got on my dress?" said I.

It looked like blood. Then I smelled of it, and it was sickening in my nostrils, but I was not sure what the smell of blood was like. I thought I must have got the stains by some accident the night before.

"If that is blood on my dress," I said, "I must do something to get it off at once, or the dress will be ruined."

It came to my mind that I had been told that blood stains had been removed from cloth by an application of flour paste on the wrong side. I took my green silk and ran down the back stairs, which lead, having a door at the foot, directly into the kitchen.

There was no fire in the kitchen stove, as I had thought. Everything was very solitary and still, except for the ticking of the clock on the shelf. When I crossed the kitchen to the pantry, however, the cat mewed to be let in from the shed. She had a little door of her own by which she could enter or leave the shed at will—an aperture just large enough for her maltese body to pass at ease beside the shed door. It had a little lid, too, hung upon a leather hinge. On my way I let in the cat; then I went to the pantry and got a bowl of flour. This I mixed with water into a stiff paste and applied to the under surface of the stains on my dress. I then hung the dress up to dry in the dark end of a closet leading out of the kitchen, which contained some old clothes of father's.

Then I made up the fire in the kitchen stove; I made coffee, baked biscuits and poached some eggs for breakfast.

Then I opened the door into the sitting-room and called, "Father, breakfast is ready." Suddenly I started. There was a red stain on the inside of the sitting-room door. My heart began to beat in my ears.

"Father!" I called out; "father!"

There was no answer.

"Father!" I again called, as loud as I could scream. "Why don't you speak? What is the matter?"

The door of his bed-room stood open. I had a feeling that I saw a red reflection in there. I gathered myself together and went across the sitting-room to father's bed-room door. His little looking-glass hung over his bureau directly opposite his bed, which was reflected in it.

That was the first thing I saw when I reached the door. I could see father in the looking-glass and the bed. Father was dead there; he had been murdered in the night.

ALBERT EDWARD'S EXPENSIVE JOKE.

How He Smashed the Crockery and Furniture of an Elderly Countess.

Albert Edward, Prince of Wales, is perhaps the most popular man in England. This popularity is due to his love of sports and all manly traits which are particularly commendable in the eyes of the average Britisher. As a youth, his audacity and appreciation of a joke, either as a perpetrator or victim, were well known.

One of his early escapades resulted in Her Majesty the Queen footing a bill for broken crockery and wrecked furniture which the young Prince caused in the house of one of the lesser members of the nobility. A rather elderly countess, whose quick temper and sharp tongue drove even her servants away from her, advertised for a footman. The Prince, to whose ears tales of the peculiarities of the old lady had come, resolved to teach her a lesson. He therefore presented himself in disguise at her ladyship's house and applied for the position of footman.

The Countess had just finished her breakfast, and pushing her chair back from the table, instructed the servant to bring before her the applicant. The Prince was thereupon ushered into the room. The Countess looked him over from his feet up.

Apparently pleased with the appearance of the Prince, she said: "Let me see you walk."

Albert Edward did as commanded and walked backward and forward several times across the floor from one end of the room to the other, now walking briskly at the request of the old lady and then pacing slowly, as she wished to obtain points on this score.

This performance over, the Countess ordered him to trot. The dining-room still the theater of action, the Prince trotted around it several times. When this exercise was completed he again came to a standstill near the head of the table, where the Countess was seated. Her ladyship seemed pleased, and was just on the point of asking the young man some more questions about himself when he shouted:

"Now see me gallop!"

Grasping a corner of the table cloth firmly in one hand, the Prince rushed around the room, pulling the crockery off on the floor in a heap, knocking over the furniture and finally winding her ladyship up in the folds of the cloth. He then bolted for the door, leaving the Countess sputtering and shouting and the servants running about in a distracted way to liberate their mistress and quiet her rage.

In the hubbub and confusion the Prince escaped. The next day a check from the keeper of the Privy Purse settled the amount of the damages, and likewise established the identity of the mischief maker.

A Cheerful View.

The following story is told of a correspondent who has recently returned from a trip to the far West of the United States.

Two men who had been sitting together in the seat near the door of a railway car became engaged in an animated controversy, and their loud voices attracted the attention of all the other passengers.

Suddenly one of them rose and said:

"Ladies and gentleman, I appeal to you to decide a disputed point. My friend here insists that not more than three persons out of five believe they have souls. I take a more cheerful view of humanity than that. Will all of you who believe you have souls raise your right hands?"

Every hand in the car went up.

"Thank you," he said, with a smile. "Keep them up just a moment. Now, will all of you who believe in a hereafter please raise your left hand also?"

Every hand in the car went up.

"Thank you again," he said. "Now, while all of you have your hands raised," he continued, drawing a pair of revolvers and leveling them, "my friend here will go down the aisle and relieve you of whatever valuables you may happen to have. Lively now, Jim."—Pearson's Weekly.

A Liberal Education.

"That man," said Huxley, "has a liberal education who has been so trained in youth that his body is the ready servant of his will, and does with ease and pleasure all the work that, as a mechanicism, it is capable of; whose intellect is a clear, cold logic engine, with all its parts of equal strength and in smooth working order, ready, like a steam engine, to be turned to any kind of work, and spin the gossameres as well as forge the anchors of the mind; whose mind is stored with a knowledge of the great and fundamental truths of nature and of the laws of her operations; one who, no stunted ascetic, is full of life and fire, but whose passions are trained to come to a halt by a vigorous will, the servant of a tender conscience; who has learned to love all beauty, whether of nature or of art, to hate all vileness, and to respect others as himself. Such a one, and no other, has had a liberal education." The world can add no higher and no more richly merited tribute to the author of those noble words than this, that such a man was Thomas Henry Huxley.

A Reasoner.

"There, Willie," said the lad's mother, "is ten cents for you. Now, what are you going to do with it?"

"Save it up to buy fireworks for the Fourth of July," replied the boy in a tone whose positiveness was almost defiant.

"Why, Willie, you know you are saving up your money to give to the heathen."

"Y-yes'm, but the Chinese are heathen, aren't they?"

"Yes, dear."

"And the Chinese make the firecrackers, don't they?"

"I am told they do."

"Well, then, the heathen'll get my money just the same, so it's all right."—Burlington Journal.

SCOTCH PLAINS WAS DUPED.

AN OLD, OLD GAME WORKED BY A BOLD AND SLICK FAKIR.

Jewelry Scattered Broad Cast in the Streets—How the Village Was Victimized by "Goldentine Kit."

About seven o'clock on Saturday night a stout young man, dressed in disguise of a cow boy, seated in a two-seat open surrey, drawn by a spirited horse, which was partially covered with a red blanket, gorgeously lettered on both sides, "Golden Kit," drove about the streets of Scotch Plains loudly proclaiming that in about fifteen minutes he would give a show on the corner near the hotel. He stated that it would consist of clog dancing, sentimental songs, etc. Shortly after a crowd gathered at the place, when the young man mounted his wagon and introduced himself as representing western jewelry manufacturers who employed two hundred and fifty men and seventy-five girls in manufacturing Goldentine, which, he said, had proved to be equal to gold in every respect, excepting that it was a trifle lighter. He said he was under a salary of eight dollars per day to introduce the jewelry and consequently could not sell, but would distribute a sample of it with a few of the representative citizens, after which he would make arrangements with some of the merchants to dispose of it by legitimate trade. His first move toward distributing it, was to promiscuously throw out a handful of "Goldentine" rings, which were greedily gathered up by the crowd. He then wanted to distribute eight or ten cards of "shirt studs" and in order to test the nerves of the spectators said he would accept twenty-five cents a card for them, and give each purchaser a present that would be satisfactory to them. The result was that the ten cards were readily taken, the buyers being agreeably surprised to receive their money back. His next was ten-pair of cuff buttons, which he would accept fifty cents a pair for, and make a handsome present to each buyer as before; for, as he put it, what benefit was it to him; he was under salary employed to introduce, and not to sell. The cuff buttons went rapidly, and the price was just as promptly refunded. Next he said he would put out a limited number of watch chains. These he said were solid one hundred and fifteen linked Goldentine chains, the retail price being $8. To again test the nerves of his listeners he would except one dollar each for the chains, with presents returned as before. Several chains were taken. Then just for a joke he would tie a knot in a chain and let it go for $2 and when he tied two knots in a chain three dollars was handed up, for what difference did it make, as all were sure of getting their money back. Finally, he became more liberal than ever, and changed his tactics by attaching a "Goldentine" hunting case watch to each chain, declaring that he would make the watch a present to every person who had nerve enough to part with one dollar for an eight dollar chain. The watches went lively, each one being carefully placed in an envelope and sealed with the buyers name written thereon. They were not to be opened until close of sale, lest he should make no mistake and give presents to wrong persons. After gathering in about all the hard earned dollars the bystanders had to spare, instead of returning the money as before he made each buyer the promised present in the shape of a very diminutive package of what he said was Doctor Brown's "Great Brain Restorer." Then whipping out a mammoth bull dog revolver volunteered to show the spectators how he could shoot, but they did not seem as anxious to know how to shoot as they did how to get their dollars back.

It was then discovered that "Kit" had with him two confederates, who jumped on the front seat, and, saying good night to all, drove away with "Goldentine Kit," cooly sitting on the back seat brandishing the bull-dog revolver. After the crowd had regained their temper a consultation was had, and on opening the envelopes and examining the so-called watches, they were found to be brass boxes filled with putty. The brain restorer was common soap. It is thought the fakirs gathered in about $75, leaving behind them brass worth less than 50 cents.

The three fakirs were in this city early Saturday afternoon, but after an interview with Sergeant Kiely, who laid down the law to them, they journeyed on to Scotch Plains and worked their game there as told above.

Work Commenced.

WAR OVER COWS.

Which Causes a Law Suit Among Neighbors in South Plainfield.

Two cows had a quarrel in South Plainfield last Tuesday and the consequence is that the owners are going to law about it. Miss Harriet W. Mallison, the school teacher in South Plainfield, keeps a cow but always has it tied as it should be. Now, one of her neighbors, Samuel B. Merrill, keeps a cow also, but unlike the other cow it is not tied. Merrill's cow, which has quite a reputation as a fighter, took a walk last Tuesday and finally managed to bring up in Miss Mallison's lot where her bossy was tied. They fought and the result was a complete victory for the visitor who tore out one of the horns of her opponent and damaged her generally. The result is a suit before Justice Huff, of Dunellen, which comes up on Thursday, when Harry C. Runyon will plead for justice on the side of the battered cow.

Parkes, Dan Beard, Arthur Foote and "For Fair Virginia" are the subjects of the articles in the artist, musician and cramatic series respectively.

Fell Off the Ladder.

He was working about the house, and while at the top of the ladder lost his balance, falling to the ground a considerable distance. He was brought to Muhlenberg hospital and examined. The physicians give much hope of his recovery.

Divines From the Blue Grass Region.

Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes starts on his vacation this week. The pulpit, during the first two Sundays of his absence, will be occupied by Rev. Ashley Jones, of Kentucky, and the last two Sundays by his brother, Rev. Carter Helm Jones, of Louisville. Plainfielders will remember these two divines, and will be pleased to have an opportunity of hearing them again.

A Mangled Arm.

While Mr. Deal, an employe of the Raritan Woolen Mills, was running a machine on Saturday, which separates the wool, his right hand caught in the machine. Before it could be stopped the whole arm to the shoulder was fast, and the flesh was torn from the bone.

It was necessary to amputate the arm immediately. He was then taken to his home where he is doing very well.

A Delightful Trip.

Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Vail, of Franklin place, leave this evening on the night boat for Albany and then on to Alexandria Bay and the Thousand Islands. After a short time there they will take a steamer through the Rapids on the St. Lawrence river to Montreal after which they will return by the way of Lake George and Saratoga. The trip will occupy ten or twelve days.

J.; August 25th, E. L. Walz, of La Grande avenue, this city, who is a student at the Union Theological Seminary; September 1st, to be supplied.

FESTIVITIES ON THE WATER.

CRANFORD BOATMEN AND CITIZENS HAVE A SPECTACULAR AFFAIR.

The Annaul Carnival of Boat Club Proves a Successful Affair, and is Witnessed by Multitudes of Admiring People.

"All roads lead to Rome" but Saturday evening they all seemed to lead to Cranford. A continual procession of stages, carriages and wheels poured into that place as soon as it began to grow dark and all came to attend the carnival of the Cranford Boating Association which was to be held on the Rahway river.

The carnival was a complete success, far outshining any of the former ones and reflected great credit on those in charge. And all Cranford did their best to aid the efforts of the committee, many of the private residences being handsomely decorated, of which, perhaps, those of Mrs. M. R. Bennett, Joseph Purcill, J. G. Moore and Louis A. Mather were the finest. Over a mile of the river was decorated, chiefly with Chinese lanterns, the vacant spaces being decorated by the committee and the rest by the residents along the banks. The night was a perfect one, while the pale light of the moon and the lanterns cast a delicate glow over the immense throng that lined the river bank for over a mile. The committee who arranged the entire affair, consisted of Committee G. Harvey Miller, Vice Commodore Edward Beadle, Secretary Willard N. Park, J. A. Hibson, R. T. Hibson, T. J. Clace, H. S. Sanderson, Lewis Sapher, E. K. Adams, Louis A. Mathey, George Morrison, J. P. M. Joseph, E. L. Helleker, E. W. Hale and D. H. Cardozo. The judges were ex-Freeholder Jasper C. Hunt, George F. Cram and Mr. Tree. A new paddle was the prize for the best decorated canoe, a pair of oars for the best float and another pair for the best decorated row boat.

About one hundred boats turned out, most of which were very prettily decorated. A Mississippi flat boat with a musical crew; a float with a pretty scene from "Midsummer Night's Dream" representing Titania, Bottom and Puck; an Indian with canoe and wigwam all combined were among those that attracted special attention.

The committee announced the following prize winners: Canoe prize—paddles, to Howard Cox; boat prize—spoon oars, to W. D. Faris; float prize—spoon oars, to J. P. M. Joseph; honorable mention canoes—Messrs. McIntyre and Madden.

A Scotch Plains Woman Frightened on East Front Street.

While Mrs. Fitzgerald and her young brother, of Scotch Plains, were riding along East Front street last night near the Plains they were startled by the sudden appearance of a man in the gutter of the roadway near a woods.

The man said something which they did not hear. He then called again. This frightened the occupants of the wagon and the boy who was driving, applied the whip to the horse, who started on a rapid gait. The highwayman started after them, running fully two blocks, but he was not able to catch the vehicle.

They stopped at the hotel which is run by Mrs. Fitzgerald's brother-in-law, Wm. Lee.

The latter and his hostler started out in search of the man but were unable to get any trace of him.

Mrs. Fitzgerald and her brother were thoroughly frightened over their narrow escape.

AFRAID OF LIGHT.

W. W. Straton's Horse Injured by a Fall at Cranford

The carnival at Cranford Saturday evening, proved quite disastrous to one party of Plainfield people. The families of W. W. Straton and Justice V. W. Nash went down in Mr. Straton's carriage.

Just as Cranford was reached, the horse shied at an electric light just at the moment when several bicycles passed from behind. That was too much for him and down he fell on his side, breaking the harness badly. Will Nash was riding behind on his wheel and when the carriage came to a sudden stop his wheel shot under it and became wedged there and was only released by moving the carriage. Luckily Will was not injured.

The accident happened about eight o'clock and the party did not attend the carnival, but spent the time in recovering from the accident.

The floral tributes consisted of a beautiful sheaf of wheat and a wreath of English ivy.

The remains were taken to Bedminster, where a short service was held in the afternoon at the Reformed church which was conducted by the pastor, Rev. Mr. Jones. Interment was made in the church cemetery.

IT WAS A MISTAKE.

A Man in the First Presbyterian Church Almost Loses His Umbrella.

The rain had commenced to fall in torrents last evening when an amusing incident occurred in the First Presbyterian church, which might not have been so funny after all. Rev. C. E. Herring had about half finished his sermon when one of the doors in the back of the church opened and a man walked in, looked around, and, picking up an umbrella that stood by the door, started out again. Now it happened that the owner of that umbrella sat in the rear seat, and, hearing the rain pouring down, he wanted to use the umbrella himself. He jumped to his feet and ran after the borrower. "Give me that umbrella; it's mine. Your are a thief," he gently remarked as he caught up with him in the vestibule. "Excuse me," said the other, "I thought it was mine," and without another word disappeared in the darkness.

SAVED BY JUST TWO MINUTES

BICYCLISTS WERE NUMEROUS AT THE CITY COURT THIS MORNING.

Tolles Did Not Know His Lantern Was Out—A Trio Got a Ride Home and Then Had Trouble About It.

Bicycling is becoming more and more popular with Plainfield people, as was shown by the large number of cycling offenders before the city court this morning.

The first case was one for riding a bicycle without a light last Wednesday evening, and Volney F. Green pleaded not guilty to the charge. Officer Totten, who made the arrest on Watchung avenue, said that it happened at 8:15, and as the hour after sunset when lights are required was not up until two minutes later, Green was discharged.

The next two, Gregory Humes and Henry Ostermoor, did not get off as easily. They were charged by Officer Cooney of riding on the sidewalk on Liberty street a week ago last Saturday. Their excuse was that the street was blocked by the laying of the sewer pipes, but Judge Coddington did not think that sufficient cause, and gave them their choice between a fine of $5 or twenty days in the county jail. The fines were paid.

Ralph Tolles, who was arrested Saturday for riding without a light, had a better reason, as he did not know his light had gone out until the officer told him. Sentence was suspended.

The last of the bicycle riders was Emin Jarmand, who was arrested in Evona by Officer Hartpence for riding on the sidewalk. Most of the cyclists ride on the sidewalk there, but Jarmand was the unlucky one to be caught He paid his fine of $5.

The adjourned case of four men quarreling and fighting at Tunison's stable on Sycamore street was the next. William Waldron, Thomas Humble, and Patrick Keller went riding on their wheels week before last, and when the party arrived at South Plainfield, one of the wheels broke down. William C. Laine, the colored driver for Watson J. Tunison, was about to start for Plainfield, and allowed the three white men to put their wheels in and ride home. No trouble occurred until Plainfield was reached, when they wanted Laine to drive them home. He refused, as the horses were tired and needed their food. A heated argument arose, and ended by Laine putting Keller out of the barn which they had then reached. Humble behaved himself and had nothing to do with the quarrel, but thanked Laine and went home. On him and Laine the judge suspended sentence; but Waldron and Keller had their choice between paying $5 or going to jail for twenty days. They both preferred to pay cash.

At the request of George W. DeMeza, the counsel for the defendant in the Dennis Kane case, the trial for trespassing on coal cars, was adjourned until Monday, August 12th, at nine o'clock a. m.

MANY STRUCK DOWN

Lightning Visits a Quakertown, N. J., Church.

At Least Twenty Persons Prostrated and Rendered Unconscious—A Few Seriously Injured—Clothing Torn from a Man and a Woman's Corset Steels Melted.

Flemington, N. J., Aug. 5.—The words of a fervent benediction had scarcely left the lips of Rev. Mr. Bowman, in the Methodist church at Quakertown, seven miles above here, yesterday afternoon when there came a blinding flash of lightning and a terrifying burst of thunder that all but wrecked the little building. The bolt entered the church and injured a score of people, several of them probably fatally. The list of those most seriously injured follows: James Hoff, Minnie Frace, Miss K. Hoffman, Asa Bannon, the sexton, and Mrs. Bowman, wife of the pastor.

At Least Twenty Injured.

The bolt seemed to enter the edifice by the basement shooting up through the floor and bursting with the force of a huge cannon. Members of the congregation who had started to leave or were standing in groups conversing with each other were thrown into a wild panic, while at least twenty of them received injuries more or less severe. Amid the tumult of screaming women and crying children, the groans of the injured there was a stampede of frightened horses under the sheds outside. A number of them broke their tethers and ran away, wrecking the carriages to which they were attached and dashing down sections of fencing.

Parsonage Converted Into a Hospital

Pastor Bowman and scores of willing hands were soon at work among the stricken ones. A number of them were unconscious and it was thought at first they had been killed outright. They were laid upon pew cushions. The parsonage, which adjoins the church was converted into a hospital, all the beds being pressed into service. Drs. Snyder of Quakertown and Frace of Clinton quickly responded to calls upon them and attended the sufferers.

Her Clothing Torn in Shreds.

Miss Minnie Frace was standing close to the side wall of the vestibule with her back toward the wall. The bolt struck her on the back of the head. It passed around her body and down her back and legs to the floor. Her clothing was torn into shreds and stripped from her. Even her shoes and stockings were torn apart and away from her body. So intense was the heat that her watch guard was melted, and the timepiece looks as though it had gone through a furnace. It stopped at 12:10, a grim record of the cruel visitant. Miss Frace's life is dispaired of. The burns on the young woman's body were terrible. The course of the fluid could be traced from the time it entered her body until it left it. There was a black streak showing the course of the current.

Her Hat Torn from Her Head.

Mrs. Bowman, who stood near Miss Frace, was also thrown down by the explosion. Her hat was torn from her head and a steel ripped clean out of her corset. She is still unconscious from the shock. All the clothing except the upper undervest was torn from Sexton Bannon, while his shoes looked as though they had been run through a corn sheller, being literally cut to pieces. He is suffering from the shock and can hardly recover.

Came Through the Floor.

Examination of the building after the excitement had subsided somewhat showed that the bolt had struck an outer wall, ran down to the basement, sixty feet along the joists and shot up through the floor like a huge bullet. The large bell in the tower was loosened from its hangings and only a slender strip of scantling kept it from crashing down upon the heads of scores of people at the doorway.

RACE WAR AT PRINCETON, ILL.

Negro Men, Women and Children Assaulted by Italians.

Princeton, Ill., Aug. 5.—A race war has broken out at Springvalley. Negroes killed an Italian Saturday night and the Italians yesterday headed by a brass band marched to No. 3 shaft three miles distant and almost cleaned out the negroes. Over a score of the negroes were terribly injured. They include men, women and children, and were shot, clubbed, stoned and trampled upon. Age, youth or sex was not considered by the bloodthirsty Italians. The women were insulted, slapped, and two of them while begging for mercy, were shot down and fatally injured. Sheriff Clark of Princeton was telegraphed and arrived on the ground with a posse, but came too late, as the work had long been done before he arrived. The negroes fled terror-stricken to the hills and last night slept under the trees. Many of the injured will die.

Riot Near Washington.

Washington, Aug. 5.—A riot occurred at Riverside park near Mount Vernon yesterday afternoon, and as a result Roy Beach and a man named Evans are probably fatally injured. Thomas Brown, Thomas Downey and three sons and two brothers by the name of Evans were also badly punished. The trouble was the outgrowth of a long standing quarrel between Downey and the Browns. The fight created a panic among the 500 women and children who were in the park.

MANY RUSES ADOPTED.

New York Saloon Keepers Resist Sunday Closing Law.

New York, Aug. 5.—To get evidence that is required to convict excise violators yesterday was difficult. To see that the law was violated in many places was the experience of the majority who kept a lookout for such things. While the police arrests were fewer the saloon keepers were more cautious than they have been heretofore. All kinds of devices were resorted to. In some cases the interior of a saloon would look deserted. The observer was puzzled to know where the string of men that came in and out of a neighboring door went to and came from. Investigation showed that a temporary bar had been rigged up in some place where customers could be served and not be seen from the street. There was a rumor that one saloon had a deceptive looking curtain strung across the centre of an innocent looking place, and that behind this the thirsty drank to their heart's content. The most flagrant violations were along Park row and Chatham square. All up Third avenue was seen an occasional policeman guarding a saloon. The officials made it a rule to station men in uniform in front of all saloons suspected of doing business. They stay there until they are convinced that the place has stopped doing business. The East Thirty-fifth street station had fifty men on such duty during the afternoon and still did not have enough men to guard all suspicious places, while the West Thirtieth street station in the Tenderloin had only nine such men on duty.

REFORM FOR ARMENIA.

The Porte's Reply to the Powers Is Conciliatory.

Constantinople, Aug. 5.—The reply of the Porte, made on August 1, to the communication of the powers demanding reform in Armenia is conciliatory in tone and promises compliance with many of the provisions demanded. It proposes to appoint Christain assessors to assist the provincial governors, to select sub-governors and police from Mussulmans and Christians, to inspect and improve the prisons, to introduce measures for the prevention of violence and abuses, and to check the excesses of the Kurds during their migrations, and to try to induce them to settle in some particular locality. The answer criticizes the suggested reform of the taxes and some of the other points produced by the powers, contending that they are not practical.

FATAL LIGHTNING.

One Man Killed and a Barn Destroyed at Altoona, Pa.

Altoona, Pa., Aug. 5.—During a heavy thunder storm yesterday afternoon a large barn belonging to David Bell, on the outskirts of the city, was struck by lightning and burned, together with its contents. About the same time a wandering family from Williamsport, Pa., sought shelter under a tree near Duncansville. The tree was struck and one of the family, a young man named John H. Miller, killed. Mrs. Miller was so badly burned by the electric fluid that it is thought she will die. Two other members of the family, a boy and a girl, were severely injured.

AMERICAN PILGRIMS.

A Party of Two Hundred Received by the Pope.

Rome, Aug. 5.—Nine of the American pilgrims who recently arrived here, headed by the national flag, proceeded to the consistory hall at the vatican at 8 o'clock yesterday morning. They were joined there by others until 200 were present, when they attended mass, which was celebrated by the pope. Afterwards they defiled before his holiness, who was seated on his throne, and who addressed a few kindly words to all present and directed that silver medals be presented to them. The ceremonies were concluded by the chanting by the pilgrims of a hymn in acclamation of the pope.

The 5 1-10 miles between Landover and Anacosta were covered in three minutes a rate equal to 102 miles per hour. This, it is claimed, beats the record for rapid railroad travel.

Gathering of Showmen.

Syracuse, N. Y., Aug. 5.—There was a sort of harvest home festival of showmen at the Yates hotel in this city yesterday. NO AMERICANS KILLED

Only British Were the Victims at Kuchen.

Thirteen Missionaries in All Butchered by Chinese—Death the Least Part of the Sufferings of the Assassinated Women—Experience of Survivors Terrible.

Washington, Aug. 5.—The state department has received later intelligence of the killing of the missionaries in Kuchen, China. The dispatch was from Consul-General Jernigan, and shows that no Americans were killed.

Thirteen Were Killed.

London, Aug. 5.—The Telegraph will to-day print a dispatch from Shanghai stating that the massacre at Kucheng occurred on July 31. The officials suppressed the news for three days. The names of the killed are: Miss Elsie Marshall, Miss Annie Gordon, Miss Bessie Newcombe and Miss Flora Stewart, all of the English Zenana mission: Miss Nellie Saunders, Miss Topsy Saunders, Rev. Dr. Stewart and Mrs. Stewart, of the Church Missionery society. Five of Mr. and Mrs. Stewart's children were killed, and two survive. One had one knee broken, and the other, a baby, lost an eye. The following were saved: Miss Hartwell, of the American mission: Miss Codrington, of the English Zenana mission, and Rev. H. S. Phillips, of the English Church Missionary society.

Death the Least Suffering.

United States Consul Hixon, who is stationed at Foochow, with a party of volunteers, upon receipt of the news of the massacre, started on a steam launch for the scene and has returned, bringing with him the wounded Americans. The experience of the survivors were terrible. They say that death was the least part of the sufferings of the butchered women.

CUBAN REVOLUTION.

Insurgents Take Sixty Prisoners—Five Spies Hanged.

Santiago de Cuba, July 24, via Key West, Fla., Aug. 5.—In this district of Cuba after some days of quiet the insurgents are again beginning to make themselves felt. Another engagement has taken place at Baire, the town where the first insurgents gathered at the beginning of the present revolution. The place was garrisoned by a lieutenant and sixty soldiers. On July 20 a detachment of 2,000 rebels under the leader Rabi appeared there and demanded that the garrison surrender, whereupon the single officer with his sixty troops entrenched themselves in a church and kept the rebels at bay for a day and a half. At the end of that time, however, the lieutenant surrendered with his men. The rebels, after disarming the surrendered soldiers, let them go free, but they held the officer prisoner. Then, after having hanged five or six persons as spies, they left Baire.

Anxious for News from Bayamo.

The rebel leader, Rabi, mentioned above, is the same who the Spaniards said was killed in the battle with Captain General Campos between Manzanillo and Bayamo over a week ago. In regard to that affair nothing authoritative is as yet known here. Communication between Bayamo and Manzanillo seems to be almost entirely cut off, and everybody here is eagerly awaiting some important news of the engagement. The writer of this letter saw yesterday a letter from Bayamo saying that during the engagement Captain General Campos had the heel blown off his right shoe and cane broken by a bullet from the enemy, and that before he reached Bayamo, he became so exhausted from walking that some of his attendants had to make a litter for him and carry him into the city on it.

Gomez's Proclamation.

Great excitement prevails among Cuban sugar planters and cattle dealers on account of a proclamation issued by Maximo Gomez on July 1. In it he forbids cattle dealers to take cattle into the cities under penalty of death, and also forbids the grinding of sugar cane, declaring that he will destroy the sugar cane and apparatus and burn the buildings of those who continue working, and that they will be considered as traitors.

Campos Hemmed In.

New York, Aug. 5.—Estrada Palma, the Cuban delegate, made the following official statement yesterday: "We believe that Gen. Martinez Campos is hemmed in unable to move until reinforcements reach him, and we have received information that the reserves he called for from Santiago, Santa Clara and other places have been intercepted and held back. My correspondent writing from Manzanillo," Senor Palma continued, "places Campos' force at 9,000 men, including those ill and wounded, and estimates that not more than a third are fit for fighting. Both Antonio and Jose Maceo are outside of Bayamo with more than 5,000 armed insurgents. I can assure all that next news from Bayamo will be of a startling nature. The Spanish press in Cuba, with the exception of three papers, are showing a disposition to accord us fair treatment. This is a great point gained, because to win we must have the aid of the press. In the ten years' war the entire Spanish press was against us. The rumor that General Campos' son was wounded in the battle of Valenzuela, which was at first strenuously denied, has been confirmed, the fact having been published in the Havana Express and republished in the newspapers.

SHATTERED BY A BOMB

Anarchist Killed While Attempting Murder.

Fired Five Shots at a Mine Owner and Is Himself Killed by the Premature Explosion of a Bomb He Carried—His Dead Body Kicked by His Father.

Paris, Aug. 5.—News has been received here of a dastardly attempt to murder M. Vuillemin, the managing director of the coal mines at Aniche, eight miles from Douai, in the department of Nord. A monster banquet had been prepared for the celebration yesterday of the completion of the fiftieth year of M. Vuillemen's connection with the mines. After mass had been celebrated in the morning, M. Vuillemin, surrounded by a party of engineers and shareholders in the mines, was standing under the church porch, when an anarchist miner named Camille Decoux, who had been dismissed from the service of the company after the strike of 1893, approached and fired five shots from a revolver at him. Three of the bullets took effect, one striking M. Vuillemin in the cheek, another in the hand and another in the back, inflicting serious but not dangerous wounds.

Killed with His Own Bomb.

After emptying his revolver Decoux was preparing to throw a bomb which he had concealed about his person, when by some means the infernal machine exploded prematurely, disemboweling the would-be murderer and hurling his writhing body a distance of several feet from where he had been standing. Ten of the bystanders were slightly injured by the explosion. Decoux was carried to the mayoralty house, but died immediately after his his arrival there. The attempt upon M. Vuillemin's life has created the most intense excitement throughout the district.

Kicked by His Father.

After the bomb exploded, Decoux's father, who was among those gathered about the entrance to the church, became greatly excited, and rushed to the spot where his son lay and began to kick him, all the time screaming "Canaille!" "Assassin!" and the combined efforts of several witnesses of the assault were necessary to restrain him. The force of the explosion threw down several of the bystanders, but only four persons were injured. All the windows of an inn in the vicinity were shattered.

SAYS HE IS NOT CRAZY.

Ex-Mayor Magowan Returns to Trenton.

Trenton, N. J., Aug. 5.—Ex-mayor Frank A. Magowan, whose departure from this city ten days ago precipitated the appointment of receivers for the Eastern and the Trenton Rubber companies, of which he was the president and general manager, returned to Trenton last evening. He says he has ample securities to raise all the money necessary to take both companies out of the receiver's hands by paying off the protested notes, and that this will be done. He claims it will require only $30,000. Magowan also says that he will contest the mechanics lien executions against his residence, as they were disputed bills. The judgments were obtained, however, through his allowing the suits to go by default.

Says He Is Not Crazy.

Magowan admits that Mrs. Barnes, the wife of his former manager, went to Chicago with her mother, sister and brother on the same train that he did, but says they were with relatives in that city and that he has not see them since last Monday. He laughs at the claim of his father that he is crazy, and says he will go to work at once and get everything straightened out.

WHITE HOUSE RENOVATION.

An Unusual Amount of Changes Being Made This Season.

Washington, Aug. 5.—The annual renovation of the White house in the absence of the president's family means more this year than usual. Beside the ordinary cleaning and painting a number of changes will be made. The most important of these is the new doorway at the rear of the red room. This has been done in order to facilitate the egress of the guests at receptions and obviate the necessity of having to make their way through the dense throng that usually on such occasions make the inner corridor almost impassable. This new doorway has been cut to correspond in every ways with the beautiful old fashioned ones that lead respectively to the red and green rooms. The last important finishing touches of polish that will bring out the rosewood to perfection alone remain to be given. In the east room the furniture will be entirely recovered in gold colored satin damask, similar to that now in use. The curtains will be renewed and there will also be a new carpet, so that the effect will be that of general newness throughout this, the most imposing apartment in the White house where strangers oftenest congregate to greet the chief executive.

FRENCH REPORTER ARRESTED

He Had Gone to Alsace-Lorraine To Describe the Fetes.

Paris, Aug. 5.—A reporter for the Gaulois, who was sent to Alsace-Lorraine to describe the fetes to be held there in commemoration of the reconquering of the province by the Germans in 1870, telegraphs that he has been arrested and is to be expelled from the province.

WHY CHINESE ARE BARRED.

The Mongolian Merchants Are Too Prosperous in Nicaragua.

Washington, Aug. 5.—In a report to the state department Consul O'Hara at San Juan del Norte tells why Nicaragua does not permit Chinese to longer land at ports on the eastern coast of that country, as was briefly mentioned in a dispatch some days ago. The report says that prior to 1886 there were no Chinese in Nicaragua. In that year a few were brought into the country as plantation hands. In this work they were found to be inferior to natives and when discharged they went to mining or gardening and a few to shopkeeping. From time to time others came into the country, and in March of this year the Chinese population of the department of Zalaya reached 800. Between March and May of this year about 175 Chinese landed at Bluefields, some from Costa Rica but a majority from New Orleans. Most of the Chinese are miners. They work their own claims, live for little and do not become discouraged if their findings are small. The Chinese merchants who have established themselves have become strong competitors of the white merchants, not only in the sale of goods but in the purchase of gold, rubber and other production of the country.

LIABLE TO IMPEACHMENT.

Ballou Warns Secretary Carlisle Regarding Proposed Bull Fights.

New York, Aug. 5.—The following letter has been directed to Secretary of the Treasury Carlisle: "It is announced that ten bulls have been shipped from the City of Mexico to the Atlanta exposition for the purpose of giving exhibitions of bull fights. I am informed by counsel that my appeal to the president from your department's decision, admitting these bulls, acts as a stay. You should therefore hold the bulls at the frontier port of entry pending the decision of the president. Inasmuch as your decision has had the effect of encouraging the importation of bulls, and as bull fights are being announced in various quarters of the country in consequence, I have no reason to believe that the president will uphold your decision, which was a misconstruction of a section of the tariff law, which in effect seeks to exclude all things of immoral use. Certainly, if you admit the bulls pending the decision of the president, I am of the opinion that you will be liable to impeachment at the next session of congress under the statutes. I have the honor to be faithfully yours,

"WILLIAM HOSEA BALLOU."

WRECK NEAR PEMBERTON.

Engineer Killed and a Number of Passengers Fatally Injured.

Phoenixville, Pa., Aug. 5.—The passenger train on the Pickering Valley railroad due here at 8.40 last night ran into a cow a short distance from Pemberton. The engine left the track, several cars following it over a steep embankment. The engineer, Joseph Brown, was instantly killed and the fireman dangerously injured, while half a dozen passengers were perhaps fatally injured. A score of Salvation army soldiers were on the train. The wreck occurred near the spot where so many members of the Pennypacker family were killed in a wreck some years ago.

ALFARO ADVANCING.

All Towns in His Route Have Submitted.

New York, Aug. 5.—A dispatch from Panama says: Guayaquil, Ecuador, advices state that a report has just been received in Guayaquil which says that General Alfaro has intercepted important dispatches from General Sarasti to his confidential agents on the coast. These dispatches disclose the fact that General Sarasti is not prepared to give battle, and that he has already began the work of abandoning the positions he now holds. General Alfaro is advancing with his army without difficulty. He finds no obstacle in his path. All the towns in his route have submitted to him.

AND ALL OVER BLOOMERS.

An Aged Couple Fight and the Old Man Loses His Whiskers.

Eaton, O., Aug. 5.—Mrs. John Quill and her husband quarrelled the other night over the question whether or not their daughter should wear bloomers. The Quills are old people, wealthy and have a family of grown up children. Quill is 75 years old and very feeble, but he advocated bloomers. They quarrelled viciously, and finally Mrs. Quill attempted to pull out her husband's whiskers. No succeeding she cut them off. The fight was so bitter that both the old people are under a physician's care and it is feared Mrs. Quill will become insane.

Several women fainted, but aside from a few bruises no one was hurt. Everybody was righted and the services proceeded.

NEARLY COST HIS LIFE

Barnes Knows How It Feels To Be Smothered.

While Theorizing with a Friend on the Holmes Cases He Allows Himself To Be Shut in an Iron Vault and Was Removed in an Unconscious Condition.

Chicago, Aug. 5.—Walter Barnes and Frank Williams were theorizing on the Holmes' case Saturday night while sitting in the rear part of O. A. Hesla & Company's jewelry store, 570 West Madison street. All the grewsome details had been recalled one by one and the conversation became decidedly interesting to both young men. It finally assumed the form of an argument over the merits of the different methods supposed to have been employed by the terrible Holmes in doing away with his numerous victims. Barnes said he had heard that the feeling while being smothered to death was not as bad as drowning, and his curiosity led him to suggest to Williams that he (Barnes) would enter the vault and have the door shut—just a little while, you know—and that he would tell how it seems to a man who is about to be smothered.

The Door Would Not Budge.

Williams was nothing loth to try the experiment suggested by Barnes, and so the latter climbed into the big steel box, and curled up in the shallow vacancy between the row of drawers and the door. The heavy door swung shut and Williams pulled the lever that forces it into its jamb. He did not pull the lever clear over, but he pulled it so far that when he heard Barnes faintly calling for him to open the door a few minutes later it could not be moved. Williams jerked and tugged at the door, while the sweat came out all over him. He heard Barnes begging for his release in barely audible tones, and strained every muscle to move the door. But it remained as firm as Gibraltar and Williams shouted for help.

Too Weak To Be Heard.

O. A. Hesla heard the call from a back room in the store and in a moment he was pulling with Williams upon the door handle. The jeweler saw that no two men could move the door, and rushed wildly out on the sidewalk. He returned with half a dozen strong men and began an assault upon the vault door. A rope was fastened upon the handle, and everybody pulled. The door would not budge a hair's breadth. A crowbar was found somewhere and a vain attempt was made to pry the door open. "Are you there yet, Walter?" Frank Williams asked, too badly scared to know what he was saying. Barnes could make no reply.

Unconscious When Released.

He had been locked in twenty-five minutes and was sadly in need of a breath of fresh air, when Mr. Hesla grabbed a wrench and began to unfasten the nuts that held the lever on the door. It was the work of but a few moments and then with a mighty pull on the rope the door came open. Barnes was lifted out of the vault unconscious and black in the face, but he recovered before a doctor arrived. When asked how it felt to be smothered he made some incoherent reply. Then he said he would go out and take a walk in the fresh air. It all turned out without the services of an undertaker being required, but this is due, Mr. Hesla explained, to the fact that Frank Williams failed to push the lever of the vault door over as far as it would go.

DUEL PREVENTED.

South Carolina Society Men Must Keep the Peace for a Year.

Columbia, S. C., Aug. 5.—Hugh M. Talley and T. Moore, society men, were scheduled to fight a duel here Saturday afternoon, but Sheriff Cathcart heard of the affair during the morning and arrested both gentlemen, requiring them to give bonds to keep the peace for a year and a day. The affair grew out of a dispute at a ball at a summer resort near here Friday night. Moore, who is several years Talley's junior, accused Talley of endeavoring to make a young woman at the dance slight him and prejudice her against him by calling him a "kid." Moore demanded satisfaction, and Talley agreed to accommodate him Saturday afternoon, but the action of the sheriff prevented the meeting on the field of honor. Both young gentlemen belong to the old Bourbon stock and their families are among the most prominent in the state. They are relatives.

Garment Workers' Strike.

New York, Aug. 5.—Meyer Schoenfeld, the leader of the garment workers' strike, said to-day that the strike had not been declared off and that it would not be until the Contractors' association meets to-day and decides to accept the new agreement. About 5,000 men and women went to work in shops to-day in this city, Brownsville and Brooklyn.

Race Horses Sold.

Lexington, Ky., Aug. 5.—Nathalie, 2:28 1-2, three-year-old daughter of Simons and out of a mare by Enfield; also a three-year-old mare by Bourbon Wilkes, dam the dam of Mattie P., 2:27 1-2) by Westwood, have been purchased by Eli Xendig of Philadelphia of H. McAdams, this city, for a long price.

Rev. McCall's Condition Serious.

Chautauqua, N. Y., Aug. 5.—Rev. J. A. McCall, pastor of the First Congregational church at New Bedford, Mass., who was injured by falling from a bicycle between the Assembly grounds and Mayville Saturday night, is in a very serious condition, and his chances of recovery are very slim.

No Consolidation Probable.

Washington, Aug. 5.—While the consolidation of the two great government gun plants of the army at Watervliet, N. Y., and of the navy at Washington has been suggested, the indications at present are that the proposition will not be carried out.

Attempted Wife Murder.

Baltimore, Aug. 5.—Frederick A. De Groot fired a revolver with murderous intent at his wife, Mrs. Katie De Groot, at their home on O'Donnell street yesterday, and, failing in his purpose, turned the weapon against himself with fatal effect.

It is pretty well settled that Speaker Cross will be the Republican candidate for Judge, and that Assemblyman Codding would try for State Senator, if Senator Voorhees should get the nomination and he will try at the end of the Senator's term.—Newark Advertiser.

What do the decent people of Plainfield think of Editor Runyon of The Courier-News when he permits the bitter jealousies of his reporters to find vent in the columns of his paper in the form of aspersions on the character of the young men engaged in reportorial work on The Daily Press. Whatever this editor, who has set himself up at different times as a moral censor for the public, has to say about those editorially in charge of The Press, he can say. They are use to it. But when he permits the attacks on honorable young men, who are doing simply nothing but good work for The Press, to enter into the columns of his paper, he descends into the dirtiness of a profession which every honorable journalist will characterize as contemptible.

At Proctor's This Week.

Proctor's merry vaudeville is not only continuous, but strong in cumulative interest. Every fresh bill seems to gain in strength, as the summer wears away. Charles B. Lawlor, a witty monologist, has achieved national fame as a composer of songs, with simple words and catchy melodies that touch the popular heart. The Big 4 were the first of the acrobatic black face knockabout quartettes and have easily maintained the lead over countless imitators. Belle Black, a shapely British beauty, who came over here for burlesque and has become very successful in vaudeville, introducing new character changes. Joe Flynn has the trick of fitting droll parodies to the best known tunes of the day. Solls and Young are European comedy-acrobatic, and the Misses Rice and Halvers have a mirror dance that is novel and unique.

Electric Bitters.

Electric Bitters is a medicine suited for any season, but perhaps more generally needed in the spring, when the languid exhausted feeling prevails, when the liver is torpid and sluggish and the need of a tonic and alterative is felt. A prompt use of this medicine has often averted long and perhaps fatal bilious fevers. No medicine will act more surely in counteracting and freeing the system from the malarial poison. Headache, indigestion, constipation, dizziness yield to Electric Bitters. Only 50c per bottle at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

THE SWEETIN' APPLE TREE.

That high top sweetin' uster stand
  Right on our way to school;
Stood there to coax us boys to break
  Command, and golden rule.

Part of the tree wuz 'hind the wall,
  Part 'trudel on the road.
An' hung them sweetin' apples out
  Our appetites to goad.

Ef any boy could pass that tree
  An' not let fly a stick,
He must ha' been a angel boy
  Or else a boy that's sick.

Ol' Deakon Jinking's useter say,
  "'Tis curus unto me
Why all them sticks, an' stuns, an' clubs
  Should k'lect beneath that tree."

Oh, high top sweetin' apple tree!
  School days when we ware young!
Them very words bring smiles an' tears
  When slippin' off the tongue.

Whare air them keerless barefoot boys
  That clubbed that tree with me?
They're layin' low to shoot them boys
  As club our sweetin' tree.

How He Made It.

One of the wealthiest men in Chicago told me yesterday how he got his start in the world. It is a story that he is fond of telling in the clubs, in the ball rooms and wherever he can. He is proud of it.

"I worked two years on a farm for nothing," he said. "The third year, by the use of influence, I got the job of cleaning up the school house and making fires. I had to get up long before the crack of dawn, feed the horses on the farm, bring in water, get firewood in the kitchen and get over to the school house before any one got there. Cold? Well, a man's determination has got lots to do with that. I got along all right. Sometimes the thermometer had dropped out of sight of zero, but I didn't mind. I kept my job two years.

"Then I came to Chicago and got a job with a wholesale firm which paid me $6 a month. I had to get down at 3 o'clock in the morning and I never left before 10 o'clock at night. I never let anybody else do my work. I owned the establishment in fourteen years. We now have branches all over this country and one in Canada.

"Getting rich is the easiest thing in the world. It's lots easier than winning fame or reputation. It's just a question of work and saving. I had seven brothers and they are as poor as they were when they were born. They didn't hustle and economize. It's astonishing how fast a fortune will accumulate when it's engineered right. It gathers like a snowball—the bigger it gets the more it accumulates.

"The history and experience of nine-tenths of the rich men of Chicago are the same as mine. This is a city of self-made men."—Chicago Post.

Popular Interest in the Bible.

Our gifted Colonel Robert G. Ingersoll, has had a good deal to say for some years past in criticism of the Christian religion, and more especially of the Bible. The Colonel, as everybody knows, is a ready, graceful and magnetic speaker, and he has never had any trouble in getting a big crowd to listen to him make fun of things that are sacred to most of us. We do not intend, however, to say much about the Colonel's campaign against the Bible, but rather to refer to some recent statistics, which indicate that the Bible is not yet a back number. There is an article in the current issue of The London Quarterly Review giving facts and figures to show that never before has there been so great a demand for the Bible as there is today. In England alone about 3,000,000 copies are issued every year. In nearly every other civilized country the circulation of the Bible is simply enormous; and at the present moment there are more than 200,000,000 copies of the book in circulation in 330 different languages, while the demand for it is increasing all the time.—New York Tribune.

For Another's Greatness.

"If it hadn't been for you," observed the shade of Napoleon, accosting the shade of the Duke of Wellington, "the world might have been mine."

"That is true," the shade of the Iron Duke complacently replied. "I must confess that I was too many for you."

Together they leaned over the cloudy battlements.

"Observe," Napoleon said, with a broad, downward sweep of his arm, "thousands of books, millions of magazines, portraits my own mother wouldn't recognize—the whole world talking Napoleon."

"And what of me," the Duke said.

"Well," Napoleon patronizingly replied, "now and then you are mentioned—in a footnote, maybe."

Reflectively the Duke of Wellington turned sadly away.

"And to think," he muttered bitterly, "that I should be responsible for this man's greatness. Waterlooloo I was!"—Rockland (Me.) Tribune.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer one hundred dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

A POLITICIAN TURNS EX ORTER.

Ex-Senator Scovel Surprises His Friends—Under Moody's Auspices.

Ex-Senator James Matlack Scovel, of New Jersey, after thirty-five years of activity in politics, has turned evangelist, and, under the direction of Dwight L. Moody, will hold revival meetings throughout the United States.

Few stump orators and after dinner talkers were so favorably known in the East and West years ago as Jim Scovel. He has campaigned for all parties excepting the Prohibitionists, and now he is for cold water and religion. He was a noted political bohemian and not without a political record.

The change in the vocation of the man is a genuine surprise to the older politicians who have been familiar with his antics during the last thirty years. He was at one time President of the New Jersey State Senate.

He was a candidate for United States Senator, but was not elected, though he voted for himself. He was a fearless lobbyist, a daring political schemer and an all around politician. There are, even to this day, more political yarns in circulation about Jim Scovel than about any other New Jersey celebrity.

No matter how tough the stories, he has always been willing to stand for them. He was utilized in National campaigns, and of late years spoke principally in the West, because he had ceased to have any influence with the voters in the East.

He at one time had an extensive law practice, which dwindled away, and then he devoted his time to writing political stories for the newspapers, and occasionally contributing an interesting chapter of reminiscenes about Abraham Lincoln, with whom he was intimately acquainted, and with whom he had much influence.

Scovel in recent years has been earning a precarious living—no one has any idea exactly how. He had for a short time dropped out of sight, and would have been forgotten had it not been that he was suddenly discovered conducting a series of revival meetings in the lower part of Pennsylvania. His conversion dates back but a few months. He has cast his lot with the Baptist Church, although he was reared a Presbyterian and is the son of a Presbyterian clergyman.

Scovel presents an interesting figure at a revival, being over six feet in height, well proportioned, and gifted with oratory. He always could talk upon any subject and never said a dull thing. He is now putting his talent into his revival work, and keeps his audiences changing from laughter to tears, and from tears back to laughter.

He makes a very pathetic story out of his conversion, and does not hesitate to refer to some of his political escapades.

A Dialogue Over the Counter.

A few days ago a young matron wearing a linen shirt waist, a serge skirt and a simple sailor hat went into the suit department of a New York house and asked to see some gowns.

"Something that has some style to it and fits well," she stipulated to the elaborately got-up saleswoman who came forward to serve her.

The brown hair of the saleswoman was curled and coiffed in just the proper mode, the bugles on her bosom glittered with every movement, the crisp sleeves of her regulation black silk dress stood out at just the correct angle, and the lines of her tight, very tight-fitting corsage were so severe and stiff that it seemed that no emotion, however impassioned, could bend them into suppleness. From the standpoint of her own get-up she looked the customer over and sized her up, or thought she did.

"We have a nice assortment of gowns at $75," she announced.

"Oh! I want something a little more reasonable," said the shopper.

"A little more reasonable!" repeated the saleswoman, superciliously. "Why, no lady wears a gown that costs less than $60."

The manner more than the words irritated the listener. "Have you anything here, then, for women?" she asked, and turning to the floor-walker she asked him to find some one to wait on her who had some knowledge of gowns under $60.

An angry red deepened the perpetual blush on the saleswoman's cheek as she realized her mistake, and the next day, when she recognized that customer on the street, she glared at her.

"ONLY SKIN DEEP", yet freckles, sunburn and tan don't add to one's beauty! What then, aside from the dangerous and poisonous "skin cures" so freely advertised, can we use to clear and bleach a bad complexion? Well, why not try your grandmother's cure—lemon juice? It will surely do all that can be safely done to clear the skin. And try it in the pleasant form of REYNOLD'S LEMON JUICE AND GLYCERINE. The results will please you. Sprinkler bottles 25 cents at

CYCLING COMMENT.

On Tuesday at eight p. m., the Summit Cyclers are scheduled to run to Plainfield.

A number from New Brunswick have signified their intention of joining the century and a half run from Plainfield to Philadelphia and return.

Charles B. Brown, of Craig place, started on a bicycle ride to Elizabeth Saturday afternoon but he had only got as far as Westfield when he punctured his tire and had to return by train.

Fred White and Mr. Cramer took a cycling trip to Long Branch yesterday morning and attempted to return in the afternoon. They looked very much like drowned rats when they reached Plainfield, but they got here.

Charles B. Ford, draughtsman in Cramp's shipyard, Philadelphia, rode over from Philadelphia on his wheel Saturday afternoon to see his mother, at her home on Watchung avenue. This is the third time he has made the trip of seventy-six miles on his wheel.

L. D. Cabanne, the class B racing man who met with an accident at the recent Asbury Park meet, is fast recovering. Cabanne was riding very fast before his mishap, and he expects to soon regain his old-time speed, and give Gardiner, Bald, and the other class B men some good races.

About twenty members of the Catholic Total Abstinence Club, of Philadelphia, arrived in this city at 1:30 this afternoon on their way to New York to attend the annual convention of the society. The trip to Plainfield was successful with the exception of one accident. One of the wheels broke down this morning, but was easily repaired. They left at two o'clock. Before they return they will attend the meeting of the Connecticut Union at Norwich.

When moving into our present home I found a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm left by a former tenant. On the label I found the statement that it was good for cuts and burns. I can testify to the truth of this. Nothing in all my experience has found its equal for treating blisters or burns. F. E. Barrett, manager Le Sueur Sentinel, Le Sueur, Minn. Pain Balm is also a sure cure for rheumatism. For sale at Reynolds Pharmacy, Park and North avenues; T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

Karl's Clover Root will purify your blood, clear your complexion, regulate your bowels and make your head clear as a bell; 25c, 50c and $1. Sold by all druggists.

CHAPTER II.—THE KNOT OF RIBBON.

I think I must have fainted away; for presently I found myself upon the floor, and for a minute I could not remember what had happened. Then I remembered; and an awful, unreasoning terror seized me. "I must lock all the doors quick," I thought, "quick, or the murderer will come back!" I tried to get up, but I could not stand. I sank down again. I had to crawl out of the room on my hands and knees.

I went first to the front door. It was locked with a key and a bolt. I went next to the north door, and that was locked with a key and a bolt. I went to the north shed door, and that was bolted. Then I went to the little-used east door in the shed, beside which the cat has her little passageway, and that was fastened with an iron hook. It has no latch.

The whole house was fastened on the inside. The thought struck me like an icy hand. "The murderer is in this house!" I rose to my feet then; I unhooked that door and ran out of the house and out of the yard, as for my life.

I took the road to the village. The first house, where Phoebe Dole and Maria Woods live, is across a wide field from ours. I did not intend to stop there, for they were only women and could do nothing; but seeing Phoebe looking out of the window I ran into the yard. She opened the window.

"What is it?" said she. "What is the matter, Sarah Fairbanks?"

Maria Woods came and leaned over her shoulder. Her face looked almost as white as her white hair, and her blue eyes were dilated. My face must have frightened her.

"Father—father is murdered in his bed!" I said.

There was a scream, and Maria Woods' face disappeared from over Phoebe Dole's shoulder—she had fainted. I don't know whether Phoebe looked paler—she is always very pale—but I saw in her black eyes a look I shall never forget. I think she began to suspect me at that moment.

"FATHER IS MURDERED IN BED."

Phoebe glanced back at Maria, but she asked me another question. "Has he had words with anybody?" said she.

"Only with Rufus," I said, "but Rufus is gone." Phoebe turned away from the window to attend to Maria, and I ran on to the village.

A hundred people can testify what I did next—can tell how I called for the doctor and the deputy sheriff; how I went back to my own home with the horror-stricken crowd; how they flocked in and looked at poor father—but only the doctor touched him, very carefully, to see if he were quite dead; how the coroner came, and all the rest.

The pistol was in the bed beside father, but it had not been fired; the charge was still in the barrel. It was blood-stained, and there was one bruise on father's head which might have been inflicted by the pistol, used as a club. But the wound which caused his death was in his breast, and made evidently by some cutting instrument, though the cut was not a clean one; the weapon must have been dull.

They searched the house, lest the murderer should be hidden away. I heard Rufus Bennett's name whispered by one and another. Everybody seemed to know that he and father had had words the night before; I could not understand how, because I had told nobody except Phoebe Dole, who had had no time to spread the news, and I was sure that no one else had spoken of it.

They looked in the closet where my green silk dress hung, and pushed it aside, to be sure nobody was concealed behind it, but they did not notice anything wrong about it. It was dark in the closet, and, besides, they did not look for anything like that until later.

All these people—the deputy sheriff, and afterwards the high sheriff and other out-of-town officers for whom they had telegraphed, and the neighbors—all hunted their own suspicion, and that was Rufus Bennett. All believed that he had come back and killed my father. They fitted all the facts to that belief. They made him do the deed with a long, slender screwdriver which he had recently borrowed from one of the neighbors and had not returned. They made his finger-marks, which were still on my father's throat, fit the red prints on the sitting-room door. They made sure that he had returned and stolen into the house by the east shed door, while father and I sat on the doorsteps the evening before; that he had hidden himself away, perhaps in that very closet where my dress hung, and afterwards stolen out and killed my father and then escaped.

They were not shaken when I told them that every door was bolted and barred that morning. They themselves found all the windows fastened down, except a few which were open on account of the heat, and even these last were raised only the width of a sash, and fastened with sticks, so that they could be raised no higher. Father was very cautious about fastening the house, for he sometimes had considerable sums of money by him. The officers saw all these difficulties in the way, but they fitted them somehow to their theory, and two deputy sheriffs were at once sent to apprehend Rufus.

They had not begun to suspect me then, and not the slightest watch was kept on my movements. The neighbors were very kind, and did everything to help me, relieving me altogether of all those last offices—in this case much sadder than usual.

An inquest was held, and I told freely all I knew, except about the blood stains on my dress. I hardly knew why I kept that back. I had no feeling then that I might have done the deed myself, and I could not bear to convict myself, if I was innocent.

Two of the neighbors, Mrs. Holmes and Mrs. Adams, remained with me all that day. Toward evening, when there were very few in the house they went into the parlor to put it in order for the funeral, and I sat down alone in the kitchen. As I sat there by the window I thought of my green silk dress, and wondered if the stains were out. I went to the closet and brought the dress out to the light. The spots and streaks had almost disappeared. I took the dress out in the shed and scraped off the flour paste, which was quite dry; I swept up the paste, burned it in the stove, took the dress upstairs to my own closet, and hung it in its old place. Neighbors remained with me all night.

At 3 o'clock in the afternoon of the next day, which was Thursday, I went over to Phoebe Dole's to see about a black dress to wear to the funeral. The neighbors had urged me to have my black silk dress altered a little and trimmed with crape.

I found only Maria Woods at home. When she saw me she gave a little scream and began to cry. She looked as if she had already been weeping for hours. Her blue eyes were bloodshot.

"Phoebe's gone over to—Mrs. Whitney's to—try on her dress," she sobbed.

"I want to get my black silk dress fixed a little," said I.

"She'll be home—pretty soon," said Maria.

I laid my dress on the sofa and sat down. Nobody ever consults Maria about a dress. She sews well, but Phoebe does all the planning.

Maria Woods continued to sob like a child, holding her little soaked handkerchief over her face. Her shoulders heaved. As for me I felt like a stone; I could not weep.

"Oh," she gasped out finally, "I knew, I knew! I told Phoebe—I knew just how it would be; I—knew!"

I roused myself at that. "What do you mean?" said I.

"When Phoebe came home Tuesday night and said she heard your father and Rufus Bennett having words, I knew how it would be," she choked out. "I knew he had a dreadful temper."

"Did Phoebe Dole know Tuesday night that father and Rufus Bennett had words?" said I.

"Yes," said Maria Woods.

"How did she know?"

"She was going through your yard, the short cut to Mrs. Ormsby's, to carry her brown alpaca dress home. She came right home and told me; and she overheard them."

"Have you spoken of it to anybody but me?" said I.

Maria said she didn't know; she might have done so. Then she remembered hearing Phoebe herself speak of it to Harriet Sargent when she came in to try on her dress. It was easy to see how people knew about it.

I did not say any more, but I thought it was strange that Phoebe Dole had asked me if father had had words with anybody when she knew it all the time.

Phoebe came in before long. I tried on my dress, and she made her plan about the alterations and the trimming. I made no suggestions. I did not care how it was done, but if I had cared it would have made no difference. Phoebe always does things her own way. All the women in this village are in a manner under Phoebe Dole's thumb. Their garments are visible proofs of her force of will.

While she was taking up my black silk on the shoulder seams, Phoebe Dole said: "Let me see—you had a green silk dress made at Digby three summers ago, didn't you?"

"Yes," I said.

"Well," said she, "why don't you have it dyed black? Those thin silks dye real nice. It would make you a good dress."

I scarcely replied, and then she offered to dye it for me herself. She had a recipe which she had used with great success. I thought it very kind of her, but did not say whether I would accept her offer or not. I could not fix my mind upon anything but the awful trouble I was in.

"I'll come over and get it to-morrow morning," said Phoebe.

I thanked her. I thought of the stains, and then my mind seemed to wander away again to the one object.

All the time Maria Woods sat weeping. Finally Phoebe turned to her with impatience. "If you can't keep calmer, you'd better go upstairs, Maria," said she. "You'll make Sarah sick. Look at her! she doesn't give way—and think of the reason she's got."

"I've got reason, too," Maria broke out; then, with a piteous shriek, "Oh, I've got—reason!"

"Maria Woods, go out of the room!" said Phoebe. Her sharpness made me jump, half dazed as I was.

Maria got up without a word and went out of the room, bending almost double with convulsive sobs.

"She's been dreadful worked up over your father's death," said Phoebe calmly, going on with the fitting. "She's terribly nervous. Sometimes I have to be real sharp with her, for her own good."

I nodded. Maria Woods has always been considered a sweet, weakly, dependent woman, and Phoebe Dole is undoubtedly very fond of her. She has seemed to shield her and take care of her nearly all her life. The two have lived together since they were young girls.

Phoebe is tall and very pale and thin; but she never has a day's illness. She is plain, yet there is a kind of severe goodness and faithfulness about her colorless face, with the smooth bands of white hair over her ears.

I went home as soon as my dress was fitted. That evening Henry Ellis came over to see me. I do not need to go into details concerning that visit. It is enough to say that he tendered the fullest sympathy and protection, and I accepted them. I cried a little, for the first time, and he soothed and comforted me.

"MARIE WOODS, GO OUT OF THE ROOM!"

Henry had driven over from Digby and tied his horse in the yard. At 10 o'clock he bade me good night on the doorstep and was just turning his buggy around when Mrs. Adams came running to the door.

"Is this yours?" said she, and she held out a knot of yellow ribbon.

"Why, that's the ribbon you have around your whip, Henry," said I.

He looked at it. "So it is," he said. "I must have dropped it. He put it into his pocket and drove away.

"He didn't drop that ribbon to-night!" said Mrs. Adams. "I found it Wednesday morning out in the yard. I thought I remembered seeing him have a yellow ribbon on his whip."

SOFT BLACK EYES.

What a trivial thing will color the whole of a man's life! How small an incident compared to the large future he has mapped for himself, may make or mar it! I learned all this and more one sultry May day in Mexico five years ago.

I had been sent to Mexico as chief of a surveying corps to establish the boundaries of the Santa Anita grant, which lay along the Rio Claro just outside the city of Chihuahua. It was a responsible position for a young man, and I held my head high.

It was the day of La Fiesta de San Guadalupe. The saint himself had been dead, I understood several hundred years, but in Mexico that doesn't make any difference; the longer they are dead the more they are thought of and the bigger a birthday party they have. Almost every other week contains the feast day of some saint or saintess and trade and commerce are suspended to do the occasion justice.

The natives of Mexico are the most perennially pious people on earth. Why, I have known them—men in my own employ—to be so enthused over the posthumous birthday of some long dead saint that they would get up in the gray dawn to go about celebrating it. This morning—the morning of Guadalupe's feast day—the whole force of peons under me had struck. No chainman, no flagman, no axeman was left me. Only Sims and Bailey, my two American assistants, stayed behind. When I began abusing them for the customs of Mexico, they said while they did not care remotely for the saint to whom it was dedicated, still they were glad it was a holiday, and they thought they would go up stream and fish awhile. They were only indifferent laymen, without any religious feeling.

When I was left alone in camp I spent a short time on my field notes, when it came over me that I was wasting the day. Just outside the chaparral the river was laughing and murmuring in the open. It seemed to ask me to walk beside it. The adobe huts along its banks were tenantless; their inmates had gone to the feast.

But, strange sight, there at the bend of the river where the waters were the merriest, was a solitary worker, and whatever she was doing she was doing with a vim. A dark-eyed, dark-haired daughter of Spain she seemed to be, and yet she was working—and working hard—on a feast day!

A fit of curiosity seized me to know what she was doing, and why she was doing it. I approached her with the question on my lips; at what did she work, and por-kay? (I spell it as I said it). Softly she raised a pair of melting orbs, and sweetly and eloquently she answered me.

From her reply, in the most musical language in the world, I gathered that she would be at the feast, but that she must cleanse the soiled linen that lay around her on the sand, for the owner of it, a gentleman who was staying at the United States Hotel, wanted it by noon, and to-morrow would not do (she said this plaintively). If it were not done by noon, she finished most pathetically, she would get no dinero, and that she needed in the superlative degree. Dinero! Ah, the next most potent thing in Mexico to saints' day is money.

As her red lips told me this, her great black eyes wandered from the soiled clothes at her feet to the spires of the cathedral in the distance and the waving foliage of the plaza where the feasting and merry making were going on. There was a look of sadness and longing in them as she gazed. Being a tender hearted man, I asked her if there was aught I could do for her. In a wonderful mixture of Anglo-Spanish, which I invented while in Mexico, and which no one could ever master but myself, I assured her I was at her service if she so desired, and asked how I could assist her.

The black eyes flashed gratitude ere the scarlet mouth said, in silver sweet tones: "Would I sit on a rock beside her and rub the shirts of the gentleman on a large rock with a very small rock?"

Looking back now in the light of maturer wisdom, I can see that I should have declined that job on the ground that it was too unæsthetic. But—I didn't. On the contrary, I accepted it effusively. There was a touch of romance about it that appealed to me—the day itself appealed to me for the first time. I began to feel something of the enthusiasm for feast days that had taken my men out before daybreak. I would not be so hard on them again, I thought.

Truly it was a very pretty custom, and I began to sympathize with it and to understand it better. If San Guadalupe had not been so long interred, in the gladness of my heart I would have sent him a bouquet. All this I tried to confide to Lucia. It touched her; it sounded, she said, like stories she had read in the convent.

Her name was a poem in itself: Lucia Eulalia Garcia y Valdez. And mine? After that poem it seemed common to say that I was plain "Jack Biggs." But she anticipated me; she pointed to one of my business cards that had escaped my vest pocket when I threw it on the sand. "Meester Beegs, que no?" she lisped, and it did not sound at all badly from her lips.

It was pleasant to know she did not dislike my name; this was one way of saying, as everybody knows, that its owner was not disagreeable to her.

As we talked we washed, and long before noon the gentleman's shirts were all floating in the breeze from the low chaparral along the river bank.

Lucia Eulalia glanced gratefully and alternately at the snowy linen and at me. My natural thoughtfulness led me to suggest that we might do the family washing while we were about it. Her brother Antonio, the sheepherder whom she had mentioned with sisterly affection—did not his things have need of water? "There was no time like the present, I said; we might set in to-morrow and rain for months—who knows?"

Lucia Eulalia looked at the contradicting blue of the skies, and laughed at my weather prophecies, but she ran to her adobe dwelling a few rods away and brought from it a bundle of Antonio's "things." They had apparently been waiting for me for years. His wardrobe ranged from bandanas to dingier overalls. As I warmed up to the ambitious task of cleansing them, under Lucia Eulalia's approving smiles, all nature seemed to smile; the sun shone warm and warmer; the river ran blue and bluer—for Lucia had "blued" it. She had also "allowed" the root of a whole soap tree to Antonio's garments. She was right in doing this, but, somehow, in my struggle with the sheepherding stains of six months, I had distributed a good deal of lather over my person. When this unaccustomed fatigue began to show on me, Lucia Eulalia asked softly if I "had tire."

"Oh, no!" I was declaring, "I have no tire," when some approaching American voices were heard. Lucia clapped her hands tragically, and, running to the chaparral, began hastily to gather the linen therefrom. I caught from her manner that the owner of the shirts had tired of waiting and was coming for them. I had divined aright, but I had not divined far enough. As they emerged from the alameda to the west of the river, I could see they were a lady and gentleman. I had almost managed a look of industry and innocence, as they approached us, and raised my eyes to impress them with it, when—gracious saints!

Guadalupe and great Jehosaphat! Was that Maxwell! The man I had robbed of the valedictory in '87 at Ann Arbor? True, I had no grudge against him on that account, but my dream of meeting him again and "making it right" had not been like this! Maxwell it was, with his stylish bride. He threw me a careless glance at first; then I began to dawn on him, slowly but surely. He quizzed Lucia in miserable Spanish, in a cowardly way, I thought.

"Quien es?" he said, indicating me.

Smilingly, as if pleased so to honor me, Lucia presented me to Maxwell and his wife as "Miamigo, Senor Beegs." I could feel that the blueing, and the soap root, and the river water were all mingling in one grand river of perspiration toward the collar of my negligee shirt. I could feel that all the constellations in the heavens and all the mundane landscape around me were waltzing giddily together. An intense longing for home and mother came over me that mere words cannot depict. For one wild moment I thought I would rush into my old chum's arms and tell him all, like the wronged hero in the last act. I would say vehemently:

"This is-not-me-reglar business-I'm-a-civil-engineer-at-$250-a-month-I'm-only-doing-this-for-fun," etc. But while I was thinking this—how often are our best intentions thwarted thus!—Maxwell coughed. It was not a consumptive cough. It was just a little grating sound that contained more painful surprise, and pity, and regret than a volume of Browning could. That freze me as I stood—or sat. Fixedly I gazed at the Sierra Madres over his head, as if trying to fathom the "lost" mines hidden there.

Maxwell's watch ticked in the painful silence.

"Alice," he said, sternly, "we must not miss that train."

Out of my life they went, with the clothes I had washed for them, as suddenly as they came in. I strained my ears to hear him say, "Poor fellow! To come to that—rather bright at college, but this country seems to rob a fellow of ambition——" Maxwell, I knew, was never a secretive man; they were going East, and, well——

Lucia Eulalia gathered up the extra coins he had thrown her for me and said, softly: "Have you sad, senor?"

"Yes," I said, "I have sadness, also sickness; I would go back to camp at once."

As I drew on my spattered coat and vest over tired arms, I said, almost earnestly: "Lucia Eulalia Garcia y Valdez, I shall never forget this day of the fiesta of San Guadalupe."

An Impossible Grocer.

A story is told of a grocer engaged in business in a London suburb, to the effect that he once declined to attend a very popular concert, even though a free ticket was offered him.

"Yes," he said to the person who offered him the ticket, "if I went I'd see some people who owe me money for groceries, and it would spoil my fun, and the sight would spoil theirs. I'll say good-night."—Harper's Round Table.

HOT WEATHER EDUCATION.

SCHOOL BOARD MEETS IN REGULAR MONTHLY SESSION.

Collector's Report Received—Bills Audited—School Repairs Are Nearly Completed—A Janitor Appointed.

A regular meeting of the Board of Education was held in the High School building last evening, but there was little to do beside routine business. When the meeting was called to order those present were Messrs. Lovell, Finch and Lounsbury. Mr. Lovell was elected temporary chairman. The minutes of the meetings of July 1st and July 12th were read and approved. While they were being read Dr. Probasco arrived and took his position as presiding officer.

The following bills were then approved and ordered paid:

Oscar S. Teale, surveying	$ 25.00

C. E. Harris, painting	13.00

The bill of A. M. Griffen for $38.27 was ordered to be paid if found correct.

The report of the collector John Johnson showed a total collection of $344.17 with interest amounting to $17.61. Checks of $325 and $600 were ordered to be drawn to pay interest due September 1st.

Mr. Lounsbury, as committee on repairs, reported that all the repairs had been practically finished with the exception of those in the High School building and that they were now under way and the fire escapes were partly up. He also spoke of the great improvement made to the Washington school by putting in the additional windows in the basement. The Board held an executive session to consider who should be the new janitor in the Washington building.

The resignation of W. V. Mundy was accepted and the following resolution passed by the Board:

Resolved. That the Board accept the resignation of Mr. W. V. Mundy with regret, and desire to express their appreciation of his long and faithful services extending over a period of more than twenty years as janitor of the Washington building.

The twenty-one applications for the position were considered and after due deliberation, Charles E. Harris was appointed janitor of the Washington building at a salary of $40 a month, to begin September 1st. His appointment was made subject to his being satisfactory to the Board.

MAN-HOLE FELL IN.

Workmen Were Too Anxious to Put on the Iron Cap.

An accident in connection with the work on the sewers occurred yesterday afternoon about five o'clock at the head of Church street on Front street. Honan & Sons' men were building the man-hole at that place and had completed the mason-work. It was left entirely unsupported. Two of the men attempted to place a heavy iron cap over the hole before the cement was set. The result was that the bricks gave way and the "house that Jack built" was no more. It was the fault of the men and the expense will be stood by Honan & Sons.

Life at the High School.

The repairs at the High School have at length been started. The desks have been removed from all the class rooms and the platform in Assembly Hall torn down. Work has also been commenced on the ventilating apparatus. The fence to the boy's yard has been repaired where it needed it and the elm trees in the other yard cut down. The winter supply of coal also being put in.

Good Building Lots.

At the sale of lots on West Front street, Second street and Rock avenue on Saturday afternoon, thirty-eight lots in all were sold. Several purchasers will build this fall, notably those who bought on West Front street. J. F. MacDonald, who knows a good thing when he sees it, bought two of the Front street lots, and a block of eighteen on Second street, corner of Rock avenue. The latter plot he will dress up and put on the market for sale.

House Connections Being Made.

Under the supervision of H. C. Van Emburgh the house connections to the sewers were commenced yesterday on East Fifth street, beginning at Washington street.

BURNED UP HIS CLOTHES.

Fire at the Pump Station in the Engineer's Closet.

A water station is a rather funny place in which to have a fire but that is what occurred at the pump station of the Plainfield Water Supply Company at Netherwood during Saturday evening. The engineer, James Henderson, has a closet in which he keeps his clothes and other personal articles. When he returned to the engine room after a short absence, he found the closet in flames. A stream of water was turned on which soon extinguished the fire but not until it had destroyed his clothes and completely ruined a valuable watch.

The origin of the fire is not known, but the old story of the rats and the matches is thought as probably the reason. It may have caught however from a lamp nearby.

Mr. Dunham's Atlas.

An agent from F. A. Dunham, civil engineer and surveyor, of Plainfield, has been engaged this week in canvassing among residents of Summit for subscription for an atlas of the town which he expects to prepare in conjunction with a similar work in all the townships throughout the county. The agent met with considerable success and every property owner approached agreed to subscribe and from present indications a sufficient amount will be subscribed to warrant Mr. Dunham in pushing the work to completion. It will be a most important work and will require several months to finish.

The American Method.

The American Kindergarten system will be introduced at the Rockview Home and Day-school this fall. Miss Emily E. Coe, the originator of the system, is a practical and successful educator of thirty years standing. The Froebel principles are applied to all work, which is intendrd to range from three to twelve years. The programme changes every twenty minutes and the child in the most delightful manner studies the natural sciences, geometry and mathematics, varied by games and occupations.

Crabbing at Boynton Beach.

The crabbing season has commenced again and Walter E. Probasco, Arthur B. Crane and S. Clinton Crane rode down to Boynton Beach on their wheels yesterday to try it. Although only out only two hours they caught over forty and brought them home in a bag slung over their backs.

Just as the party left Plainfield, Probasco punctured his tire and they stopped to repair it. The patch held all right until the return when they had to blow it up five times in the sixteen miles to Plainfield.

Valuable Souvenirs.

Dr. Charles Mathewson has in his possession two valuable souvenirs in the shape of a piece of metal called Mangause bronze and aluminum, which were scraps from the material used in the construction of the yacht Defender. The bronze was used in building the hull and the aluminum in the upper work above the water.

Dr. Ard's Purchase.

Dr. F. C. Ard has purchased the house at the corner of Park avenue and Sixth street, owned by Pliny Fisk. The price paid, it is understood, was $12,000. Men are now at work on the house and expect to have it ready for occupancy by October 1st. The indications are that Dr. Ard will now reside permanently in Plainfield.

A Grain Elevator in Plainfield.

Plainfield has not an immense grain elevator like one of those at Chicago but she has at last a real one of her own. I. R. Giles, the enterprising grain dealer of East Fourth street, has had one built so that the grain may be unloaded from the cars without handling and is conveyed directly into the store rooms.

TO ROOSEVELT BARBERS.

Councilman Westphal Makes a Move for Sunday Closing.

TONSORIAL ARTISTS DESERVE A REST

The August Meeting of the Common Council has Lots of Business—Only One Objection to Watchung Avenue Extension—Street Railway Extension Ordinance Reintroduced—One Sewer Contract Accepted—Other Business.

The regular August meeting of the City Conncil was held last night at which time a considerable amount of business was transacted.

Councilman Fisk, Dumont, Frost, Ginna, Frazee, Moore and Westphal were present when President See called the meeting to order at 8:30.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read and adopted.

On Mr. Ginna's motion the regular order of business was suspended to hear any objections to the proposed opening of Watchung avenue.

Mrs. Hannah Derlach having property along that avenue objected in a communication because five feet of the frontage would be taken off. That was the only objection and the communication was received and filed.

The regular order of business was then taken up.

A. C. Rogers asked for permission to make an extension on his property at 182 East Front street and it was granted.

Charles Ross and others residents of La Grande avenue and Berckman street asked for additional electric lights. It was referred to the Committee on Police and Public Lights.

Catherine Ohl and Percy Ohl in a long communication petitioned Council to throw off the interests and costs on their tax bills, but Mr. Dumont could not see that the Council had power to act in the matter and recommended the petition be returned with instructions to that effect.

Permission was asked of Council by Dennis Sheehan to lay a cement walk in front of the property at 836-838 Richmond street. The street committee recommended it be granted, with the proviso that it be laid according to the instructions of the street commissioner. It was so ordered.

R. B. Brown objected to the name now held by Berckman street. He stated that he was a resident of the street, and would like to see the name of the residential portion of it changed. The letter was received and filed.

The reports of the city collector, city treasurer, and city physician were received and filed. The latter showed seventeen cases treated, and four miscellaneous cases examined.

The monthly bills were presented, and after being audtted wese ordered paid.

Mr. Dumont offered a resolution and four miscellaneous cases examined.

The monthly bills were presented and after being audited were ordered paid.

Mr. Dumont offered a resolution that $2,000, $1,000 and $5,000 be borrowed in anticipation of taxes and charged to the general, fire and poor funds respectively. It was adopted.

Mr. Frost offered a resolution that $7,000 be drawn, the same to be used on the sewers. It was adopted, all voting for the resolution.

Mr. Dumont stated that the city assessor would have his books ready to be examined on Tuesday evening, August 20th, at eight o'clock, and he made a motion, that was carried, that when Council adjourn it be to meet at that time.

The petitions of W. R. Codington to erect a building on Park avenue, near Second street, and C. Chapot & Sons to erect one on South avenue, near Rock avenue, were granted.

Mr. Westphal introdnced an ordinance which was placed on first and second readings and ordered engrossed and advertised.

Councilmen Fisk and Dumont asked Councilman Westphal what was intended by the ordinance, and whether it would close restaurants and drug stores, etc. Mr. Westphal stated that it was the intent of the ordinance to prevent manual labor on Sunday as far as possible, but it did not include restaurants, livery stables and drug stores. He said the barbers were anxious to have Sunday for rest, and for that reason he favored its adoption.

The ordinance provides for the closing of all places of business in the city on Sunday except those of absolute necessity. It is really an amendment to the present city ordinance on that subject. Mr. Westphal championed the ordinance and it passed all right.

The application of William Stillman to have the license fee on plays at Music Hall reduced was not granted.

The following licenses were granted: H. DeMott, stage; J. Kennedy, truck; S. Kremer, peddler; H. M. Staats, cartman. A bill of Chief of Police G. W. Grant for $13 was referred back for correction. Mr. Fisk stated that the streets of the city were very much in need of something to put them in passable condition and moved that the Street Committee be authorized to advertised for bids to secure a steam roller and report at the next meeting The motion was adopted. In reference to the street railway matter Mr. Fisk stated that it would be necessary to re-advertise the ordinance which was ordered. He then offered a resolution that Tuesday evening, August 20th, be set as the time to table final action on the application of the company. It was adopted.

Mr. Fisk said that a large number of the property owners in the city had removed their fences, also the street signs. He offered a resolution, which was carried, that the city clerk be authorized to secure bids for signs and posts. Mr. Frost stated that the Sewer Committee expected to be able to ask Council soon to advertise for bids to do the necessary work on sewage beds. A. J. Gavett reported through a letter that W. W. Cook & Co. had completed their sewer work and asked that it be accepted and the conditions followed out. On Mr. Frost's motion, Mr. Gavett's certification of Cook & Co's work was adopted. Mr. Frost asked Council that the Sewer Committee be allowed $500 to expend in preliminary work on sewage beds. It was granted, all voting for it except Councilmen Frazee and Moore.

On Mr. Ginna's motions the ordinances relating to the Arlington avenue curb lines, the establishing of the Watchung avenue grade, and the Watchung avenue extension were brought up for final passage and were adopted, all voting for them. Council then adjourned.

By Candle Light.

Chinese lanterns lighted up the lawn of Miss Cora Richardson, of East Sixth street, last evening for a lawn party, which she gave in honor of her friend, Miss May Ceyne, of Jersey City. A most delightful evening was passed, at the close of which dainty refreshments were served. Among those who were present were Miss Marion Giles, Miss Jennie Giles, Miss Charlotte Messersmith, Miss Mamie Steiner, Bert Fletcher, of New Market; William Slate, of Dunellen; Judson Giles and Bert Steiner.

A Missionary Service.

Many traditions of which history tells in regard to them, were explained and proved helpful.

Abe Nelson brought the boy to his home in this city and Dr. Endicott was called. Thus far the bullet has not been found.

POOR WAY TO GET THE MEAT.

BERNARD TRACEY PROCURED STEAK BY FALSE PRETENSES.

Ordered Thirty Pounds and Had it Charged to Mr. McVey—A Warrant Out for His Arrest.

It is not good for one's health to eat too much meat during the summer months, but when you can get it for nothing as Bernard Tracey did yesterday, the rule of health doesn't count.

Until about ten days ago Bernard was employed by J. H. McVey at his North avenue restaurant. Mr. McVey occasionally sent him for various things needed, and he became very efficient in his line of work.

Yesterday afternoon he went to Israel Lewis' meat shop on Somerset street and told Mr. Lewis that Mr. McVey wanted some meat. Mr. Lewis thinking it was all right let him have what he asked for, which was about thirty-five pounds of the best cuts of beef.

He took it with him, and a few hours later returned for more meat. Mr. Lewis' son George was at the shop and was inclined to think something was wrong so he called at Mr. McVey's place and inquired if it was all right. He was informed that Tracey was not working there, and that the meat had been obtained under false pretenses.

Mr. Lewis at once had a warrant issued by Justice Crosley for the arrest of Tracey. It was placed in Constable Taynor's hands and he no doubt will be captured today.

NEW JERSEY'S INVESTIGATION.

Jersey City and Newark to Be Hauled Over the Coals Next.

Senator Ketchan, of New Jersey, is back from his travels and at his home in Newark. He says that the Senate investigation of affairs in Jersey City and Newark will be begun soon, and that Jersey City will receive the attention of the committee first. Senators Herbert and Daly have been assigned to prepare for the investigation. In Newark this duty has been assigned Senators Voorhees and Ketcham, and some of the work has been done, but Senator Ketcham says that it is not of much account.

It is understood that the Senate Committee will look into the work of the last Board of Chosen Freeholders, the purchase of the water supply by the Common Council, and some acts of the last Street and Water Board, as well as the general conduct of city affairs.

The Pentathlon Winners.

The Pentathlon State meet of the Young Men's Christian Associations, which opened on the grounds of the Orange Association on Saturday, was finished on Tuesday of last week on the grounds of the Newark Association at Roseville. Two of the individual contestants received silver medals for attaining scores exceeding 300 points, and fourteen received bronze medals for exceeding 200 points. The Plainfield Y. M. C. A. were unable to compete.

Another Big Block in Prospect.

Among the many improvements which the opening of Watchung avenue will bring to that section of the city is one contemplated by J. F. MacDonald, the Front street grocer. It is his intention as soon as the opening is completed to erect a handsome brick business building on the corner of East Front street and Watchung avenue, where his dwelling house now stands.

A Serious Charge.

OFFICIALS ARE BLAMED

Made No Effort to Prevent the Massacres.

Indignation of Foreign Residents in China—They Will Apply Direct to Their Various Governments Asking for Reparation—No Confidence in Diplomats.

London, Aug. 6.—The Daily Telegraph prints a dispatch from Shanghai saying that the Rev. H. S. Phillips of the English Church Missionary society witnessed the atrocities at Whasang, but was powerless to do anything to prevent them. The Chinese magistrate, the dispatch also says, waited until the foreigners were murdered or had fled before he appeared. The rioters, who numbered fifty, were led by a man carrying a red flag. It seems that the massacre was carefully planned. There are about a thousand soldiers stationed at Kucheng, and they could have stopped the riot had the officials chosen to order them to do so.

American Mission Burned.

The same dispatch states that the American mission at Shashi, near Hankow, on the Yang-tee-Kiang river, has been destroyed and its former occupants are fugitives. The American consul here has advised the missionaries in other parts of the country to retire.

No Confidence in Diplomats.

At a meeting of foreign residents of Shanghai foreigners were urged to appeal direct to the governments of their various countries to secure reparation for the many outrages committed in the Chinese empire, especially for that at Whusung. Some of the speakers at this meeting declared that no confidence was to be placed in the diplomatic representatives at Pekin. The American residents desire the appointment of a commission to inquire into the outrages in Szechuen and other inland provinces, apart from the British commission, to be under the control of American Consul Jernigan, and Mr. O'Conor, the British minister, has given his assent to the proposition. The existing commission is composed of British Consul Tratman, of Chung-King: one missionary, the native prefect at Chengtu, the provincial treasurer and the provincial judge. All of the latter are regarded as having been implicated in the attacks upon foreigners.

Our Navy Relieved.

Washington, Aug. 6.—The statement from United States Minister Denby and Consul General Jernigan that no Americans were injured in the attack by the Chinese mob upon the missions near Kucheng relieves our navy department from the necessity of ordering some of the American naval forces to the scene of trouble, although this incident will undoubtedly form the subject of another demand upon the Chinese government for reparation and indemnity for the outrage upon the property rights of the American missionaries. The nearest American naval vessel is the Detroit, which arrived at Shanghai on Saturday, but she could not get within hundreds of miles of Kucheng, and the only manner in which her forces could operate would be by means of armed launches.

Meeting of Foreign Residents.

Shanghai, Aug. 6.—At a crowded meeting of the European residents in this city yesterday speeches condemning the action of the Chinese authorities in the case of missionaries at Whai-Han, near Ku-Cheng, last Thursday, were made, and a resolution was adopted to appeal directly to the European governments against the ourage. The resolution also referred to the inadequate manner in which China has dealt with the perpetrators of former outrages.

No Provocation for the Outrage.

Hong Kong, Aug. 6.—The massacre of Chinese missionaries, according to reports received here yesterday, began last Thursday at Whai-Han, near Ku-Cheng. The houses of the missionaries were set on fire after the massacre. The bodies of the victims are expected to arrive at Euchau to-day. There was no provocation for the outrages. The perpetrators, it is said, were members of a vegetarian society. Chinese troops have been sent to the scene. The British and American consuls will have an interview with the viceroy to-morrow.

Methodist Missionaries Safe.

Boston, Aug. 6.—Word has been received at the office of Zion's Herald that the Methodist missionaries at Kuchang, China, are safe. This means that Dr. Gregory and Miss Hartford, of Dover, N. H., who were reported in Sunday's cables to have been either massacred or injured, escaped either fate.

G. C. KENNEDY'S DOWNFALL.

The Disbarred Lawyer Must Now Answer to Forgery.

Lancaster, Pa., Aug. 6.—G. C. Kennedy, a young lawyer who was disbarred a few months ago for numerous crooked transactions in which his clients were the victims, was arrested last night on the charge of forging the name of W. M. Tinsley of Marietta to a promissory note for $350. Kennedy's embezzlement amounts to several thousand dollars. He was a candidate for district attorney and lavished the money in his canvass for office. He was a rising young lawyer and is well connected.

Defender Wins Again.

Newport, R. I., Aug. 6.—In the final run of the cruise of the New York Yacht club, a thirty-seven mile beat to windward from Vineyard Haven to Newport, the Defender started last and finished first. The new aluminum and bronze boat beat the Vigilant 9 minutes and 9 seconds and was about 20 minutes ahead of the Jubilee.

SUES THE BROOK...

Con Lucid Objects To Paying a Fine of Fifty Dollars.

New York, Aug. 6.—Con Lucid, who received last Tuesday his ten days' notice of release from the Brooklyn club, has entered into a suit against the club to recover money due him. To a reporter the pitcher said that after the game in Philadelphia, in which he pitched and the Brooklyns were defeated, Mr. Byrne approached him and handed him a notice of release. The president asked him to join the Philadelphia team at once, which he refused to do. On Saturday, Lucid said, after all the players had been paid off, Mr. Byrne called him into his private office and told him he had been fined $50 for drunkenness while in Chicago. Lucid denied the charge, and yesterday instructed his lawyer to bring suit against the club to recover the money. Lucid said that while in Chicago he was attacked with a hemorrhage and the next day he was sent in to pitch, although very weak. He said he was also put on to pitch against the St. Louis team when he was physically unable to do good work, and he merely tossed the ball over the plate. Lucid will sign a contract with the Philadelphias to-day and will join them on the 9th.

TWO GREAT PLANTS WELDED.

Baldwin Locomotive Works and Westinghouse Company Unite.

Philadelphia, Aug. 6.—The Baldwin Locomotive works of this city, which are owned by Burnham, Williams & company, and the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing company of Pittsburg, two of the largest industrial concerns in this country, have been amalgamated. The official announcement of the extensive deal was made by a member of the firm of Burnham, Williams & company. Negotiations looking to the amalgamation have been in progress for two months, and yesterday they were ratified by the local concern. To-day the board of directors of the Westinghouse company will take similar action. The coalition of interests, it is stated, will result in the early introduction of improved forms of electric motors for railroads and will give employment to upwards of 10,000 men in busy seasons. Although, by the agreement, the two companies hereafter will work as one, both plants will be retained as they are at present, extensions being made as the business shall warrant. There will be a division of the work, the Baldwin works taking up such as is suitable to its facilities and the electrical work will be done by the Westinghouse company.

He will be at the head of the editorial staff of a weekly paper to be known as the Silver Knight, published by the order of Silver Knights of America, recently incorporated with headquarters in this city. It will advocate the free coinage of silver.

BIG NEWSPAPER TRUST

Plans To Raise the Price of Paper $5 a Ton.

The Combine To Comprise Only the Large Manufacturers East of the Mississippi—The Scheme Cannot Be Perfected for Several Months Yet Owing to Existing Contracts.

Philadelphia, Aug. 6.—D. L. Ward, the Philadelphia agent for a number of manufacturers of newspaper, who are expected to become members of the proposed newspaper trust with a capital of $35,000,000, stated that the trust would not be perfected until the close of the year. The delay in organizing the corporation, Mr. Ward said, is due to the fact that most of the manufacturers have contracts that will not expire until late in the fall. Continuing, he said: "It is not intended to take the whole country into the trust, but only the large manufacturers of the central and northern states from the Atlantic to the Mississippi. A. Pagenstecher, of the Manufacturers' Paper company, New York, is the president. Fifty-four mills that are expected to enter the combine have a total capacity of 87,000,000 pounds of newspaper a day or 1,510 tons. But they don't make any such output, as their total capacity is about 300 tons in excess of the demand. There are about sixty other mills in the country which make newspaper in small quantities, but the trust will not consider them."

Will Advance the Price.

Mr. Ward stated that the trust will advance the price of newspaper $5 a ton, but this advance will not affect the subscription price of papers, as reported. He thinks that as the trust will control the output, it can control prices. In addition to the advance in price the trust will establish rules that will prove distasteful to publishers. At present the paper is sold with the guarantee that there are so many perfect papers in a pound. When the trust gets under way the paper will be sold according to the actual sale weight as it leaves the mills and the loss caused by damaged paper, if there is any, must be borne by the publisher, who can sell it at one-fourth the cost price.

MYSTERY OF THE BAY

Steamer Refuge Burned in New York Harbor.

She Went Down Last Thursday and Her Decks Can Be Seen at Low Tide—Maritime Officials Laughed at the Story When Informed of the Accident.

New York, Aug. 6.—To the average citizen it would seem impossible that a craft, probably carrying passengers and necessarily a crew, could burn, explode her boilers and sink within sight of the Battery seawall without the fact being reported to the proper authorities in this city. According to the story, however, of the commander of the British tramp steamship Imbra, Capt. Trotter, this is just what has happened to the steamboat Refuge. She now lies in the mud on the Jersey flats on the edge of the main ship channel below Bedloe's Island.

Flames and Explosion.

At midnight on Thursday last the Imbra was anchored off Bedloe's island awaiting dock orders. The wind blew fresh from the southwest. Suddenly a gleam of red shot toward the sky in the direction of Staten island. Captain Trotter called his crew on deck. The steam windlass was ordered manned and the anchor was brought "up and down," ready for immediately weighing, as the burning craft was drifting rapidly head on toward the anchored Imbra. Nearer and nearer it came, the flames leaping high in the air. A strong tide was running. It shifted the flaming craft to the south, and amid a shower of sparks it passed asterm of the Imbra. Captain Trotter says that just previous to the time the burning craft crossed her stern there were several explosions in quick succession. At each explosion a cloud of sparks shot skyward.

All a Deep Mystery.

The next day Capt. Trotter went to the maritime exchange and reported the burning of the steamboat. He said: "All I got was a jolly. They could not believe that a vessel could burn and sink within sight of the Battery without being reported to them hours ago. I was naturally indignant, and the next day I went to the wreck and brought a piece of it to the maritime exchange officials." The refuge now lies on the edge of the main channel, off Bedloe's Island and is passed and repassed by hundreds of craft every day. Her smokestack is gone, and only at low tide is the upper part of her hull visible. The burning of the vessel, what became of those aboard at the time, if any, and why the loss has not yet been reported by her owners is all a deep mystery.

TO ASSAULT DURRANT.

Desperate Effort of a Young Man, Believed To Be Insane.

San Francisco, Aug. 6.—A desperate attempt was made by a young man yesterday afternoon to assault Theodore Durrant, and but for the watchfulness of the chief jailer he would no doubt have succeeded in his attempt. The young man, whose name was not learned, was evidently a lunatic and the deputies say he had all the appearance of being insane. He was first seen as Durrant was being taken down the stairs from the court room to the sheriff's office. The prisoner had but just left the upper corridor and was on the upper staircase when Chief Jailer Sattler saw the young man make a rush as though to get past him. Sattler caught the fellow and threw him back, at the same time ordering him too keep away. The party reached the lower floor without further incident and was going along the corridor to the sheriff's office when the young lunatic again appeared. He had sneaked around to a position from which he thought he could make a successful rush toward Durrant.

Seized Just in Time.

He had his right had in his coat pocket as though on a weapon and there was a wild look in his eyes. He had nearly reached Durrant when Sattler seized him. The young fellow made a desperate struggle, but was easily overpowered and thrown out of the corridor. The incident did not occasion Durrant any apparent alarm, but he realized when it was all over that he had been in danger. During the excitement the fellow escaped.

WATER PIPES FOR TOKIO.

The Contract Secured by an Anniston, Ala., Firm.

Washington, Aug. 6.—It is learned in this city that in addition to the shipment from Youngston, O., of 1,000 tons of wash metal to England and the recent large shipment from Pittsburg of 400 tons of pig iron, a contract for the water pipe for the city of Tokio, Japan, was recently let to contractors in this country, England, Germany, Belgium and other European nations were also bidders, but a manufactory of Anniston, Ala., was the lowest bidder and secured the contract, and the water pipes are shipped to Tokio via Liverpool.

DEATH OF MRS. TALMAGE.

Her Remains Taken to Brooklyn for Enterment.

Dansville, N. Y., Aug. 6.—The remains of Mrs. Talmage, wife of Rev. T. De Witt Talmage, who died at the Sanitarium here yesterday, were taken to Brooklyn last night. It was hoped that Mrs. Talmage might live through the day, as the crisis in her disease would have then been reached and there would have been a possibility of her recovery, but she began to sink rapidly about midnight and death came soon after dawn.

A Native of Connecticut.

Mrs. Susan Talmage was born fifty-five years ago in a little Connecticut village just outside of Meriden, and after her father's death, which occurred soon after her birth, went to live at Greenpoint with her mother, Mrs. Whittemore, and her two sisters. The family then attended the church of the Rev. Gion Talmage in Java street, and there met the Rev. T. De Witt Talmage, who was at that time preaching in Philadelphia. Miss Whittemore had arrived at her twentieth year, and was a beautiful and attractive girl. The young Philadelphia minister had lost his wife shortly before this, and attracted by the charms of his brother's fair parishoner fell in love with her and married her. For years Mrs. Talmage acted as her husband's private secretary and when he went to Brooklyn to preach rendered him the most valuable assistance in his parish work. For the last four years she had been an invalid, her illness resulting from an attack of Roman fever during her travels in Italy. She was the mother of five children: Mrs. Dinan of Richmond, Va.; Mrs. Daniel Mangam, Misses Maude and Daisy Talmage and the Rev. Frank Talmage. Mrs. Talmage was wealthy in her own right, for her husband turned over to her all his lecture earnings. It is said that she held property worth more than $200,000.

FATAL LIGHTNING.

Two Yale Students Struck in the Grand Canon—One Killed.

Stamford, Conn., Aug. 6.—News has been received here of the killing by lightning in the Grand canon in Arizona, of Blanchley Hoyt Porter, second son of Timothy H. Porter, a millionaire of this city. Young Porter, with his brother, Louis Hopkins Porter, left this city two weeks ago for a trip to Alaska. They missed the steamer in San Francisco, and while waiting for the next joined an exploring party to visit the Grand canon. The accident occurred last Thursday. The party with their guides were caught in the canon during a terrific thunder and rain storm. They took shelter under a jutting rock. Hardly had they reached shelter when a bolt of lightning struck the rock, shattering it, and instantly killing Blachley Porter. His brother was prostrated and terribly burned, but will recover. Both young men were students at Yale, Louis being in the junior and Blachley in the sophomore class.

UNBECOMING BUSINESS.

Temperance Catholics Object to Monks Selling Beer.

Pittsburg, Aug. 6.—A petition against the sale of beer by the Benedictine monks at St. Vincent's Abbey, near Latrobe, has been sent to Mgr. Satolli the apostolic delegate in Washington by some priests of the Pittsburg Catholic diocese. It recites a belief of the petitioners that the sale of beer by the Benedictine brothers is an unbecoming business and that it has worked great scandal to the Catholic church of the diocese and the whole of the state. The revenues derived by the monks each year from the sale of their product is over $30,000. It is known as St. Vincent's beer and is sold to a few select customers. The product is made as pure as beer can be, but the temperance Catholics want its sale stopped.

SHOCKS AT GLOVERSVILLE.

Earthquake and Thunderstorm Greatly Excited the Timid.

Gloversville, N. Y., Aug. 6.—An earthquake lasting nearly a minute was felt in this locality Sunday night, and the alarm caused among nervous people by the seismic shock was heightened by the very heavy thunderstorm which immediately followed it. Several persons were seriously injured in the storm, and considerable damage was done to property hereabouts. The harm done to buildings includes bad damages to a couple of houses, which were struck by lightning. Many trees were uprooted by the force of the wind.

RIOTERS HOLD SWAY

The Situation at Spring Valley Not Improved.

Negroes Warned To Leave the Place Before 5 O'clock This Evening—Several Dead Bodies Believed To Be in the Woods—No Arrests or Attempts at Arrests So Far.

Princeton, Ill., Aug. 6.—The rioters and the lawless hold sway in Spring Valley. No arrests or attempts at arrests have been made and those anarchistically inclined are in high spirits. The mobs commenced operations by stopping work at the various coal shafts and the streets are swarmed with men. Further depredations are expected at any time. Both sides engaged in the bloody riots of Sunday are organizing their men and preparing for further displays of force. The aid of of the law as yet has not been sucessfuly evoked on either side and if the belligerent parties attempt to carry out their resolutions bloodshed cannot be averted. It has been impossible to locate the following negroes in addition to those reported injured yesterday, several of whom it is asserted are lying dead in the ravines surrounding Spring Valley on the west:

Probably Dead in the Woods.

Washington Anderson, aged 47 years; Archibald Fleming, aged 25; Samuel Johnson, aged 30; Lewis Martin, aged 35; Robert Nelson, aged 33; Jack Elston. Several of the above are known to have been shot and badly injured, and two young ladies who came to town late last evening reported that they saw the prostrate form of a negro lying in the woods west of the town. Marshal Hicks of Spring Valley says he is satisfied that one or more bodies will be found in the woods between Spring Valley and Marquette.

Negroes Warned To Leave.

Over 2,000 miners assembled at the lumber yard at noon and the situation was freely discussed, nearly all of the speeches being in a foreign tongue. The coal company was roundly denounced and much inflammatory language used. One speaker said if the murdered Italian was relative of his he would not stop with a the negroes but would settle it at once and effectively with Manager Dalzell of the coal company, whom he said deserved all the blame as he had brought the negroes here. After an hour of general discussion a resolution was adopted giving the remnant of the negroes left until 5 o'clock this evening in which to leave the city and to carry off their effects. Any effects left after that time will be declared confiscated and destroyed.

Italians Organize.

A committee was appointed to organize the Italians and see that the instructions were carried out. Another committee of five was appointed to wait upon Senator Dalzell to demand that he discharge all negroes and to agree to employ no new ones for the present. The committee immediately called at Dalzell's office and stated their grievances. Mr. Dalzell in reply said that he had nothing on the subject to state and that it was a matter he would not discuss. The committee retired and another conference was ordered. The situation is indeed serious and much is feared from those who have already indulged in rioting without molestation or arrest. The foreign element which dominates the situation declared that no man, either black or white, shall return to work until the coal company agree to discharge every colored man in its employ.

CORBETT AS A FIREMAN.

The Pugilist Assists in Extinguishing Flames at Asbury Park.

Asbury Park, N. J., Aug. 6.—Central block, owned by Cook Howland, was nearly destroyed by fire last night which originated from the explosion of a gasoline stove in the restaurant occupied by Thomas Moody. There were twenty tenants in the building when the fire was discovered and many persons had narrow escapes from suffocation. James J. Corbett, the champion pugilist, was among the early arrivals on the scene and played a line of hose on the flames while the spectators applauded. Corbett was drenched but stuck to his work.

WANTED.—Any kind of an argument so long as the city officials are roasted. Apply at the Courier-News office.

If Mr. Westphal can emancipate the barbers from Sunday labor he will be as big a man in Plainfield as Roosevelt is in New York.

One of the disagreeable things that a rich man has to contemplate is that after his death he is liable to have several wives that he never heard of when he was alive.

The city taxpayers displayed a progressive spirit when only one objection was made to the extension of Watchung avenue at the Council meeting last night.

Plainfield is not as big as New York but she needs street signs just as much. Mr. Fisk's move in this direction at the council meeting last night is to be commended.

An invesitagating committee can convict a public official of wrong doing in double-quick time. But when the case goes into court it is quite a different thing.

There is an indomitable perseverance about Frank Magowan in his endeavor to again get on his feet, figuratively speaking, in a business way, that one cannot help but wish him success.

Some of the Presidential boomers are now kept under glass, and some, like skeletons, are yet in the closet, but the one that is too carefully nursed is the more likely to come to an untimely end.—Boston Herald.

Reports to the Comptroller of the Currency of the condition of the National banks of New Jersey on July 11th, show total resources of $88,902,076; loans and discounts, $48,903,104; deposits, $53,206,397; reserve held, 30.55 per cent.

The New Brunswick Home News thinks that the announcement of Franklin Murphy that he will not be a Gubernatorial nominee clears the atmosphere in the Republican camp. It is still very hazy, though.

Little has been heard lately of the New York and Philadelphia Traction Company, and recent legal proceedings and the Magowan collapse makes it improbable that this booming corporation will again appear. The company has been diligent in seeking franchises and has fulfilled a useful purpose, in spite of itself, for in its efforts to get the favor of townships it has made opposing companies offer fairly liberal terms, and has abated the recklessness of officials who were prepared to give away public rights without public consideration. The time for obtaining great concessions for the benefit of a few railroad capitalists has, we hope, quite passed. The public sentiment is against it, and where street railroads are really needed, a franchise for a ten-year term, or municipal ownership of the road, should be the limit of public generosity.—Newark Call.

BEAUTY.

How to Increase in Weight and Otherwise Improve One's Personal Appearance.

Every normally constituted man and woman wants to look well. This is natural and right. We have little sympathy for those people who through indolence or gluttony have permitted themselves to take on too much flesh. They know that by living abstemiously and taking plenty of exercise they can get back to their normal weight.

We do however have a great deal of sympathy for those poor, pale, thin sufferers who either have no appetite else whose food distresses them to such a degree that they are forced to live on most frugal diet.

"Going into a decline." How often do we hear this expression. What does it mean! It means that people are losing flesh, growing thin, wasting.

Their trouble arises from the fact that they are unable to digest sufficient food and when the stomach is out of order and fails to do proper work, foods are worse than useless. They simply ferment in the stomach and fill the system with poisonous principles.

What these people need is something that will digest their food after it has been eaten, and it is in just such cases that the Digestive Cordial is made by the Mount Lebanon Shakers is proving remarkably successful.

It is so prompt in its action that a sense of relief almost immediately follows the first dose, and a rapid increase in weight is soon noted.

The Shakers have issued an interesting pamphlet which may be obtained upon inquiry at any drug store.

—One mile of fancy picture mouldings has just been received by Edward Love, the North avenue wall paper dealer. Do you want any?

Kenneth Bazemore had the good fortune to receive a small bottle of Chamberlaim's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy when three members of his family were sick with dysentery. This one small bottle cured them all and he had some left which he gave to Geo. W. Baker, a prominent merchant of the place, Lewiston, N. C., and it cured him of of the same complaint. When troubled with dysentery, diarrhœa, colic or cholera morbus, give this remedy a trial and you will be more than pleased with the result. The praise that naturally follow its introduction and use has made it very popular. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale at Reynolds's Pharmacy, Park and North avenues; T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

Knocked Out in One Round.

Force's shoe store when the butcher wagon came by in a hurry, the wheels came too close and a general crash ensued in which the buggy was upset and had one wheel dished.

Electric Bitters.

Electric Bitters is a medicine suited for any season, but perhaps more generally needed in the spring, when the languid exhausted feeling prevails, when the liver is torpid and sluggish and the need of a tonic and alterative is felt. A prompt use of this medicine has often averted long and perhaps fatal bilious fevers. No medicine will act more surely in counteracting and freeing the system from the malarial poison. Headache, indigestion, constipation, dizziness yield to Electric Bitters. Only 50c per bottle at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

CYCLING COMMENT.

Mr. Franklin, of Waynewood place, left this morning on his wheel, accompanied by a friend from Brooklyn, for a trip to Lake Hopatcong, where they will spend several days. Mr. Franklin expects to visit his friends at "Camp Plainfield" to see if there is anything left of the cake he sent them.

Frank L. C. Martin and three other cyclists took a run to Flemington Sunday afternoon, intending to return in the evening. When they had riden about half the distance the rain came down and they took refuge in a farm house. As the rain kept up they stayed all night and part of them went fishing in the morning. They returned to Plainfield yesterday noon.

One of the most pleasant ways to take a vacation is by wheel, touring about the country. And Carl Brown, of Mercer avenue, has decided to spend his that way. He leaves the first of next week for Delaware Water Gap and there goes on to Lake Hopatcong and Greenwood Lake. After that he expects to take a run over into New York State, but where he does not exactly know as yet. His trip will last about ten days.

MADE FOR TWO.

Jack Hinkston was her slave, bound hand and foot to her chariot wheel, or perhaps it would be modern to say, now that she has taken to cycling, that he was bound to her bicycle wheel. She had flouted him and scorned him for upward of two years, and in despair Jack set himself at undoing his bonds. It was a slow and painful process, and the bonds had a habit of slipping again into hard knots when he caught a glimpse of Cissie, and Jack had almost made up his mind to emigrate to some outlandish country, for he feared he would never be his own man again unless a very broad and extensive ocean rolled between them. No matter how stern his resolutions were, they faded away to nothingness when he met Cissie in a new, pretty and stylish dress, for every costume she adopted seemed to be even more fetching than the last. Clothes have so much to do with the appearance of a pretty girl. The trouble with Jack was that he had too much respect for women in general, and they all knew that and consequently despised him. Cissie being the leader in heaping contumely on poor Hinkston, who, after all, was a very nice fellow, who did not realize that girls as a rule are somewhat silly and more apt to take up with a shallow-brained, conceited rapscallion than with a fellow of genuine worth like Jack Hinkston.

Jack had heard that Cissie had taken to the bicycle, but he had never seen the young lady on a machine. For the past week or two Jack had avoided Cissie, and his resolutions of abandonment had so strengthened themselves that he felt he would be a free man if he could keep away from her, but on the other hand he realized that the next time he saw her she would have on a new dress and would look more like an angel than ever, and he trembled for the result.

In the matter of the new dress Jack was perfectly right, and he saw the girl under circumstances that nearly resulted in his downfall, but not the kind of downfall he had looked for. He had taken out his bicycle and had gone for a long wheel into the peaceful country, where he would have no comrades but the trees and the green fields and the hedges that bordered the lanes. As he cycled along a narrow country thoroughfare, wheeling at a leisurely pace, for rapid cycling doesn't lend itself to somber meditation, he heard behind him the sharp ring of a bicycle bell. Something in its imperative clang, or else the fact that he was on a lonely road, caused him to look over his shoulder, and he nearly tumbled off his machine with amazement and surprise. There was Cissie on the top of a silver-plated machine, with the very newest and most natty cut of an advanced woman's bicycle costume, clipping over the distance at a tremendous rate of speed. She passed him with a whirr, giving him a saucy nod and a salutation as she went by. Jack gasped and said under his breath, well he would be somethinged—a phrase that would not look pretty on these pages, but it must not be taken as typical of Jack's conversation. He was knocked all of a heap by the astonishing sight of Cissie in the very latest lady's bicycling costume. The next instant he put his muscles to the wheel and sped after her, shouting:

"Stop a minute, Cissie, I want to tell you something."

But the young woman never paid the slightest attention. She bent over the handle bars and raced down that lane in a way to make pedestrians' heads swim. Jack shouted ineffectually two or three times, then pulled up and said to himself:

"Well, let her go. She will find out all I wanted to tell her."

Cissie disappeared round a corner and when Jack came to it she was not to be seen down the long avenue on which the sunshine flickered through the entwining branches of the trees overhead. Jack went on leisurely for a mile or two, then he jumped lightly off his machine and trundled it along beside him. He was now miles away from civilization, deep in the midst of the country. The road had suddenly become very bad, and Jack, who knew the peculiarities of every lane within miles around, thought it safer to wheel the bicycle along by hand rather than risk a puncture of his pneumatic tires on the sharp flint stones scattered with such profusion along the way. Near a little rustic bridge over a clear stream at the bottom of a dell he found what he expected to find—a very pretty girl with a most woe-begone, disconsolate look on her face sitting on the grassy bank looking forlornly at a bicycle that lay on the road with the tire of the hind wheel collapsed.

"Hulloa, Cissie," said Jack, breezily. "Had a tumble?"

"No," snapped Cissie; "I am not in the habit of tumbling."

"Ah," said Jack. "I see what is the matter. The tire is punctured. I knew that would happen. I shouted after you to tell you of this bit of road, but you would not listen."

"I did not hear you," said Cissie, at which assertion Jack raised his eyebrows with incredulity, which made Cissie all the more angry, especially as she knew she was telling a thing which was not true.

"Well, I don't want any help from you," she said, curtly.

"Why, of course not," returned Jack, sitting down on the opposite bank and leaning his bicycle against the hedge. "A person who comes out on a wheel and doesn't know how to mend anything that goes wrong is simply a silly fool. One can see you understand all about cycling because you have left your machine lying on the ground and the oil is running out of your lamp."

Cissie looked at the young man in amazement.

"It isn't your lamp," she said at last, "and I can surely do what I like with my own. I don't see what right you have to interfere."

"Bless you, Cissie," said Jack, "I am not interfering. I am not even offering advice. I have never yet had the pleasure of seeing a woman take off a pneumatic tire and mend the inner tube. This of course you have to do before you can move on, for you are miles away from any place, and even if you left your machine here you would not dare to walk home in that idiotic costume."

"What business is it of yours," she cried, "how I am dressed? You are nothing to me and I am sure I don't care a penny for your opinion one way or another."

"I don't suppose you do," said Jack, striking a match and lighting his pipe. "I used to be under the impression that you knew how to dress. I am not any longer. The hard things you have said to me when you had on a pretty lawn tennis costume, for instance, do not affect me a bit when they are said by one who merely looks like a saucy, impudent boy. You see, Cissie, I look down upon you as you once looked down upon me."

"How dare you say you look down upon me?" said Cissie.

"Because it's true," answered the young man, calmly. "This bank is ever so much higher than the one you are sitting on, or rather were sitting on, for now you are trying to crouch out of sight, and I don't wonder at it. I take back all those numerous offers of marriage I made to you."

"You wretch!" she cried, springing to her feet. "You take them back, do you, when you know very well they were all rejected and scorned."

"Oh, Cissie!" cried the young man, turning away his head. "Sit down again. Do sit down. The costume doesn't look so bad on a bicycle, but it is simply awful when a girl stands up."

When he looked around again Cissie had sat down and had drawn her bicycle up on its wheels, crouching in a measure behind it, as if with its spindly tires it could hide the awfulness of the costume.

"Well, Ciss," cried Jack, "when are you going to get at mending that tire?"

"I—I—I don't know anything about tires," sobbed Cissie.

"Look here, Cissie, if you ask me very nicely I will take off that pneumatic tire and mend it in five minutes by the watch."

"I'll throw the machine into the stream," she said, "before I will ask you to mend it."

"Just as you please, Cissie," replied Jack, clasping his hands behind his head and leaning back in luxurious enjoyment of his pipe. "Just as you please. The day is my own, and I suppose you will wait here till night before you venture back home again. Out of the kindness of my heart I will stay here with you, not to look at you, for I shall gaze at the tops of the trees as much as possible, and not to talk to you, for if there is anything in this world I abhor it is an impudent, cheeky boy. But this lane is a great place for tramps and gypsies, and it becomes very dark at night, because of the overhanging trees. It is a grewsome thoroughfare, and a nasty place in which to meet a villain after the sun has gone down."

"I have already met a villain and a brute," sobbed Cissie, who had now let the bicycle go and had buried her face in her hands.

"If you refer to me, Cissie," said Jack, "this is simply like most of the things you have said—not true. I am only too pleased to be of any assistance to anybody, but, at the same time, although you might not have thought it by my former conduct, I am too proud to render any assistance unasked."

"Jack," said Cissie, without raising her head.

"Did you speak?" inquired the young man."

"Jack," she said, "I am perfectly helpless, and I think you have been very horrid to me."

"All right," said the young man, rising to his feet. "I will go away. But do try to get out of this lane before darkness comes on."

"Don't go away," cried Cissie. "Please forgive what I said, and won't you be so kind as to mend my tire?"

Jack picked up the bicycle, took off the dripping lamp, turned the dilapidated machine quickly wrong side up, took the materials out of his own cycle pouch, had the tire off and on again and pumped full in an incredibly short space of time. Righting the machine and putting the lamp on once more, he held out his hand.

Cissie reluctantly got on her feet.

"There," he said, "you see how quickly a thing is fixed when the time is not wasted in foolish conversation. Least said, soonest mended. Are you going any further, Cissie? If you are, I would advise you to walk your machine over these stones."

"No," said Cissie, with a deep, quivering sigh, "I am going home as quickly as I can, and then I will burn this awful costume."

"Cissie," said the young man, slipping his arm round the natty, tailor-made coat, "the costume is all right, and don't you be bluffed. When a girl talks kindly it's simply one of the nattiest costumes that ever was constructed by a tailor, but I say, Cissie, don't you think we have misunderstood each other for a long time now, and don't you think that a bicycle built for two would require less exertion than a couple of single machines?"

"I don't know but it would," said Cissie, looking up with a smile that was all the sweeter because there was just the slightest suspicion of a quiver at the corners of her pretty lips.

And then Jack, with a villainy that surprised himself, taking advantage of the lonely situation, stooped down and kissed her, and Cissie, realizing the futility of resistance, did not resist.—Detroit Free Press.

QUEEN VICTORIA'S CROWN.

Thousands of Diamonds and Gems Are In It, and It Is Very Uncomfortable.

In the Tower of London is kept the Queen's crown, the diadem used at her coronation in 1838. It is composed of very ancient relics, but is a modern composition, having been made by the firm of Rundle & Bridge, and completed in the year 1838.

The crown is constructed of jewels taken from old crowns, and other stones provided by her Majesty. It consists of emeralds, rubies, sapphires, pearls and diamonds. The stones which are set in gold and silver, encase a crimson velvet cap with a border of ermine, the entire interior being lined with the finest of silk.

Above the crimson border on the lower edge of the band is a row of 120 pearls. Round the upper part of the band is a border of 112 pearls. In the front, stationed between the two borders of pearls, is a huge sapphire, purchased by George IV., set in the center of valuable pearls. At the back, in the same position, is another but much smaller sapphire.

The sides are adorned with three sapphires, and between these are eight emeralds. Above and below the sapphires, extending all around the crown, are placed at intervals fourteen large diamonds, the eight emeralds being encircled by clusters of diamonds, 128 in number. Between the emeralds and sapphires are sixteen ornaments, each consisting of eight diamonds. Above a circular bend are eight sapphires, set separately, encircled by eight diamonds. Between each of these eight sapphires are eight festoons of eighteen diamonds each.

In front of the crown is a diamond Maltese cross, in the center of which glistens the famous ruby given to Edward I. by Don Pedro, the Cruel. This is the stone that adorned the helmet of Henry V. at the battle of Agincourt. The center of the ruby is hollowed out, and the space filled, in accordance with the Eastern custom, with a smaller ruby.

The Maltese cross is formed of seventy five splendid diamonds. At each of the sides at the back is a Maltese cross with emerald centers, containing respectively 122, 135 and 120 sparkling diamonds.

Level with the four Maltese crosses, and stationed between them, are four ornaments shaped like the fleur-de-lis, with four rubies in the center, and surrounded by diamonds containing 85, 87 and 86 diamonds.

From the Maltese crosses spring four imperial arches, composed of oak leaves and diamonds. The leaves are formed of 728 diamonds; 32 pearls represent the acorns and 54 diamonds the cups.

From the upper part of the imperial arches hang suspended four large pendant-shaped pearls set in diamonds cups, each cup being formed of twelve diamonds, the stems from each of the four hanging pearls being incrusted with 24 diamonds.

Above the arch is the mount, which is made of 438 diamonds. The zone and arc are represented by thirty-three diamonds. On the summit of the throne is a cross, which has for its center, a rose cut sapphire set in the center of fourteen large diamonds.

Altogether the crown comprises one large ruby, one large sapphire, 26 small sapphires, 11 emeralds, 4 rubies, 1,363 brilliants, 1,273 rose diamonds, four pendant-shaped pearls and 273 smaller pearls.

It is the heaviest and most uncomfortable diadem of any crowned head in Europe.

THE LONG ARM.

By Mary E. Wilkins and Joseph E. Chamberlin

CHAPTER III.—SUSPICION IS NOT PROOF.

When Mrs. Adams told me that she had picked up Henry's whip-ribbon Wednesday morning I said nothing, but thought that Henry must have driven over Tuesday evening after all, and even come up into the yard, although the house was shut up and I in bed, to get a little nearer to me. I felt conscience-stricken because I could not help a thrill of happiness, when my father lay dead in the house.

My father was buried as privately and quietly as we could bring it about. But it was a terrible ordeal. Meantime word came from Vermont that Rufus Bennett had been arrested on his farm. He was perfectly willing to come back with the officers, and, indeed, had not the slightest trouble in proving that he was at his home in Vermont when the murder took place. He proved by several witnesses that he was out of the State long before my father and I sat on the step together that evening, and that he proceeded directly to his home as fast as the train and stage-coach could carry him.

The screwdriver with which the deed was supposed to have been committed was found by the neighbor from whom it had been borrowed in his wife's bureau drawer. It had been returned, and she had used it to put up a picture-hook in her chamber. Bennett was discharged and returned to Vermont.

Then Mrs. Adams told of her finding the yellow ribbon from Henry Ellis' whip, and he was arrested, since he was held to have a motive for putting my father out of the world. Father's opposition to our marriage was well known, and Henry was suspected also of having had an eye to his money. It was found, indeed, that my father had more money than I had known myself.

Henry owned to having driven into our yard that night, and to having missed the ribbon from his whip on his return; but one of the hostlers in the livery stable in Digby, where he kept his horse and buggy, came forward and testified to finding the yellow ribbon in the carriage-room that Tuesday night before Henry returned from his drive. There were two yellow ribbons in evidence, therefore, and the one produced by the hostler seemed to fit Henry's whipstock the more exactly.

Moreover, nearly the exact minute of the murder was claimed to be proved by the post mortem examination; and by the testimony of the stablemen as to the hour of Henry's return and the speed of his horse he was further cleared of suspicion; for if the opinion of the medical experts was correct, Henry must have returned to the livery stable too soon to have committed the murder.

He was discharged, at any rate, although suspicion still clung to him. Many people believe now in his guilt—those who do not believe in mine; and some believe we were accomplices.

After Henry's discharge I was arrested. There was no one else left to accuse. There must be a motive for the murder; I was the only person left with a motive. Unlike the others, who were discharged after preliminary examination, I was held to the Grand Jury and taken to Dedham, where I spent four weeks in jail awaiting the meeting of the Grand Jury.

Neither at the preliminary examination nor before the Grand Jury was I allowed to make the full and frank statement that I am making here. I was told simply to answer the questions that were put to me, and to volunteer nothing, and I obeyed.

I know nothing about law. I wished to do the best I could—to act in the wisest manner, for Henry's sake and my own. I said nothing about the green silk dress. They searched the house for all manner of things, at the time of my arrest, but the dress was not there—it was in Phoebe Dole's dye-kettle. She had come over after it herself one day when I was picking beans in the garden, and had taken it out of the closet. She brought it back herself, and told me this, after I had returned from Dedham.

"I thought I'd get it and surprise you," said she. "It's taken a beautiful black."

She gave me a strange look, half as if she would see into my very soul, in spite of me, half as if she were in terror of what she would see there, as she spoke. I do not know just what Phoebe Dole's look meant. There may have been a stain left on that dress after all, and she may have seen it.

I suppose if it had not been for that flour-paste which I had learned to make, I should have been hung for the murder of my own father. As it was, the Grand Jury found no bill against me, because there was absolutely no evidence to convict me; and I came home a free woman. And if people were condemned for their motives, would there be enough hangmen in the world?

They found no weapon with which I could have done the deed. They found no blood stains on my clothes. The one thing which told against me, aside from my ever-present motive, was the fact that on that morning after the murder the doors and windows were fastened. My volunteering that information had, of course, weakened its force as against myself.

Then, too, some held that I might have been mistaken in my terror and excitement, and there was a theory, advanced by a few, that the murderer had meditated making me also a victim, and had locked the doors that he might not be frustrated in his designs, but had lost heart at the last and allowed me to escape, and then fled himself. Some held that he had intended to force me to reveal the whereabouts of father's money, but his courage had failed him.

Father had quite a sum in a hiding-place which only he and I knew. But no search for money had been made, so far as any one could see—not a bureau drawer had been disturbed, and father's gold watch was ticking peacefully under his pillow; even his wallet in his vest pocket had not been opened. There was a small roll of bank notes in it, and some change; father never carried much money. I suppose if father's wallet and watch had been taken I should not have been suspected at all.

I was discharged, as I have said, from lack of evidence, and have returned to my home, free, indeed, but with this awful burden of suspicion upon my shoulders. That brings me up to the present day. I returned yesterday evening. This evening Henry Ellis has been over to see me; he will not come again, for I have forbidden him to do so. This is what I said to him:

"I know you are innocent, you know I am innocent. To all the world we are under suspicion—I more than you, but we are both under suspicion. If we are known to be together that suspicion is increased for both of us. I do not care for myself, but I do care for you. Separated from me, the stigma attached to you will soon fade away, especially if you should marry elsewhere."

Then Henry interrupted me. "I will never marry elsewhere!" said he.

I could not help being glad that he said it, but I was firm.

"If you should see some good woman whom you can love, it will be better for you to marry elsewhere," said I.

"I never will!" he said again. He put his arms around me, but I had strength to push him away.

"You never need, if I succeed in what I undertake, before you meet the other," said I. I began to think he had not cared for that pretty girl who boarded in the same house, after all.

"What is that?" he said. "What are you going to undertake?"

"To find my father's murderer," said I.

Henry gave me a strange look; then, before I could stop him, he took me fast in his arms and kissed my forehead.

"As God is my witness, Sarah, I believe in your innocence," he said. And from that minute I have felt sustained and fully confident of my power to do what I have undertaken.

My father's murderer I will find. To-morrow I begin my search. I shall first make an exhaustive examination of the house, such as no officer in the case has yet made, in the hope of finding a clue. Every room I propose to divide into square yards, by line and measure, and every one of those square yards I will study as if it were a problem in algebra.

I have a theory that it is impossible for any human being to enter any house and commit in it a deed of this kind and not leave behind traces which are as the known quantities in an algebraic equation to those who can use them.

There is a chance that I shall not be quite unaided. Henry has promised not to come again until I bid him, but he is to send a detective here from Boston—one whom he knows. In fact, the man is a cousin of his, or else there would be small hope of our securing him, even if I were to offer him a large price.

The man has been remarkably successful in several cases, but his health is not good; the work is a severe strain upon his nerves, and he is not driven to it by any lack of money. The physicians have forbidden him to undertake any new case, for a year at least, but Henry is confident that we may rely upon him for this.

I will now lay this aside and go to bed. To-morrow is Wednesday; my father will have been dead seven weeks. To-morrow morning I commence the work, in which, if it be in human power, aided by a higher wisdom, I shall succeed.

THE OLD HOME.

In a series of articles upon "The Woman Who Influenced Me Most," published in the Ladies' Home Journal, Rev. Robert Collyer, the blacksmith preacher, in paying tribute to his mother, says:

"So she stands in the sunlight of the long ago, and she had also such a genius for doing well what she must take in hand that I think still if it had fallen to her lot and her training to govern a kingdom she would have made a noble queen and governed it well, while what she did govern well was the house full of eager and outbreaking children with a good deal of the old Berserker blood in them, as I have reason to suspect—keeping us all well in hand and clearing the way for us into the world's great life when our time came to go forth; seeing to it that we were well housed, well fed and well clad for weekday and Sunday, while the school wage was paid for us, so long as we could be spared to go there, out of the eighteen shillings a week my father earned in those days at his anvil, together with the pittance some of us could earn by and by in the factory."

"So I went about the valley, as they say, with my heart in my mouth, and seemed to be saying to the boy I saw through the mists of the many years:

"'Dear little fellow, you had a hard time then, but it was a good time also, wasn't it now? Have any flowers in the world beside ever seemed so sweet to you as the snowdrop, the primrose and the cowslip you knew so well where to find and bring home to mother, or have any singing birds ever matched your memory of the skylark and the throstle, or were there ever such Christmas-tides as those she made for us when her children and the world were all young together?'

"And there was the old home nest. It stood where the villa stands now, but I would not have exchanged the memory for the mansion. It was a cottage of two rooms and an attic fronting due south, and there was a green dooryard with a clump of roses set about with wallflowers, pinks and sweet williams. There was a plum tree also branching about the windows. Then I went within doors of the home which was, and is no more, to find the bright open fire that went out in 1839, but was still burning for me, and the walls of the living room were white as the driven snow. There was the famous bureau, also, shining like a dim mirror, and the tall clock which was always too fast at bedtime and too slow at meal times—it stands here in our dining room now. There was still the fine store of willow ware on the rack against the wall, but that was for Christmas and the summer feast; while all things were glorified by pictures Turner could not have done to save his soul.

REV. ROBERT COLLYER.

"There were six of us in the earlier years, also, to make good the old rune mother would croon over us now and then:

Four is good company, five is a charge,
Six is a family, seven's too large,

but I think she would have refitted the rhyme to the reason if there had been more.

"And now how did she raise us so that her son must fain write down this memory?

"There was fair white linen and calico first to wear and to sleep in. And until we could see to it ourselves, once a week there was the tub where we had a good sound scrubbing, who were big enough for the sad solemnity, with yellow soap and things that got into your eyes, and a stout 'harden' towel to dry off withal, so that now, when I think of our 'Cotter's Saturday night,' the words of the wise man are apt to come back to me, 'Who hath red eyes, who hath contention, who hath strife?' and I can answer, I know who had all these, say sixty-five years ago, when I was turned into that tub, while there was but scant comfort for me in the words she would say as a sort of benediction, 'There now, children, cleanliness is next to Godliness.'

"How did we fare, the six hearty children? There was oatmeal, and what we call mush who know no better, and skim milk in plenty, with oatcake, as mother would say, to fill in; also wheaten bread for more careful use, and sometimes a trace of butter. Not much meat, for meat was dear, but soup with dumplings, and what the old Yorkshire folk used to call 'sikelike,' a word with a wide meaning. And the tradition still remains of an early time of innocency when mother would say those who eat the most dumpling shall have the most meat. So we would peg away until we did not want any meat, and then mother would save it for the next day's dinner. There was fruit, also, when this was cheap, in the lovely guise of a pie, and then more oatmeal and skim milk for supper."

A writer in "Blackwood's" says that "priests cannot change their priestly countenance if they wished. For some mysterious reason the subcutaneous tissue over the cheekbones and under the jaws of the cleric's face gets an unusual supply of nourishment, which leaves distinctive marks, while the consciousness of a share in the Apostolic succession gives a muscular set to the lips."

AMATEUR SOLDIERS.

PATRIOTISM IS SPREADING IN THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

President Harrison Says It Is Good For the Country. Military Tactics Teach Implicit Obedience, Neatness and Self-Respect.

It is estimated that nearly ten thousand public school boys of New York and Brooklyn paraded on Memorial Day. With their own drum corps to furnish music, with banners proudly waving over their even ranks, they gave an alignment which could not be improved upon by the regular army troops.

The movement to establish military drill in the public schools is spreading rapidly, and three or four times as many boys turned out this spring as did last year. A goodly proportion of them were uniformed and armed, now that they have been organized into regiments and battalions of the "American Guard."

All over the country military drill movement is meeting with favor, and the schools in most of the cities, as well as in many of the smaller towns, are getting into line in favor of the innovation. The question has become one of national importance, and has already been taken up in Congress, as well as in the Legislatures of most of the States.

The Grand Army of the Republic is supporting the scheme.

Ex-President Harrison has recently said of the plan:

"It is good in every aspect of it—good for the boys, good for the schools and good for the country."

That military drill is popular among the schoolboys is evident to any one who sees the lads at drill. They willingly give up part of their play hour to take part in it, and the competition for officers' positions is keen. One has but to look at the air of pride with which the youngsters wear their uniforms. In most of the schools only the larger companies are uniformed and equipped and there are one or two companies composed of the smaller and untrained boys who correspond to an awkward squad, from which the ranks of the regular companies are recruited.

Military instruction involves more physical drill than is usual in the schools, and this in itself is a wonderful advantage to most of the boys. As soon as a lad declares his wish to enter the cadet corps of the school he goes into the awkward squad and is put through a course of "sprouts." The "setting up" exercises which are used at West Point come first. This physical drill teaches a boy to stand straight, to walk straight, to breathe properly—in short, make a new boy of him.

When the boys have learned to hold their heads erect and their hands at their sides without looking as if the palms were glued to their legs, they are taught to face and march. Marching and wheeling in columns of twos and fours follow, and then more intricate manoeuvers. The best of the squads are then put into the regular cadet corps and allowed to get uniforms and carry guns if the companies have them.

The "manual" of arms is taught until they can handle the weapons like veterans, and then they learn to drill in companies and battalions.

In many schools drum and fife corps have been organized, and the boys march to their own music. In dress parades in the armory and school yards the drum corps give an air of importance to the ceremony and makes the boys feel more like real soldiers than when marching without music.

The Telescope in Photography.

The most recent invention in photography will probably prove to be one of the most important when its capabilities are more fully tested. It consists of a telescopic attachment by means of which photographs may be taken of an object at a considerable distance. The results are said to be in every way equal to those obtained at close range. The attachment, called the telephoto, is small in bulk, not much larger, indeed, than any ordinary lens, but its capabilities are out of all proportion to its size. Standing 600 feet away from a cathedral a photograph may be taken with the telephoto which will clearly show every stone in the structure. This is of course impossible with an ordinary apparatus. The idea of a telescopic attachment to a camera is not new, but its practical development has been carried by Mr. Elmendorf, a well known amateur photographer of New York, to an extent never before reached.

REMINDER OF THE BLIZZARD.

DR. LOWRIE'S SUIT AGAINST CHAS. MC GINLEY TRIED.

Lots of Humidity, Witnesses and Tilts Between Lawyers Made it a Lively Case—The Jury Could Not Agree.

The famous old blizzard of 1888 was dragged out of obscurity yesterday afternoon and into Justice Newcorn's court, for it was only a week after the great event that James McGinley was run over by a train and the wound made then was at the bottom of the suit brought by Dr. Henry H. Lowrie against Charles McGinley for $200 due for services rendered. The humidity was great and the twelve jurors and the witnesses wearily dragged themselves into the court room on the third floor of William Newcorn's building. Shortly after two o'clock the court was called to order and the followed jury impanelled:

C. M. Fine, Ira Hulbert, Robert Walker, Abram Angleman, Edward Bowman, William F. Trust, Julian Scott, James H. Sawyer, Alfred Baker, James Manchester, James Baker and William C. Apgar.

From the testimony of the different witnesses the following story was revealed: One week after the blizzard in 1888, James McGinley, son of Charles McGinley, was badly injured by being run over on the railroad. A number of physicians were hurriedly called, among whom were Drs. Hedges, Fritts, Murray and Lowrie. It seemed to be the general sentiment of the doctors that the limb could not be saved but Dr. Lowrie thought otherwise, and as family physician, took charge of the case.

According to the doctor's book, he attended the boy until February, 1889, and afterwards treated him in August of that same year. The McGinleys all swore that he never attended the lad after December 19th, 1888, and on that one point the real case rested. Harry C. Runyon acted as counsel for the plaintiff and S. S. Swackhamer represented the defendant, and a lively time it was between the two lawyers. The defendant claimed that the debt was outlawed, six years being up, but the other side said it was not until August. There was also a great deal of fighting over the ability of Dr. Lowrie. When Mr. Swackhamer was summing up, one of the perspiring jury started to ask questions and then attempted to argue with the counsel, but he received such a rebuke from the lawyer that nothing more was heard from him during the session.

When Justice Newcorn charged the jury he brought the case right down to a question of whose testimony was correct, that of Dr. Lowrie's book or that of the McGinley family. After about three hours of almost unbearable heat, the jury retired while the rest of the court scattered for the open air.

The jury remained in the room until seven o'clock after repeatedly sending down word that they could not agree. At seven o'clock they sent word that they could not agree if they stayed there a week, and Justice Newcorn allowed them to depart. The jury stood seven to five in favor of McGinley. The case will be tried over again with a new jury.

Bright Young Man Dead.

The death occurred Sunday of Warren E., son of Rev. and Mrs. E. H. Stewart, at his late home in Watsontown, Pa., aged 23 years. He was a grandson of John Stewart, of Plainfield avenue, this city, and a nephew of D. F. Stewart, of John street. He leaves two brothers to mourn his loss, one of whom is Horace N., a twin brother. His funeral was held this afternoon from his late home. His father was well known in this city, having on several occasions delivered temperance lectures here.

Work of Tramps.

The station at Graceland has again been nearly wrecked by tramps. A gang who made the place their headquarters on Sunday night became involved in a fight, and, using the railroad stone ballast es missile, they destroyed every pane of glass and every window sash in the building.

PILGRIMAGE TO BOSTON.

The Knights Templar Are Preparing For a Grand Time.

It is not the Knight Templars which played such a prominent part in Scott's "Ivanhoe" but a different society altogether which will hold their twenty-sixth Triennial Conclave at Boston on August 27th, 28th and 29th. It is the expectation of the committee that it is to be the largest of its kind ever held and great preparations are being made. The Trinity Commandery of Plainfield expect to send a party of forty who will join the New Jersey Sir Knights at Elizabeth, a special train being run for their benefit. The headquarters of the New Jersey Knights will be at the Hotel Victoria, while the Trinity Commandery will have its special headquarters at 537 Massachusetts avenue. It is expected that there will be 30,000 Sir Knights in line.

PUCK'S COMEDIANS.

Ed. Marble and W. H. A. Cronkhite Launch Out Into the Reportorie.

"Puck's Comedians" is the name of a new organization in the dramatic field for next season, that promises to eclipse all previous efforts made by caterers for the popular price reportorie entertainments that have heretofore been presented. The company will be under the able management of W. H. A. Cronkhite, (so long and formerly known as George Thatcher's manager,) and Ed. Marble whose productive skill in the dramatic world is well known. Both gentlemen are well remembered in Plainfield. The company will carry a band of sixteen instruments, twenty five people, and promise an unusally attractive and novel series of entertainments at emergency prices. Singing, dancing, and clean fun will be the object of "Puck's Comedians" and we wish them a season of prosperity. This can hardly fail to be realized, from the nature of the form of the entertainment, or the gentlemen who are interested in its welfare. This company will appear in this city during the coming season.

A Good Burner All Around.

It will be of interest to many who have used or seen the Welshbach incandescent burner, to know that the network mantle which is suspended over the Bunsen burner, and which produces the intense white light is made of the oxide of thorium one of the rare earth metals. According to the scientific American the oxides of of several of these earth metals passes the property of becoming incandescent at a moderate heat, but the light emitted is the greatest in the case of thorium. The burner is having a large sale through the country. It is an economical light, about 1-6 cheaper than electric, and 1-4 cheaper than the ordinary gas burner, for same amount of light. Gavett & Co, are having good success in placing lights in this place.

It Is Priceless.

Rahway to Lose the Signal Works.

It is now confirmed that the Johnson Signal Works will be immediately moved from Rahway to Easton, Pa., where the Board of Trade has for some time been trying to raise the $10,000 to pay the cost of removal and for grounds for a site. The machinery is being shipped to the National Switch and Signal Company, the purchasers of the Johnson Works.

What Could He Say.

A good story is told of a borough man who arose one morning recently and asked his better half where his trousers were. She, of course did not know, and the two began a search through the house for the missing pair. After the good wife's patience was exhausted, she happened to discover that her husband had his trousers on. He didn't say a word.

A Chance for a Gold Medal.

Preparations for the 150-mile run of August 10th are progressing very favorably. Quite a number of entries have been received, among which are some out-of-town riders. Ribbon badges, with the times at the various stops, will be given to each starter, and a gold medal to each rider that finishes.

Voted to Incorporate.

The election for a third-class city in Bloomfield yesterday resulted in an overwhelming vote for incorporation. Out of 1,145 votes polled, 73 were against incorporation.

AN INCIDENT OF YACHT RACING.

A Plainfielder's Experience in a Heavy Sound Storm.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—

We, (that is, Mr. Moore the owner, Dr. Sheppan, and I) went to New London today to see the the boats that are taking part in the cruise of the New York Yacht Club. We found most of the racers in preparation, including Defender and Vigilant. All the big fellows were there. W. K. Vanderbilt with his yacht Valiant, an immense thing, about three hundred feet long, a regular ocean liner; Mr. Goelet on the yacht Hermoine, chartered by him for the cruise, and flying the English flag; Mr. Austin, of the Durham Tobacco Company, with yacht Lagonda; Hanan, the shoe manufacturer, of New York, on the yacht Embla. There were dozens of other steam yachts, the names of which I do not know.

The Sound was very rough all day, and the wind blew great guns, from fifty to sixty miles an hour; "the sea stood right up on end," as the commodore expresses it, and it was enough to roll the insides out of an ox. Going towards New London, from Shelter Island and through Plum Gut, we had the sea behind us, and did not mind it; but coming back we had to face it. Well, to say it blew a gale, would be drawing it mildly, and we wallowed and pitched about in great shape. We met several yachts that were late getting into New London, reefed as close as they could reef, and some of them making very bad weather of it into the bargain. Meanwhile it was blowing, as it can blow at the end of the Sound, and Kanapaha was rolling as if she would roll her engines out. As we come through Plum Gut, and were entering Gardiner's Bay, I noticed a boat at anchor, fishing as I thought. When we got closer to her, I knew that I was mistaken, and that it was a yacht we were approaching. She had neither topmast, nor bow-sprit, and I mentioned the fact to Mr. Moore. As we passed her, a man on her deck held up his ensign union down. Then we knew he wanted help, so we stopped long enough to give him a line and towed him in. It turned out, that she was the yacht Clara, a cutter owned by a Mr. Adams, of New York. He was racing with some of the other yachts, and after he had carried away his topmast, bow-sprit, and most of his standing and running rigging, he thought it about time to run into some harbor and refit. It was good for him that he did; for had he stayed out on the Sound much longer, he might have gone to the bottom with his wife who accompanied him.

We arrived safely at Shelter Island with our tow, and dropped anchor line at four o'clock in the afternoon; having made the run from New London in two hours, allowing half an hour for picking up the cutter, which was remarkable time against a head-sea. Very truly yours,

E. S. Simpson.

DREW BLOOD INSTEAD OF CASH

ITALIAN STABS A FELLOW COUNTRYMAN IN A FIT OF ANGER.

A Quarrel Over a Board Bill Which Resulted in Almost a Fatality—One Italian Arrested—After the Other.

Another brutal Italian stabbing affair is recorded and all over the sum of $6. Donardo Bunowone and his brother Frank live near Scotch Plains in a small house.

Another Italian named Dominick Lubruno, who works in the fur mill at that place, boards with them.

It seems that the latter owed $6 to the former for a week's board and when Lubruno returned from work last night he was asked for the money. He said that as soon as he washed his hands and face he would pay them. That didn't seem to satisfy the Italian boarding house keepers so Donardo went at him with a knife. Lubruno was stabbed seriously in the head, shoulder and side. Blood flowed profusely and in their anger it is said they were going to shoot Lubruno. The assailants then fled.

Constable Walpole was found and came to Plainfield with the injured man and his friend Joseph Record. Justice Newcorn issued warrants for the arrest of the brothers and gave them to Constable Rockafellow to serve.

After much searching he, with Constable Walpole, succeeded in finding Frank Bunowone, but could not find his brother who did the stabbing. Efforts will be made to capture him today. The arrested man was incarcerated in the station house.

Bunowone was taken before Justice Newcorn and given a hearing. He was released on $100 bail which was furnished by Bennett Britton.

Up to the time of going to press no trace of the one who did the stabbing could not be found.

A POET'S TRIBUTE.

A Kind Hearted Hospital Attendant Thanked in Rhyme.

Probably one of the most popular persons at the Muhlenberg Hospital is the kind hearted attendant, James. One of the patients who was in the Hospital for some time, dedicated the following poem to the obliging James, whose kindness he has often felt and seen:

In Plainfield Hospital, I knew a man
Who is ever willing to obey a command
From early morn until late at night
He does his work, with all his might.

He is honest, faithful, kind and true,
Famous for his good nature, too.
All the patients are well agreed
That James is truly a friend in need.

He brings them water, cuts them ice,
And often gives them good advice.
When he hears a gong or a woman's call
He rushes madly through the hall.

James has a vivid head of hair
Which would be pretty if it had care.
Other things can be mentioned too,
He does'nt drink, nor smoke, nor chew.

These excellent qualities all combine,
To make our James quite sublime,
God bless him!
May he live long in the Plainfield Hospital to answer the "gong."

PRETTY HOME WEDDING.

A New Yorker Comes to Plainfield for a Bride.

A pretty home wedding was solemnized at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Langford on East Fourth street last night when Miss Ellen Henderson was married to Winslow Lathon, of New York. The bridesmaid was Miss Mary Jones and the best man William Burden. The bride wore a handsome gown of white India silk and the bridesmaid a gown of white. Rev. P. S. Gibson, pastor of the Mount Olive Baptist church, performed the ceremony in the presence of a large number of guests.

Mr. and Mrs. Langford received many useful presents as a token of esteem.

They left on the 11:28 train for New York, where they will reside.

Winners at Whist.

A very pleasant evening at which duplicate whist was the prominent feature, was enjoyed last evening by a few of the young men of Plainfield at the home of Clement Morgan, of East Ninth street. Clement Morgan and George Ryder were the victors. The evening closed with refreshments.

Did Not Strike Copper.

Four Plainfield boys walked over to Menlo Park yesterday to visit Edison's desertod copper mine. They returned without making their fortunes.

A BRAVE LITTLE GIRL.

Jumps in the Rear End of a Wagon and Stops a Runaway.

The quiet little borough of Fanwood was thrown into a state of excitement this morning. As usual, Sheriff Geo. P. Kyte was taken to the railroad station with his horse and wagon, in charge of his coachman, Hans Lambertson. Mr. Kyte's six-year-old son Robert accompanied him. When the station was reached Mr. Kyte got out and started for the train. He left a package in the wagon by mistake, and Hans happening to see it took it to Mr. Kyte.

During this time the horse, being of a nervous disposition, started off on a run with Robert in the wagon. Hans attempted to get in the wagon but was thrown down. Besides his coat being torn he received no injuries.

The runaway horse was making fast time toward Mr. Kyte's home. Robert was frightened and so was everyone who saw it. Mr. Kyte saw the start of it and sent word for Dr. Westcott to go to the house, thinking surely his son would be injured. Just before the house was reached Mr. Kyte's twelve-year-old daughter Ethel took the situation in at a glance, and with much difficulty pluckily jumped in the rear of the wagon, caught the reins and stopped the horse. There was no damage but all were thoroughly frightened. Hans came along in a few minutes and took charge of the rig. The little girl received hearty commendation for her brave act.

IT WILL EQUAL NEW YORK.

Packer and Gavett to Occupy the Jackson Building Together.

Plainfield buyers are learning more and more that they do not need to go New York to do their shopping. Arrangements have now been definitely made for a new store that promises to equal any New York store of the kind. Two enterprising Plaining merchants, Garriet Q. Packer, the Park avenue furniture dealer, and Gavett & Co., dealers in china and glassware, have decided to occupy the ground floor and basement of the new J. W. Jackson building, which is to be erected at the corner of West Front street and Madison avenue. The two firms will occupy the floor together and will be able to make a much finer display by combining the two. The firms will remain entirely separate, however. It promises to be one of the finest buildings in the city.

Good Work of a Pastor.

Robbed of 400 Chickens.

The gang of chicken thieves who have recently been busy in the vicinity of Bridgeton have apparently not all been captured yet. Some unknown persons visited the farm of John Baxter, below Fairton, and carried off 400 fowls. Mr. Baxter raises chickens by means of incubators for the market, but he has now few left.

THIS AWFUL WILD WEST PLAY

ANOTHER BOY ACCIDENTALLY SHOT THIS MORNING.

Sherman Haberle Shot in the Jaw While Playing With Careless Playmates—No Fatal Result is Expected.

Playing Wild West is a great amusement for the young boys of Somerset street, but all their fun came to a sudden end this noon, and Sherman Haberle, the seven-year-old son of J. G. Haberle, of Harmony street, who keeps a cigar store on Somerset street, on the city side of the bridge, has a wound in the chin to remember it by. This morning the boys were to hold their grand Wild West show in Mr. Summers' yard, on Somerset street, opposite Voehl's bakery. George Summers, the fifteen-year-old son of Mrs. Summers, and George Baker were the cowboys, and they allowed little Sherman to come for nothing if he would be Indian with Charles Bird.

While they were playing in some way Summers pointed 22 calibre revolver at Sherman, and pulled the trigger. The pistol was loaded and the bullet struck young Haberle in the chin passing through the flesh and striking the jaw bone where it remains. The exact circumstances of the shooting cannot be learned, as all the boys were too badly frightened to tell a coherent story but the little victim said that Baker and Summers were trying to see who could shoot the fastest.

Baker pointed his at a box and Summers at the first thing that came handy which was young Haberle. The boys, it is supposed, either thought the revolvers were not loaded at all or only with blank cartridges. Another one of the lads said that they were cleaning them and the revolvers went off by accident.

However it happened, the deed was done, and the injured boy taken immediately to Dr. Mattison who probed for the bullet. He found it fast to the bone, but broke the probe.

He said that the boy should be taken to a practicing physician. Instead he was taken home, and there bandaged up.

Later he was taken to his father's store and then left with his father on the 2:30 train for Westfield, there to be treated by Dr. Cooper, who is a friend of the family.

Although the wound was quite painful, the little lad never uttered a complaint, even when the doctor was probing for the bullet. When The Press reporter saw him at his father's store about two hours after the accident, he talked and told the whole story and apparently did not mind the bullet in the least.

As it was, Sherman did not know he was hit until the rush of blood came from the wound.

FREEHOLDER IN A FIST FIGHT.

He Attacks a Man in New Brunswick Streets and Beats Him Badly.

Freeholder Abram Feible, one of the most prominent residents of New Brunswick, and John Zahn met in the street last night, and, to the surprise of many who thought them good friends, engaged in a fist fight. The Freeholder had the best of the battle, and whipped Zahn and bruised him fearfully. Not satisfied with that, he drew a knife and attempted to use it, but was prevented. Zahn escaped before the Freeholder could release himself from the hands of those who grappled with him when he drew his knife.

Look Out Now for Your Dogs.

The Elizabeth police will begin the slaughter of unmuzzled dogs tomorrow, and the dog-catcher will begin to make his rounds for the capture of unlicensed dogs. Judge VanSyckel has granted a writ of certiorari against the decision of Judge McCormick, which gave dogs liberty to run about without license tags. The police authorities claim the issuing of this writ leaves the question the same as it was before. Judge McCormick decided against the city. Hence the new activity of the police, who want to swell the coffers of the Police Mutual Aid treasury with receipts from the licensing and capture of unlicensed dogs.

No Trace of Tracey.

CAMPOS WAS WOUNDED

He Arrived at Santigo on a Gunboat on July 26.

Transferred to a Steamer for Havana—At Campos' Solicitation Maceo Permitted the Spaniards To Gather Up Their Wounded—The Spanish General Grateful.

Santigo de Cuba, July 28, via Key West, Fla., Aug. 7.—After fifteen days of doubt and anxiety concerning the fate of Captain General Campos and the column that accompanied him from Manzanillo to Bayamo and was suddenly attacked by a large force of insurgents on the way, the captain general himself arrived here on the night of the 26th inst. on the Spanish gunboat Cristobal Colon. Many preparations were made to receive him. All the buildings on streets it was expected he would traverse were decorated with flags and illuminated, and two bands of music to serenade the viceregal visitor were stationed in the plaza before the governor's palace. The captain general, however, told those who proffered him these showy evidences of loyalty on the part of the city that the times were not for such things.

Wounded in the Leg.

General Campos did not even come ashore here, but, after having passed from the gunboat to the steamer Villaverde, he sailed for Havana at 5 o'clock yesterday morning. According to the commonly accepted report the captain general was wounded in the leg in the battle between Manzanillo and Bayamo, and was obliged to return from Bayamo to Manzanillo on a litter.

Maceo's Noble Act.

According to a letter received here yesterday from the late field of action, the captain general, after taking refuge with his troops in Bayamo, sent a messenger to Antonio Maceo, asking him to allow the Spanish troops to go back to the battlefield and gather up their wounded and to give his word of honor not to molest them. Maceo answered in the affirmative, adding that the Spanish might not only come to take away their wounded on the field, but that they might come and take away those of their wounded to whom he had himself attended, and accordingly the Spaniards took all their wounded to Bayamo.

Campos Expresses His Gratitude.

It is said here that this action of Maceo so much pleased the captain general that on his return to Manzanillo he set at liberty all the political prisoners in that city. It is said also that he will do the same with the political prisoners all over the island, declaring, so it is said, that this is the least he can do in return for such noble conduct on the part of the rebels.

Spared Church Paraphernalia.

At present the insurgents are very much in movement around Baracoa. After burning Sabana, as told in the last of these letters, they burned the village of Jamal. Before doing so, however, they removed from the church of the doomed village, all the ecclesiastical paraphernalia they found there and stored the articles in a private house. They declared that they burned the church only because the Spaniards used it as a fort. In addition they have had in the same district several unimportant engagements.

Baracoa in Danger.

A Spanish gunboat arrived here to-day (July 28) from Baracoa with sealed documents for the governor. A sailor employed on the gunboat told the writer of this letter that it was feared Baracoa would soon be taken by the insurgents. The rebels of this district are concentrating their forces aronnd San Luis, with the object, it is said, of taking the town.

TWENTY-FIVE INJURED.

Knights Fired Off a Cannon as Another Train Passed.

Springfield, O., Aug. 7.—An excursion party of Knights of Pythias from Springfield and Dayton left here Monday afternoon to go into camp at Sandusky. The Third regiment, Ohio National guard, which has been in camp near Sandusky, left there in a special train for their homes. In the train bearing the Knights of Pythias was a cannon, which they loaded and fired at frequent intervals from the baggage car. The trains passed each other near Bellefontaine, and just as they met the Knights of Pythias, not knowing of the approach of the other train, fired the cannon, the heavy wadding and powder being discharged into one of the coaches of the other train only two or three feet away and injuring some twenty-five persons. Two or three will probably lose their sight, while an equal number have been rendered deaf. The injuries of the remainder consist of painful burns.

DR. BRADFORD'S ESCAPE.

Chief Hazen Investigating—Counterfeiters Held Under Bail.

New York, Aug. 7.—Chief Hazen, of the secret service at Washington, is investigating the escape of Dr. O. E. Bradford, the counterfeiter, who was arrested at his home on Third avenue and was missing in the morning although guarded by agents Callahan and Burns. The escape of Dr. Bradford so much resembles that of the three notorious postoffice robbers, Killoran, Allen and Russell, from the Ludlow street jail, on July 4 last, that the government authorities are determined to investigate the matter, and the facts in the case will probably be laid before the federal grand jury. The two agents were old and trusted officials. They are now practically under suspension. William Brockway, Abel L. Smith, William E. Wagner and Mrs. Libbie Smith, who were arrested Saturday at the home of Mrs. Smith for counterfeiting, were arranged before United States Commissioner Romaine at Jersey City yesterday, and all with the exception of Mrs. Smith held in default of $15,000 bail for examination on August 14. Mrs. Smith's bail was placed at $35,000. Brockway is now about 73 years old. He is known as an old offender to the police. His picture is No. 32 in the rogues' gallery. He was born in Connecticut, and is an engraver by trade. He studied in Yale college where he acquired a knowledge of chemistry. He became an expert penman and soon displayed his abilities. He has received three sentences, one for 30 years for counterfeiting bonds, this being suspended. Twice he received five year sentences for forgery.

PANIC AT THE "WILD WEST."

Several People Injured in a Stampede During a Storm.

Oswego, N. Y., Aug. 7.—While Buffalo Bill's Wild West show was giving a performance before about twelve thousand people here yesterday afternoon a terrific rain and wind storm struck the town. The immense dressing tent was blown to tatters and many of the men were injured. The horses with the show were also stampeded. Following this the east half of the canvas-covered grand stand was blown away and the six thousand people sheltered in that part of the field rushed down off the seats in a wild panic. Many women and children were trampled upon and badly hurt, but were soon assisted away to their homes. The Indians prevented a stampede of the western half of the audience, across the arena, by crowding their horses against the ropes. The band did not stop during the excitement and at the very worst moment struck up the "Star Spangled Banner." The show was also kept going in spite of the sheets of rain which swept across the field. Among the severely injured is an employe of the show named Brown, who is at the City hospital with a fractured skull. A little girl was nearly drowned before assistance reached her, and Mrs. P. Flanagan had her head badly cut by a flying pole. That many were not killed in the panic is regarded as a miracle.

WITHDRAWAL OF GOLD.

Coffee Importing Houses Call for About $2,500,000.

Washington, Aug. 7.—Treasury officials look for a withdrawal of about two and a half millions of gold this week. Unofficial advices are to the effect that the large coffee importing houses will make such a demand. The situation, however, occasions no uneasiness in Washington, as it is well understood that this withdrawal is in the course of legitimate business and not conducted by speculators. Just what the syndicate will do is a question upon which the treasury officials say they are not advised. If it sees fit to fill up the hole it will do so without consulting them. The gold reserve to-day stands at $104,539,079.

VIGILANT IS OUT OF IT

Will Not Race Again with Defender.

Mr. Willard Claims That His Boat Was "Jockeyed" Unfairly on Several Occasions and That Vigilant's Movements Alone Saved Collision. Trial Races Aug. 20-22.

Newport, R. I., Aug. 7.—Last evening, while everyone was discussing the merits of Defender and speculating on how much greater improvement the new boat would show when she should again meet Vigilant later in the week, Mr. Willard, who is George Gould's representative and manager of Vigilant, gave out the following letter addressed to the regatta committee of the New York Yacht club:

Mr. Willard's Protest.

Dear Sir—I hereby withdraw Vigilant's entries for the races on Thursday and Saturday. In doing so I desire to add a few words of explanation. As you are aware Mr. Gould and I, as his representative, fitted out and prepared Vigilant for racing for no purpose in the world except to assist in developing the fastest American yacht and thus aid in the defense of America's cup. I cannot, however, consent to continue racing Vigilant unless the contests are conducted according to the rules of yachting. I have now twice given way to Defender at the start of a race, when Vigilant clearly had the right of way, because I was unwilling to risk a collision which might leave America without a cup defender. However willing I may have been to waive my rights in the past, I am not willing to go on waiving them indefinitely, and even if I were, it is quite possible that a situation might be created in which a collision would be inevitable. As you know, I have already protested Defender's action at the start on July 22. In to-day's race Defender again violated the rules and forced Vigilant out of a position to which she was entitled. In both cases there would have been a collision if Vigilant had not given way. In each case the responsibility of avoiding an accident was cast upon me. It would not be fair either to the yacht or her owner to continue racing under those conditions. Very respectfully yours, E. A. WILLARD.

Cup Trial Races.

Newport, R. I., Aug. 7.—The America's Cup committee has decided to hold the trial races on Aug. 20 and 22, off Sandy Hook.

MRS. GARDNER LOCATED.

The Missing C. E. Nebraska Delegate Working as a Domestic.

Norwich, Conn., Aug. 7.—Mrs. Annie M. Gardner of Arcadia, Neb., the missing Christian Endeavor delegate, was located in this city last night by J. W. Landers, who has been pursuing the search for her. Mrs. Gardner arrived in Norwich from Boston July 16 and registered at the Connecticut Summer school as "Dorothy Mansfield." She boarded with Mrs. Harriet L. Smith of Williams street. At the close of school she went to the home of Edward R. La Pierre and has for ten days been employed there as a domestic. Mrs. Mansfield was seen and identified as Mrs. Gardner by Mr. Landers last night. She acknowledges her identity and says she has written to her husband that she will not return home. She says her husband accused her of being insane, but she does not think she is. She appears to be well and in full possession of her faculties. She says she will enter the Norwich Free academy for a course of study in the fall.

RIOTING AT TABREEZ.

Twenty of a Mob Killed While Attacking the Governor's Palace.

London, Aug. 7.—The Times publishes Tabreez advices, stating that the officers have fulfilled their promise to secure a reduction in the price of bread. This, however, did not satisfy the rioters, who, it is reported, attacked the palace of Muzaffer-Dine, son of the shah and governor of the city. The latter, it is stated, ordered his bodyguard to fire upon the mob, nearly twenty of whom were killed, while many others were wounded. A further and more vigorous attack upon the governor's palace is expected.

MISS FLAGLER IS VERY ILL.

The Woman Who Killed a Negro Boy Is Now Prostrated.

Washington, Aug. 7.—Miss Elizabeth M. Flagler has been located. She is at the home of a physician in Baltimore. Immediately after the verdict of the coroner's jury was announced exonerating her of the killing of Ernest Green, the young woman left the city, and up to the present time her whereabouts remained a mystery. Miss Flagler is said to be very ill, bordering on nervous prostration. She was so ill that it was thought advisable to remove her to a private sanitarium in Baltimore, where she could receive the best medical attention. One of Miss Flagler's most intimate lady friends accompanied her from this city and is now with her in Baltimore. As soon as her physical condition will permitt she will return to this city to answer any charge that may be brought against her.

Grand Jury Will Investigate.

Assistant District Attorney Taggart this morning said: "The grand jury will investigate the killing of young Green. That has been an established fact since the shooting occurred." The grand jury took a recess about the middle of July until September 9, subject to call in any matter of importance. According to Mr. Taggart no call will be made to especially consider the Flagler case.

THE MURDER OF LENZ.

Sachtleben Waiting for Government Aid to Prosecute.

Alton, Ill., Aug. 7.—Another letter has been received from W. L. Sachtleben, who is conducting the Lenz expedition. He is at Erzerum, waiting for government authority to proceed with the prosecution of the murderers of the American wheelman. Having established the identity of the assassins, he is compelled to lie idle until the United States compels the Turkish authorities to allow proceedings against the guilty parties. NEGROES DRIVEN OUT

Spring Valley Italians Carry Out Their Threat.

The Mayor of the Town, an Italian, and Several Italian Policemen Witness the Disgraceful Outrages. Women, Children and Invalids Roughly Handled.

Princeton, Ill., Aug. 7.—The Italian miners of Spring Valley made an attempt to carry out their resolution to expel all the colored people remaining in the city and the result was one of the most disgraceful outrages ever perpetrated in Bureau county. It was done under protection of the mayor and policemen. Innocent women and children were driven from their homes and insulted and their trunks and belongings dragged about and despoiled. The affair outside of Spring Valley has created a sensation and the news spread rapidly. Condemnation of the proceedings are coming from every quarter. The location presented a dismal scene during the latter part of the day. Wagons were hurrying about gathering up household goods and carrying them off on all the principal highways.

Watched by Mayor and Police.

During part of the time Martin Delmargo, the Italian mayor, accompanied by several Italian members of the police, were on the grounds watching the proceedings. Mayor Delmargo said he was there to see that the negroes got away peaceably, but if this was his purpose, he did not accomplish what he went for. Gov. Altgeld has interested himself in the matter. Last evening Sheriff Clark, of Princeton, received a message from the governor asking for information on the subject. He wished to know what was being done by the officers of the law. Sheriff Clark replied giving a brief history of the events, being substantially in accordance with the United Press. He also said the authorities in Spring Valley were doing nothing and that he had not even been called upon by the mayor for assistance.

Picked Out Women and Invalids.

At 2 p. m. the committee appointed at Monday's mass meeting to see that the negroes were out of town by 5 p. m. commenced operations. Going to the location where only women, children and invalids were left, they notified every one to have their traps ready to move out within two hours. Many were also roughly handled and their goods kicked about and broken up. The same scene was witnessed in every part of the city where the negroes lived, or had taken refuge.

Fled from Their Pursuers.

As the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy passenger train on the Streator and Walnut division entered Spring Valley the passengers saw a lot of negro refugees who had been waiting anxiously for the train for a few minutes board the cars like a lot of wild animals in fear of their pursuers. Among them was a woman fifty years old accompanied by three little children, who were terrified almost into insanity. She said she and the children had been abused and chased to the depot by a mob of Italians, who had threatened to take her life every minute.

Chicago Negroes Excited.

Chicago, Aug. 7.—A committee of five appointed at the Arlington hall meeting of negroes has gone to Spring Valley at the request of the mayor of that lawless town to investigate matters. About twenty-five negroes have also gone there to assist in protecting their race. Others will follow.

HE WILL PUSH THE BUTTON.

President Cleveland To Start the Atlanta Exposition Machinery.

Buzzards Bay, Mass., Aug. 7.—Gov. Bullock, of Georgia, chairman of the committee on ceremonials and ceremonial days of the Cotton States and International exposition, called on the president yesteaday to request him to press the electric button here to start the wheels in the exposition at Atlanta on Sept. 18, and also to tender to the president the services of the Gate City guards, the crack Georgia military company, as an honorary escort from Washington to Atlanta and return on October 23, when the president and his cabinet will visit the exposition. The president assured Gov. Bullock that he would take great pleasure in pressing the button and starting the wheels on the 18th, either from Gray Gables or wherever he might be on that day. As to the escort the president said he fully appreciated the compliment tendered by the military company, but his desire to avoid display compelled him to decline the honor.

SHELDON WAS GROGGY.

Louisville Police Prevent Murphy from Finishing His Man.

Louisville, Ky., Aug. 7.—The police stopped the fight between the lightweights, Australian Billy Murphy and Harry Sheldon, last night in the fifth round. Sheldon had just got to his feet by climbing on Murphy. He was groggy and another blow would have finished him. The police interfered at this point because they had orders to keep the fight within the limits of a boxing exhibition.

The Escaped Postoffice Thieves.

Montreal, Aug. 7.—It is almost certain that the three postoffice thieves, Killoran, Allen and Russell, who held up the guards at the Ludlow street jail, New York city, and escaped to Canada, are at Sorel islands, a short distance below Montreal in compahy with a band of smugglers. The chief of police at Three Rivers has left with his men for Sorrel islands where he will institute a thorough search. An organized gang of burglars is known to have its rendezvous in that vicinity.

The Tribune thinks that New York has too many hotels whose names are foreign. There are other things besides hotels that need reform in this direction, as, for instance, too many pretty and accomplished American girls.

Improved land in New Jersey is already higher in value than in any other State of the Union. Last year the total product of our farmers and dairymen brought $28,997,349, representing an average value per acre of improved land constituting 75-100 per cent. of the total area of the State, including mountain, salt meadow, pine barrens and sand dunes. The total average value per farm in New Jersey is $5,918, and there are 30,828 farms, of which 24,442 are worked by their owners.—New Brunswick Times.

Ollie Teall and his Girder Club are doubtless a thorn in the side of the New York authorities who have turned down Ollie at various times since their ascendancy to power. The admittance fee is fifty cents and the dues ten cents a month in the Girder Club, and you can get all the liquid refreshments you want there on Sunday. Ollie avers that if they molest his club they will have to do likewise with the Union League, Manhattan, and other big clubs. Which ever way the cat jumps in this case will satisfy Ollie.

Marvelous Results.

From a letter written by Rev. J. Gunderman, of Dimondale, Mich., we are permitted to make this extract: "I have no hesitation in recommending Dr. King's New Discovery, as the results were almost marvelous in the case of my wife. While I was pastor of the Baptist Church at Rives Junction she was brought down with pneumonia succeeding la grippe. Terrible paroxysms of coughing would last hours with little interruption and it seemed as if she could not survive them. A friend recommended Dr. King's New Discovery; it was quick in its work and highly satisfactory in results." Trial bottles free at L. W. Randolph's drug store. Regular size 50c and $1.

CYCLING COMMENT.

James D. Anderson and Frank Kesselring left town this morning on their wheels for Asbury Park.

Down South they have a plan that is the strongest manner of approval in the matter of bloomers that has yet been presented. A man did not like to see a woman in bloomers, and so he wrote a piece to the papers—why does the poor paper always have to so suffer—about it, calling the woman some very immodest names. The citizens of the town called on the man and made him go with them to the lady and apologize, which he did very earnestly. This system may not become generally popular, bnt it shows the views of the sensible Southerners in a no uncertain manner.—The American Wheelman.

One day recently William VanSickle, the North avenue butcher, met a friend who wanted to wager $10 that he could not produce a man in Plainfield that could ride a mile on the Gentleman's Driving Park track in less than four minutes. Owing to trade being a little quiet Mr. Van Sickle was glad of the opportunity to make $10 so he spoke to his clerk, Mifford Giles, who rides a wheel and he agreed to attempt it. Yesterday afternoon they all went to the track. Ellis Campbell was timer and stakeholder. Mr. Giles made a flying start and rode the mile in exceedingly good style. At the finish Mr. Campbell announced that the distance had been covered in 3:02. The loser of the bet very reluctantly gave up the $10 but was thoroughly convinced that the feat could be done. Mr. Van Sickle made his clerk a nice present for his three minutes work which amply repaid him.

Electric Bitters.

Electric Bitters is a medicine suited for any season, but perhaps more generally needed in the spring, when the languid exhausted feeling prevails, when the liver is torpid and sluggish and the need of a tonic and alterative is felt. A prompt use of this medicine has often averted long and perhaps fatal bilious fevers. No medicine will act more surely in counteracting and freeing the system from the malarial poison. Headache, indigestion, constipation, dizziness yield to Electric Bitters. Only 50c per bottle at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

Without Imagination.

A man wearing a last year's straw hat and having a generally faded appearance entered an uptown bargain store yesterday and, after looking around a few minutes, picked up a number of things from the counter and started to walk off with them.

"Do you wish to buy those articles?" politely asked the clerk, intercepting him.

"Certainly not," replied the other. "Why should I buy them?"

"Then please put them back on the counter," said the clerk, sternly.

"Well, I guess not. Young man, I was invited by the proprietor of this place to come in here and carry these things away."

"Were you, indeed? Then, perhaps you have some letter from him directing me to let you have them."

"Letter nothin'. I don't need no letter. The invitation is a public one and hangs right out here in front of your store. What does that sign say? 'These goods must go regardless of cost. Come in and take them.' Well, that's just what I'm doin'. I'm takin' them regardless of cost."—Buffalo Express.

The Dowager Empress of China was once a slave. As a young girl she was sold to a Chinese general, who gave her to the Emperor. The latter was so charmed with her sweet disposition and good sense that he married her. At his death, during the minority of the present Emperor, the dowager Empress administered the affairs of the government as regent better than any Chinese monarch for many years.

Kenneth Bazemore had the good fortune to receive a small bottle of Chamberlaim's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy when three members of his family were sick with dysentery. When troubled with dysentery, diarrhœa, colic or cholera morbus, give this remedy a trial and you will be more than pleased with the result. GUNBOATS ASKED FOR Foreign Settlement at Fung-Fook in Danger.

Position of Europeans at Foo-Chow Also Critical—Province of Fo-Kien in a State of Rebellion—Officials Say They Will Be Unable To Cope with the Mob.

Shanghai, Aug. 7.—The Foo-Chow correspondent of the Shanghai Mercury telegraphs that the position of Europeans there is critical, owing to the openly expressed hostile feeling of the natives toward them. The Chinese officers declare that in the event of an outbreak directed against foreigners they will not be able to cope with the mob. The province of Fo-Kien, in which are situated Ku-Cheng and Foo-Chow, is in a state of rebellion. The American mission house at Fung-Fook has been burned and gunboats have been telegraphed for to protect the foreign settlement there.

UNJUSTLY CRITICISED.

Ministers Denby and Dun Defended at Washington.

Washington, Aug. 7.—The sentiments expressed by the members of the American colong at Shanghai yesterday in opposition to Ministers Denby, coupled with the recent statement made in Washington that both Ministers Denby and Dun at Pekin and Tokio are "orientalized" do not receive the indorsment of the state department officials, diplomats and others who are familiar with the work of these gentlemen. So slowly does the Chinese government act in all matters affecting foreigners, that it may be, it is said, months before an investigation of the late outrage upon the missionaries at Kucheng is held and the perpetrators punished.

Too Quick To Censure.

The foreigners residing in China and Japan are always quick to censure their diplomatic representatives when troubles between themselves and the natives occur, notwithstanding repeated evidences that their strictures are unjust. A case in point is that of the murder some years ago of Mr. Margary, who was attached to the British embassy at Pekin and who was killed by the Chinese populace in Yunan while returning to Pekin from a visit to the Burmah border. The British residents at Shanghai held a series of indignation meetings and denounced Sir Thomas Wade, the British minister, for his apparent indifference in securing redress. It was two years before the Chinese government could be induced to take action.

Was Threatening War.

It subsequently appeared (when the official correspondence was published) that at the very time Sir Thomas was roundly abused for his alleged "indifference" he was threatening the Chinese government with war for its failure to punish Mr. Margary's murderers. It will be found, it is claimed, that Mr. Denby has been equally vigilant in protecting American interests in China, notwithstanding the little regard which some of the Americans at Shanghai seem to entertain for him.

No Proof of Apathy.

Mr. Denby has represented the United States at Pekin for ten consecutive years. He was appointed by Mr. Cleveland during his first administration and was continued in office by President Harrison, although the minister is a democrat. He is well regarded at the Chinese foreign office, but this circumstance cannot be adduced as a proof that he has become "orientalized." It is one of the interesting facts of diplomacy that the more highly a minister is esteemed in the country to which he is accredited, the more satisfactorily can he represent his own government.

An Intense American.

State department officials insist that they have no knowledge of President Cleveland's reported intention of relieving Mr. Dun at Tokio. While Mr. Dun is for many reasons extremely popular with the ruling element in Japan, he has shown himself in all cases, where the interests of the two countries were concerned, to be an intense American. Numerous evidences of this may be found among the archives of the state department. He has been connected with the American legation at Tokio for sixteen years. During that time he has risen by sheer force of merit, from second secretary to minister plenipotentiary, a most unusual experience in American diplomacy.

TO RELIEVE THE ATLANTA.

The Cruiser Cincinnati Will Look Out for Filibusters.

Washington, Aug. 7.—The navy department has practically decided to recall the cruiser Atlanta from her present duty of watching for Cuban filibustering expeditions off the Florida coast and to substitute the cruiser Cincinnati in her place. It has been considered best, however, not to make the change at present because the departure of the Cincinnati would interfere with the coming manoeuvres of the north Atlantic squadron. The change will take place soon, however, and the Atlanta will return to New York, where she will probably go into dry dock and then, if sufficient time remains and there is no urgent need for her services elsewhere, she will take the Cincinnati's place in the squadron. The Cincinnati left the Brooklyn navy yard to adjust her compasses Monday at Sandy Hook. She returned to the lower bay yesterday and will wait there for the cruiser New York. Both vessels are under orders to proceed to Newport, R. I., where the fleet will rendezvous.

THE GREELEY COLONY.

A Happy People and a High Standard of Public Morals.

The Greeley Colony was composed of the best element of Eastern citizenship; and the first and most important lesson it teaches is that people of this class are responsive to such a call as Mr. Meeker put forth. He did not appeal to the instinct of speculation. He pleaded for new institutions, and aimed at high ideals; and he found that men of culture and of means were ready to co-operate heartily in such an undertaking. This fact lends encouragement to those who are hoping for great things to come from the development of this arid region.

The site of the Colony was not well chosen—or, at least, it did not in all respects meet the expectations of those who selected it. They were therefore unable to realize all their plans. They made some serious miscalculations. For instance, they estimated the cost of their canals at twenty thousand dollars, while the actual cost was more than twenty times as great.

Fruit culture was mentioned in the prospectus as certain to be an important industry; but the soil and climate proved unsuitable. The dream of an improved household economy, based on a plan for co-operative bakeries and laundries also proved delusive. There were other disappointments; but the fundamental claims of irrigation were all vindicated at Greeley, as they have been whenever and wherever brought fairly to the test.

A few years of intelligent labor brought a high degree of average prosperity, based upon substantial foundations. Even the severe panic of the summer of 1893 did not materially disturb these foundations. During these trying weeks when mines and smelters shut down and banks and stores closed their doors, water, soil and sunshine continued to do their perfect work in the Union Colony.

Greeley seemed like an oasis of prosperity in a desert of despair. The farmers received as the reward of the summer's labor more than a million dollars in cash for the single item of potatoes. But this is the chief crop in Greeley, after the necessities of life have been provided for; and the wide reputation and handsome financial returns won for the Greeley potato illustrate the wisdom of a surplus crop of the highest quality.

Greeley's civic institutions are like her potatoes. They represent the best standard available, and are the pride of the people. To sell any kind of intoxicating liquors within the boundaries of the Union Colony invalidates the title to the soil. This is one of the original plans which worked well; and the schools, churches, libraries and lyceums are all in keeping with this high standard of public morals. A careful study of the development of Greely, alike in its social and industrial aspects, would throw much more light upon the problems of Arid America, but this cannot be entered upon now.—Century.

For Champagne Buyers.

Jerome K. Jerome tells in his paper, to-day, of giving a little dinner once and discussing the matter of wine with the head waiter before the guests arrived. "Well," said the waiter, "if you take my advice you will give them a very good champagne to start with, let's say Mousseux Sec 1878, and let that go round twice. After that, sir—well—here's a very good wine that I always recommend, at five shillings the bottle, and then, if I were you, sir, I would finish up with this," and he pointed to a modest little brand at three and six. "And don't you think," Jerome said, "that they will notice the difference?" "Lor' bless you, no, sir," said the man; "we generally do it that way. I wouldn't undertake to tell the difference myself between champagne at sixteen shillings and champagne at five after the first two glasses."

He Knew a Street Car.

It was high noon in New York, and a cable car on the Broadway line going downtown picked up an oldish man at Fourteenth street. The passengers made room for him by squeezing, and he was no sooner seated than he opened the satchel he had been carrying and took from it a piece of cheese, two old fashioned fried cakes, a bottle of cold tea and a chunk of corn beef. These article were spread on a newspaper on his knees, and the man prepared to eat his luncheon with a nonchalance that set everybody to smiling and nudging. Next on his left sat a dudish young man, who stood it for about five minutes and then indignantly demanded:

"Sir, do you take this for a case?"

"What's a cafe?" asked the eater, after a hearty swig at the bottle of tea.

"A restaurant, then?"

"Oh! no! No, I don't take this car for no restaurant. This is a street car, but it's 12 o'clock and I allus eat dinner at 12, no matter where I am. Here's more'n I want, I guess, and if you or anybody else feels like takin' holt you'll be entirely welcome."

Nobody "took holt," and without the least minding the giggling and tittering of the passengers the man calmly finished his meal, replaced the undevoured portion in his satchel, and as he stood up and brushed the crumbs off of his legs, he said:

"This is a street car, of course, and I feel a heap better after having sunthin' to eat!"—Detroit Free Press.

SUICIDE OF A BUCK ELK.

The elk lost his life in the melee by breaking his neck. Hence the keeper, who is a just man, feels that things are about even and holds no ill will toward the deceased animal.

It all came to pass one morning at Lincoln Park. The park commissioners having on hand a supply of buffalo and elks larger than was needful for the entertainment of visitors had made favorable terms with the proprietor of a wild beast show. The Wild West man, who wore his hair long and hinted that he had hunted buffalo on the plains with the Grand Duke Alexis, was to take two buffalo bulls of the Lincoln Park breed, paying therefore $400 each. The elks he was to get for $100 each. Keeper De Vry prepared to cage the animals for shipment to Philadelphia, where the Wild West show is getting wilder every day in anticipation of the summer's tour.

The buffalo bulls were quiet and docile. They walked into the traveling cages with no undue or unexpected manifestations with their hoofs or horns. The elk cow, too, showed a lady like and tractable spirit and entered her traveling cage with a certain dignity resulting from long residence on the North side.

But with the buck elk, which is a scientific term and implies many attributes, it was different. He pawed the air wildly after being lassoed, and when finally choked into submission displayed a sulkiness of disposition which cut the keeper to the heart. When the entrance of the "shifting cage" was reached the innate viciousness of the elk's nature, long dormant by the genial influences of North side culture, awoke in all its savagery.

Opening wide his mouth and displaying a double row of wicked teeth, he gathered the keeper by the slack of his trousers and shook him with a vigor worthy of a better cause. He slammed the tired German against either side of the cage, ate heartily of his trousers and rested only when he had removed the best portion of them. The keeper crawled out of the shifting cage, and told the elk that if the prospect of going to Philadelphia affected him that way he had better not go. The elk, moved to a greater frenzy by these remarks, continued to trash about the cage, and in a final paroxysm of rage and wounded vanity drove his head against the heavy timbers at the far end of the narrow compartment.

There the matter ended, for the elk, with a sharp agonized cry so very human like as to make the spectators shiver, sank to his knees, dead.

Keeper De Vry refused to believe that the elk committed suicide when it saw that it was doomed to go to Philadelphia.—Chicago Times-Herald.

THE TRINIDAD COOLIES.

A Species of Slavery Existing in a British Colony.

Notwithstanding British criticism of the manner in which the colored people of the South are treated by the whites, there are some things about the treatment of the free labor problem in the British island colony of Trinidad that seem curiously mediæval in principle.

Soon after the negroes of Trinidad were freed, now more than sixty years ago, the planters, upon the plea, doubtless just enough, that the freedmen would not work, obtained from the Government special legislation providing for the importation of East Indian coolie laborers. When the importations of coolies began negroes were demanding from 60 cents to $1.25 a day, according to the work they were employed to do. The law authorizing the importation of coolies provided that they should contract to remain with their employers for a term of years, working for 25 cents a day, and that they should meanwhile have medical attendance and be returned free of charge to their homes. A special export tax on the products of the plantations was laid to pay for the transportation of the coolies between India and Trinidad. The importation of the coolies has been going on ever since that time, until now from that source and from natural increase there are 60,000 coolies in a population of 200,000. The white population is small, so that by far the larger part of the inhabitants are negroes and coolies. The former, in competition with contract labor at 25 cents a day, earn from 45 to 60 cents a day. Negro mechanics earn as high as $1 a day. The negroes are a stronger race than the coolies, and the heavier work still falls upon them. They are the mechanics of the island.

Mistaken Identity.

"Have your hair cut?" asked the barber, as he worked away at the lather.

"Does it need cutting?" replied the man in the chair.

"Very much. When was it cut last?"

"Yesterday afternoon."

"I thought it hadn't been cut lately. Where was it cut?"

"Here in your shop."

"Yes, it does look like one of our cuts. What chair was it?"

"Yours."

"Ah! yes. I think I do remember you. Yes, I think I cut your hair about 3 o'clock in the afternoon. Excuse me, please. I took you for a man who had his hair cut in some other shop last fall!"—Detroit Free Press.

Realized Its Truth.

"Well," muttered the collector, as he sank wearily into a chair and turned to his employer, "there is one old saying that I can vouch for."

"What is it?"

"The one that says, 'You never find a man out till you trust him.'"

CHAPTER IV.—THE BOX OF CLUES.

(The pages which follow are from Miss Fairbanks' journal, begun after the conclusion of the notes already given to the reader.)

Wednesday night.—I have resolved to record carefully each day the progress I make in my examination of the house. I began to-day at the bottom—that is, with the room least likely to contain any clue, the parlor. I took a chalk line and a yard stick, and divided the floor into square yards, and every one of these squares I examined on my hands and knees. I found in this way literally nothing on the carpet but dust, lint, two common white pins and three inches of blue sewing silk.

At last I got the dust-pan and brush, and yard by yard swept the floor. I took the sweepings in a white pasteboard box out into the yard in the strong sunlight, and examined them. There was nothing but dust and lint and five inches of brown woolen thread—evidently a raveling from some dress material. The blue silk and the brown thread are the only possible clues which I have found to-day, and they are hardly possible. Rufus' wife can probably account for them. I have written to her about them.

Nobody has come to the house all day. I went down to the store this afternoon to get some necessary provisions, and people stopped talking when I came in. The clerk took my money as if it were poison.

Thursday night.—To-day I have searched the sitting-room, out of which my father's bed-room opens. I found two bloody footprints on the carpet which no one has noticed before—perhaps because the carpet itself is red and white. I used a microscope which I had in my school work. The footprints, which are close to the bed-room door, pointing out into the sitting-room, are both from the right foot; one is brighter than the other, but both are faint. The foot was evidently either bare or clad only in a stocking—the prints are so widely spread. They are wider than my father's shoes. I tried one in the brightest print.

I found nothing else new in the sitting-room. The bloodstains on the doors which have been already noted are still there. They had not been washed away, first by order of the sheriff, and next by mine. These stains are of two kinds; one looks as if made by a bloody garment brushing against it; the other, I should say, was made in the first place by the grasp of a bloody hand, and then brushed over with a cloth. There are none of these marks upon the door leading into the front entry and the china closet. The china closet is really a pantry, although I use it only for my best dishes and preserves.

Friday night.—To-day I searched the closet. One of the shelves, which is about as high as my shoulders, was bloodstained. It looked to me as if the murderer might have caught hold of it to steady himself. Did he turn faint, after his dreadful deed? Some tumblers of jelly were ranged on that shelf and they had not been disturbed. There was only that bloody clutch on the edge.

I found on this closet door, under the shelves, as if it had been rolled there by a careless foot, a button, evidently from a man's clothing. It is an ordinary black-enamelled metal trousers button; it had evidently been worn off and clumsily sewn on again, for a quantity of stout white thread is still clinging to it. This button must have belonged either to a single man or to one with an idle wife.

If one black button has been sewn on with white thread another is likely to be. I may be wrong, but I regard this button as a clue.

The pantry was thoroughly swept—cleaned, indeed, by Rufus' wife, the day before she left. Neither my father nor Rufus could have dropped it there, and they never had occasion to go to the closet. The murderer dropped the button.

I have a white pasteboard box which I have marked, "Clues." In it I have put the button.

This afternoon Phoebe Dole came in. She is very kind. She has recut the dyed silk, and she fitted it to me. Her great shears, clicking in my ears, made me nervous. I did not feel like stopping to think about clothes. I hope I did not appear ungrateful, for she is the only soul beside Henry who has treated me as before this happened.

Phoebe asked me what I found to busy myself about, and I replied, "I am searching for my father's murderer." She asked if I thought I should find a clue, and I replied, "I think so." I had found the button then, but I did not speak of it. She said Maria was not very well.

I saw her eyeing the stains on the doors, and I said I had not washed them off, for I thought they might yet serve a purpose in detecting the murderer. She looked at those on the entry door—the brightest ones—and said she did not see how they could help, for there were no plain finger marks there, and she should think they would make me nervous.

"I'm beyond being nervous," said I.

Saturday.—To-day I have found something which I cannot understand. I have been at work in the room where my father came to his dreadful end. Of course some of the most startling evidences have been removed. The bed is clean, and the carpet washed, but the worst horror of it all clings to that room. The spirit of murder seems to haunt it. It semed to me at first that I could not enter that room, but in it I made a strange discovery.

My father, while he carried little money about his person, was in the habit of keeping considerable sums in the house; there is no bank within ten miles. However, he was wary; he had a hiding-place which he had revealed to no one but myself. He had a small stand in his room near the head of his bed. Under this stand, or rather under the top of it, he had tacked a large leather wallet. In this he kept all his spare money. I remember how his eyes twinkled when he showed it to me.

"The average mind thinks things have either got to be in or on," said my father. "They don't consider there's ways of getting around gravitation and calculation."

In searching my father's room I called to mind that saying of his, and his peculiar system of concealing, and then I made my discovery. I have argued that in a search of this kind I ought not only to search for hidden traces of the criminal, but for everything which had been for any reason concealed. Something which my father himself has hidden, something from his past history may furnish a motive for some one else.

"I'M BEYOND BEING NERVOUS," SAID I.

The money in the wallet under the table, some $500, had been removed and deposited in the bank. Nothing more was to be found there. I examined the bottom of the bureau, and the undersides of the chair seats. There are two chairs in the room, beside the cushioned rocker—green-painted wooden chairs, with flag seats. I found nothing under the seats.

Then I turned each of the green chairs completely over, and examined the bottoms of the legs. My heart leaped when I found a bit of leather nicely tacked over one. I got the tack hammer and drew the tacks. The chair leg had been hollowed out, and for an inch the hole was packed tight with cotton. I began picking out the cotton, and soon I felt something hard. It proved to be an old-fashioned gold band, quite wide and heavy, like a wedding ring.

I took it over to the window and found this inscription on the inside: "Let love abide forever." There were two dates—one in August, forty years ago, and the other in August of this present year.

I think the ring has never been worn; while the first part of the inscription is perfectly clear it looks old, and the last is evidently freshly cut.

This could not have been my mother's ring. She had only her wedding ring, and that was buried with her. I think my father must have treasured up this ring for years; but why? What does it mean? This can hardly be a clue; this can hardly lead to the discovery of a motive, but I will put it in the box with the rest.

Sunday night.—To-day, of course, I did not pursue my search. I did not go to church. I could not face old friends that could not face me. Sometimes I think that everybody in my native village believes in my guilt. What must I have been in my general appearance and demeanor all my life? I have studied myself in the glass, and tried to discover the possibilities of evil that they must see in my face.

This afternoon, about 3 o'clock, the hour when people here have just finished their Sunday dinner, there was a knock on the north door. I answered it, and a strange young man stood there with a large book under his arm. He was thin and cleanly shaved, with a clerical air.

"I have a work here to which I would like to call your attention," he began; and I stared at him in astonishment, for why should a book agent be peddling his wares upon the Sabbath?

His mouth twitched a little. "It's a Biblical Cyclopaedia," said he.

"I don't think I care to take it," said I.

"You are Miss Sarah Fairbanks, I believe?"

"That is my name," I replied, stiffly.

"Mr. Henry Ellis, of Digby, sent me

"MY NAME IS DIX—FRANCIS DIX."

here," he said next. "My name is Dix—Francis Dix."

Then I knew that he was Henry's cousin from Boston—the detective who had come to help me. I felt tears coming to my eyes. "You are very kind to come," I managed to say.

"I am very selfish, not kind," he returned, "but you had better let me come in, or my chance of success in my book agency is lost, if the neighbors see me trying to sell it on a Sunday. And, Miss Fairbanks, this is a bona fide agency. I shall canvass the town."

He came in. I showed him all this that I have written, and he read it carefully. When he had finished he sat still for a long time, with his face screwed up in a peculiar meditative fashion.

"We'll ferret this out in three days at the most," said he, with a sudden clearing of his face and a flash of his eyes at me.

"I had planned for three years, perhaps," said I.

"I tell you, we'll do it in three days," he repeated. "Where can I get board while I canvass for this remarkable and interesting book under my arm? I can't stay here, of course, and there is no hotel. Do you think the two dressmakers next door, Phoebe Dole and the other one, would take me in?"

I said they had never taken boarders.

"Well, I'll go over and inquire," said Mr. Dix; and he had gone, with his book under his arm, almost before I knew it.

Never have I seen any one act with the strange, noiseless, soft speed that this man does. Can he prove me innocent in three days? He must have succeeded in getting board at Phoebe Dole's, for I saw him go past to meeting with her this evening. I feel sure he will be over very early to-morrow morning.

OLD FRENCH STYLES

PARIS LOOKS FOR A REVIVAL OF LOUIS XVI. MODES.

Old Fashions Modified by Modern Ideas of Taste. Models of Marie Antoinette Fichus. Illustrations of Fashions of To-day.

The most interesting side of fashion just at present is the one which must present itself in the near future, and while it is yet too early to predict with any degree of certainty the coming variations in the modes, the Paris budgets of fashion continue to predict the revival of the Louis XVI. styles, and we may safely expect the appearance of old-time gowns in the early autumn. To be sure, they will be modified somewhat, and gracefully adjusted to suit present conditions of taste, but that does not alter the fact that fashion is to repeat herself even if it is not quite on the old lines.

Louis XVI. gowns are made of two or three different materials, and striped woolen goods, very light and thin, are combined with shot taffeta silk, which is used for the front of the skirt, vest and fichu. The last is edged with ruffles and crossed in front under the belt. The prettiest taffeta petticoat displayed in the gowns which are made in the revived style, is of chameleon coloring and trimmed with pinked out ruches of the same stuff.

But all the aristocratic elegance of attire is, as yet, the exception and not the rule of dress, for the ideal midsummer gowns are made of chine silk, organdies and the popular batiste, which takes the lead in all thin materials, and the most successful gowns are among some of the latest productions brought out after the prolonged experiment in discordant color combinations of the early season had given way to harmony of coloring and more artistic taste. Prettiest of all are the white dresses, or those of some soft tint with just a touch of color and contrast in the finish.

pure white gowns, and white with gray. For those who revel in bright colors and conspicuous effects, the startling combinations of dark blue and vivid green, heliotrope and pale blue, and red and yellow remain.

The numerous alpaca and canvas gowns seem to foretell the decline of crepon, yet the latest reports from Paris are to the effect that all the new materials being manufactured for winter use are creped in novel designs, and either striped, plaited or changeable in color.—N.Y. Sun.

Gone, But Not Forgotten.

Jones—I don't think Mrs. Betterdays ever enjoyed her money as much as she does now.

Mrs. Jones—Why, she lost her money some years ago.

Jones—True, but it has supplied her with an unfailing topic of conversation ever since.—Truth.

A Baffled Advertiser.

An exchange paper tells the story of a man in London who determined to spend all he made during the first year in advertising. He soon found it was impossible, for the simple reason that the more he advertised the more he made, and after a strenuous effort to get rid of his money he was obliged to give it up.—Charleston Mercury.

A SHIP'S KITCHEN.

A Place for Everything and Everything In Its Place.

Though there be many who go down to the sea in ships, and who continue thereon for days, there are few who ever see or really know the kitchen side of the boat.

Though there is almost as much difference between the kitchens of the ocean palaces and the rough sailing craft as there is between the very rich and the hopelessly poor, they are alike in one thing, and that is their economy of space.

"A nice, large kitchen," the delight of New England housekeepers, is unknown at sea, and would be unappreciated if known. Meals for five hundred or a thousand persons will be cooked in a room scarcely as large as the kitchen in a low priced flat, or the pantry in a country house. There are two reasons for this: Space is valuable, every foot of it having its value as storage for freight or room for passengers; then on ship the kitchen floors are kept clean by scrubbing them with sand. They are about as white as the tables, and the smaller the kitchen the easier to keep it in order.

With a small kitchen it is a prime necessity to keep everything in its place, and one must be systematic from the simple logic of the circumstances. It would amaze one to see how compactly the supplies for the large household on board of ships can be arranged. Nothing is left down on shelves or in drawers which may be hung on hooks. Even the platters and serving dishes are made to hang, there being a loophole on one end for this very purpose.

The system of arrangement and conduct is faultless. It has become what it is by a process of evolution, and there is no break in it. To get much into little, to do things neatly, quickly and well, are the principles on which ships are run, from the captain's place to the humblest on board. Even Mr. Gradgrind would find there all the system he wanted.

Two things have added much to the health and comfort of sea going folks—the process of canning soups, fish, meats and vegetables and the use of refrigerators.

The luxuries of the table on land appear on the tables at sea. Even fish—that most difficult food to serve fresh, appears to the very end of the voyage. If the kitchen is small the refrigerator is not. It is provided, according to the size of the ship, with an amount of ice, varying from one hundred to four hundred tons and holds also the fish, meat and poultry.

It is far away from the kitchen, because the cooks do not help themselves to the supplies. These are given out as needed. Both canned and fresh vegetables are carried, the former being served when the fresh are gone.

While many ships and steamers still continue to lay in a supply of water, others do not, and all carry a condenser, which makes it possible to have the best fresh water directly from the ocean, and this, being distilled water, is absolutely pure. This water serves for all purposes except the baths. Salt water is provided for these. When water is carried, it is stored at the bottom of the ship and pumped up.

The Movement for Christian Union.

The Grindelwald Conference issued a circular recommending that on Whitsunday Christian ministers "devote at least one sermon to calling attention to the good work of some branch of the Church other than their own, especially those branches whose many excellencies are obscured from the observation of their fellow Christians by the prejudice and suspicion engendered by centuries of strife." The appeal is indorsed by a special committee of the Anglican Lambeth Conference of Bishops, including the Archbishops of Canterbury, Armagh and Dublin, all the English and Scottish Presbyterian Moderators, the chairman of the English Congregational Union, the president of the English Baptist Union, and such representative American religious leaders as Dr. Lyman Abbott, Bishop Henry W. Warren (Methodist), Bishop Potter (Episcopal), and the Rev. Dr. R. S. MacArthur.

Farragut in the Rigging.

It is a familiar but an always thrilling story how Admiral Farragut, in carrying his fleet into Mobile Bay on Aug. 5, 1864, posted himself up in the rigging of his flagship, the Hartford, and directed the sailing and the fighting from that exposed elevation.

He had to sail between two formidable forts—Gaines on the one and Morgan on the other—over a line of hidden pile and hidden torpedoes, and then, when he had got over these strong and complicated defences and was within the bay, he had to engage a strong Confederate squadron. The brilliancy and bravery with which the enterprise was carried through, to the complete defeat of the Confederates can never be forgotten.

Evidence of an Ancient Feud.

One epitaph in Trinity Church yard is valuable as showing the antiquity of a still vigorous sentiment: "Here lies the body of Mr. William Bradford, printer, who departed this life May 23, 1752, aged 92 years. He was born in Leicestershire, Old England, in 1660, and came over to America in 1682 before the city of Philadelphia was laid out." It would thus appear that the Gothamite idea of the Quaker city existed so long ago as the seventeenth century.

CLIMAX CLUB WAS SECOND.

BEATEN IN THE STATE SHOOT BY THE MAPLEWOOD GUN CLUB.

The Cracks of New Jersey Attend the Meet and With Steady Arms and Good Aim Break the Empire Targets.

"Bang" went the guns and "crash" went the targets at the Climax Gun Club yesterday when the August shoot of the New Jersey State Trap Shooters League was held, at which quite a number of the cracks from this vicinity were in attendance. The warm weather made itself felt among the shooters but the sheltered position among the hills and trees shielded them to a great extent and a most enjoyable day was passed. There were eight events and the team shoot in which seven of the nine clubs in the League were represented by teams of five men each. The Maplewood Gun Club, of Maplewood, won the Club shoot by 112 out of a possible 125, with the Climax Club, of this city second. The scores of the other clubs were as follows:

Climax Gun Club, of Plainfield, 99.

Endeavor Gun Club, of Jersey City, 94.

Elizabeth Gun Club, of Elizabeth, 91.

South Side Gun Club, of Newark, 90.

Boiling Springs Fishing and Gun Club, of Rutherford, 90.

Riverside Gun Club, of Red Bank, 101.

Though the Riverside club made a better score than the Climax club they were unable to get a place by the inelgibility in having one man short, and filling out their team by R. O. Heikes, the visiting champion.

The summaries of the sweepstakes were as follows:

Event No. 1—10 Empire targets at known angles. Sigler, Hoffman and Van Dyke, 10; Brentnall, Heikes, E. Sickley, Huck and Crosly, 9; Keller and Hebbard, 8; Paul and Thomas, 7.

Event No. 2—10 Empire targets at unknown angles. Hoffman, 10; Brientnall, Van Dyke, Hebbard, E. Sickley, C. Sweet and Yeoman 9; Keller, Thomas, Huck and E. Miller 8; Heckes, Drake and W. Smith, 7.

Event No. 3—15 Empire targets at known angles. Sigler, 15; Van Dyke and Hecks, 14; Breintnall, Thomas, Huck, C. Smith and Drake, 13; Keller and E. Miller 12.

Event No. 4—15 Empire targets at unknown angles. Heckes, E. Miller, Drake, Ivins and Edwards, 14; Brientnall, Hoffman, Hebbard, Thomas, Geoffrey and Ballard, 13; Sigler, Van Dyke, E. Sickley, Yeoman and Collins, 12; Piercy and Paul, 11.

Event No. 5—20 Empire targets at unknown angles. Heikes, 19; Van Dyke, Miller, W. Sweet and McAlpin, 18; Keeler, Ivins, E. Sickley, C. Smith and Yeoman, 17; Brientnall, Leythy, Ballard and Geoffrey, 16.

Event No. 6—10 Empire targets at unknown angles. Geoffrey, Ivins, Sickley and Williams, 10; Hoffman, E. Sickley, Heikes, Yeoman, W. Smith, Drake, Proctor and Von Lengerke, 9; Piercy, Brientnall, Van Dyke, Thomas, Miller, Cooper, Woodruff and Major, 8; Keller, Paul, Sigler, C. Smith, Ballard, Heritage, Steiry and Collins, 7.

Event No. 7—10 Empire targets at unknown angles. E. Sickley and Heikes, 10; McAlpin, Collins, Keller and C. Smith, 9; Drake, A. Sickley, Geoffrey and W. Smith, 8; Grier and Rockafeller, 7.

Event No. 8—10 Empire targets at unknown angles. E. Sickley, Grier, Heikes and McAlpin, 10; Keller 9.

The purses in the first seven events were divided into four parts and in the eighth event into two parts.

Tony Creiger was in charge of the financial matters and managed them to the complete satisfaction all.

The crowd broke up about six o'clock and the visitors voted the Climax Gun a very hospitable band.

Visited Bound Brook.

Twelve members of Franklin Council, No. 41, J. O. U. A. M., went to Bound Brook last night and spent a pleasant evening with Pioneer Council. After the regular business, the visitors were taken to a restaurant and given an elaborate supper. They returned home about twelve o'clock well pleased with the trip.

THE BULLET REMOVED SAFELY.

Dr. Mattison Was all Right but Mrs. Summers Wanted Another Doctor.

The victim of the accidental shooting yesterday, little Sherman Haberle, is doing as well as can be expected. He was taken yesterday afternoon to Dr. Cooper at Westfield, who put the lad under the influence of ether and cutting a slit in the side of his jaw, took the bullet out, which he found imbedded three-quarters of an inch in bone.

The bullet was about half an inch long and one of the kind known as 22-shorts. The lad recovered from the ether before the operation was completed but never made the slightest objection.

Dr. Mattison says that it was Mrs. Summers and not he that said Sherman must be sent to another physician. When Dr. Mattison attempted to probe for the bullet, he did not break his probe but merely bent it in trying to loosen the bullet from its firm position in the jaw bone.

J. G. Haberle now has the little piece of lead on exhibition at his store on Somerset street.

A GOLF CLUB ASSURED.

The Hillside Tennis Club to Organize One Wednesday Evening.

The Board of Governors of the Hillside Tennis Club met last evening and listened to the report of the golf committee, which was very favorable, showing that their energetic efforts had been rewarded. It was decided to call a special meeting of the club on Wednesday evening to organize the golf club. Quite a number of answers have been received to the circulars sent out, but it is hoped that those who have not already done so will respond favorably before next Wednesday evening.

Golf is fast becoming one of the most popular games in the United States, while it already holds a very high place in England and Scotland, and so it seems but right that such a city as Plainfield should afford the means of playing it.

Pirates of the Kills Can't Get Bail

William and John Farron and Thomas Kellett, the pirates of the Kills, were unable yesterday to secure bail at Elizabeth and were committed to the Union county jail this morning. Detective Shotwell, of Staten Island, accompanied by a representative from District-Atterney's Fitzgerald's office, in Richmond county, was in Elizabeth yesterday afternoon completing arrangements for the removal of the prisoners on requisition papers to Richmond county for trial. The authorities there expect to get control of the prisoners next week.

Trilby Continues.

Monday began the 17th week of "Trilby's" unexampled career at the Garden Theatre in New York, and the constant succession of crowded houses proclaim the lasting qualities of the powerful drama which Paul M. Potter evolved from Du Maurier's story. The 150th performance of "Trilby" will occur in the near future.

A Journey to the North Pole.

Sir John Franklin tried to go to the North pole and did not make a success of the attempt, but got lost on the road. The road to Tier's is very plain however and you cannot get lost, so just run over today and examine his special sale of candies or try his ice cream soda at five cents a glass.

To Be Tried Again.

The case of Lowrie against McGinley will be retried before Justice Newcorn and a jury on Tuesday afternoon. It is expected that the trial will be held in the city court rooms.

My boy was taken sick with a disease resembling bloody flux. The first thing I thought of was Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy. Two doses of it settled the matter and cured him sound and well. I heartily recommend this remedy to all persons suffering from a like complaint. I will answer any inquiries regarding it when stamp is inclosed. I refer to any county official as to my reliability. Wm. Roach, J. P., Primroy, Campbell Co., Tenn. BAD BOUND BROOK.

Said to be the Stamping Ground for Green Goods Men.

The Bound Brook Chronicle published the following last week:

"Scarcely a day passes but what Bound Brook is visited by green goods men and their victims. Last Saturday a gang of five sharpers stepped off at the station and lingered around until their victim came when the whole party went down the railroad. What became of the poor victim can only be surmised. On Wednesday the green goods men made an attempt to defraud another man in this vicinity. Where he came from nobody knows, but shortly after two o'clock in the afternoon he ran into the Central depot, nearly out of breath, and requested a ticket for Philadelphia of Ticket Agent Baxter. That official noticed the worn-out condition of the man and asked the reason therefor. The stranger replied that he had been to a resort over towards the mountain and several men had there endeavored by unfair means to get possession of his money, a large roll of which he showed to Mr. Baxter. He further stated that he had only escaped by running across fields until he reached the railroad tracks. He was uneasy until the Philadelphia train started out, when he seemed to regain his composure."

A LARGER GALLERY.

Pearson and Gayle Doing An Excellent Job For a Church.

The month of August is always selected by the churches as the month in which to make repairs. The Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church is now closed for two weeks to allow extensive alterations to be made. The galleries on the side will be widened six inches and at the back by eight feet, thus giving a much larger seating capacity to the gallery. The carpenter work is being done by Pearson and Gayle, who now have twelve men at work. The changes promise to greatly improve the looks as well as the seating capacity as the work is being done in a most workmanlike manner.

MARRIED A NEW YORKER.

Rev. P. S. Gibson Tied a Pretty Nuptial Knot Last Night.

The marriage of Mrs. Mary Green, of this city, to Robert Ford, of New York, took place last night at 8:30 at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Jones on West Second street. Rev. P. S. Gibson, pastor of the Mount Olive Baptist church, officiated.

The bridesmaid was Miss Mary Jones and the best man Wm. Burden. The bride wore a gown of lavender silk and the bridesmaid was gowned in white.

Only the immediate friends and relatives were present. Many valuable presents were received by Mr. and Mrs. Ford. They left on the 11:28 train for their future home in New York.

A Long Day at the Sea.

These hot cultry days make the Hope chapel people long for Saturday, the day of their annual excursion to Asbury Park, and not only the 600 Hope chapelites, but all their friends, and that means most of Plainfield. They are all thinking of the cool breezes all day Saturday, and particularly Saturday evening. It will be long after sunset when the excursion returns. It is hard to leave the seashore at five or six o'clock, so Hope chapel will stay until five minutes to eight. What a chance for a long day at the sea.

Down to the Shore.

Today is a great day for excursions at Asbury Park. Two sections left Westfield this morning carrying down a crowd of Sunday-school scholars. A train passed through here shortly after eight o'clock, bearing a load of excursionists from Raritan. In the cars there was the novel sight of quite a number of young people calmly eating ice cream out of paper boxes. At about 8:30 o'clock seventeen carloads of Flemington young people passed through here bound for Asbury Park also.

Lots of Fun.

B. T. Barnes and son, Malcomb Barnes, rode their wheels to Hank's pond, where the Plainfield boys are camping. Mr. Barnes says they are having lots of fun, but he doesn't believe they will ever get home with the horse that attempted to take them there.

POPULAR BAND CONCERTS.

COUNCILMAN FROST MAKES A MOVE THAT WILL GIVE FREE MUSIC.

Guttman's Band to Have Recitals at the Corner of Franklin Place and Watchung Avenue on Saturday Evenings.

The people of Plainfield are to have the opportunity of hearing a series of band concerts, through the efforts of Councilman Frost. There are scores of people in the city who would enjoy an excellent concert, but there has not been in some time a sufficient amount of public spirit manifested to arrange for a series. Commencing this coming Saturday evening, and for three following Saturday evenings, at eight o'clock, N. H. Guttman and his excellent cornet band will give concerts at the corner of La-Grande avenue and Franklin place.

The concerts will be commenced at half-past seven and continued for two hours, thus finishing early enough in the evening to permit children to remain until the finish.

No better location could have been selected for accommodating the crowd, as there are a number of streets converging in that direction, which should afford plenty of room for all without tramping on the lawns of nearby residents.

Mr. Frost certainly has the hearty thanks of a music-loving public who will appreciate more than words can describe this effort on his part. The programme for this Saturday evening is as follows:

March	Honeymoon
Selections from	Robin Hood
Blue and Gray	Patrol
Leona from	Opera Sea King
Descriptive piece	Mill in the Forest
Two-Step	New York Sun
Overture	Poet and Peasant

Took A Bath.

A man from North Plainfield had an exciting and rather amusing experience Tuesday. He was leading his cow along Green brook near French's dam when for some reason the animal prrferred the other side. Her owner said no, but that was of no use for the cow walked across dragging her unwilling owner right through the way and out on the other side.

Two Experts.

Heikes, one of the first trap shooters of the country and holder of a number of championships, attended the August shoot of the New Jersey State Trap Shooters League on the Climax Gun Club's grounds yesterday and spent the evening with T. Electric Bitters.

Electric Bitters is a medicine suited for any season, but perhaps more generally needed in the spring, when the languid exhausted feeling prevails, when the liver is torpid and sluggish and the need of a tonic and alterative is felt. A prompt use of this medicine has often averted long and perhaps fatal bilious fevers. No medicine will act more surely in counteracting and freeing the system from the malarial poison. Headache, indigestion, constipation, dizziness yield to Electric Bitters. Only 50c per bottle at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

FATAL LOCK-JAW.

William J. Peterson Dies From the Effects of a Rusty Nail.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Peterson, of Watchung avenue, have the sympathy of the entire community in the death of their eldest son, Wm. J. Peterson, which occured at Muhlenberg Hospital yesterday afternoon at 3:30.

About a week ago he was taken to the hospital suffering from lock-jaw, which was caused by running a rusty nail in his foot. At first little attention was paid to the wound, thinking it would not amount to much. But it continued to get worse until it was thought best to remove him to the hospital. His condition did not improve, and in fact it became serious.

Yesterday afternoon his parents were sent for, as he was dying. They went to the hospital and saw him before he passed away.

He was brought to his home on Watchung avenue where the funeral services will be held Saturday afternoon at two o'clock.

PROTEST TO SEWER CONTRACTORS

A Grievance Against Them For Removing Mr. Pearson's Driveway.

W. W. Pearson, of Orchard place, is complaining against the action of Honan & Sons, the sewer contractors, in destroying the bridge or driveway over the gutter in front of his house. Mr. Pearson is a paralytic, having lost the entire use of his lower limbs and it is necessary for him to ride a tricycle to carry him about. The bridge was a convenience to him in allowing him to go from the sidewalk to the street. He had permission from the authorities to build it but when the street was cleaned up after the digging of the sewer the driveway went also.

Mr. Pearson appealed to Street Commissioner Meeker and A. J. Gavett, the engineer in charge, but they were unable to have it replaced.

The friends of Mr. Pearson believe that the contractors ought to restore the bridge which is the means in a small way of lightening Mr. Pearson's burden.

PICNICING BY THE RARITAN.

A Family Party Start in a Stage for Boynton Beach.

These warm days send many hurrying to the mountains or the seashore. Blatz, Mrs. Charles Ulrich, Mrs. Elizabeth Ulrich, Mrs. Frank Willis, of New York, Mrs. Maggie Smith, of New York, Miss Etta Blatz, Miss Mildred Ulrich, Miss Frankie Smith, of New York, Miss Maggie Smith, of New York, Hilaire Blatz, and Carl Ulrich.

A Big Shark Off Elizabethport.

A shark about eight feet long was seen yesterday on the sand-bar at Elizabethport, opposite the Singer Sewing Machine Works. FORLORN AND A CRIPPLE.

POOR COLORED GIRL TURNED OUT WITHOUT SUPPORT.

Had Been Working For a Deckertown Man, Who She Says Sent Her to This City Without Apparent Reason.

A peculiar problem is just now bothering Rev. P. S. Gibson, pastor of the Mt. Olive Baptist church. A young colored woman about twenty-three years old, and giving the name of Miss Micah Hawkins, arrived in town yesterday, and was sent to the Liberty street minister. She is badly crippled with rheumatism, making it very difficult for her to walk.

Her story is that for sometime past she has been working for a man named Loomis at Deckertown, Sussex county, and when she became helpless through rheumatism he said did not need her services any longer.

He then gave her car fare and sent her to Plainfield, where she has no friends. She does not even know a person in the city.

Why Mr. Loomis sent her is a mystery which she cannot explain, but she is here, and just what to do with her is puzzling.

Miss Hawkins claims Lynchburg, Va., as her home, and says that if she could reach there she has friends who would take care of her. But it is not so easy to raise her car fare.

Her condition is such that she cannot get around very well to help earn the money.

Mr. Gibson thinks that he could possibly get her in the hospital for a week, but does not know what to do afterwards. He also thinks that she should be sent back to Deckertown to Mr. Loomis, and that he should be compelled to help her.

Mr. Gibson will consult with some friends and see what can be done.

A Picnic at Washington Rock.

As usual, the annual picnic of the Sunday-schools at Washington Rock yesterday was largely attended and thoroughly successful.

For miles around people flocked to the gathering and spent the day in enjoyment at that memorable spot.

Large tables were erected and one looking at meal time would think it was a large family gathering.

The event passed off without an accident much to the gratification of all present.

A Courier-News Error.

The story in last night's Courier-News that George Summers, who shot Sherman Haberle, was arrested and placed under $200 bonds, was entirely false. There was no attempt made to arrest Summers, as John Haberle, the injured boy's father, refused to press the charge. Justice Crosley stated that unless there was a complaint he could do nothing, and in consequence that was the result.

Felt Like Doing Something.

While Constable George Rockafellow was crossing Park avenue a few days ago a young man on a wheel ran into him. The latter was thrown off his wheel, sliding about ten feet from where he fell, while the constable received a severe shock. There were no exchange of hard words, but the latter felt like doing something.

When moving into our present home I found a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm left by a former tenant. On the label I found the statement that it was good for cuts and burns. I can testify to the truth of this. Nothing in all my experience has found its equal for treating blisters or burns. F. E. Barrett, manager Le Sueur Sentinel, Le Sueur, Minn. Pain Balm is also a sure cure for rheumatism. For sale at Reynolds Pharmacy, Park and North avenues; T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

UNDER $10,000 BAIL

Miss Flagler Surrenders to the Warden.

Will Await the Action of the Grand Jury on the Death of the Young Negro Boy—The Minimum Punishment for the Crime of Manslaughter Is Two Years.

Washington, Aug. 8.—Miss Elizabeth M. Flagler, the daughter of Gen. Flagler, chief of ordnance of the United States army, who accidentally killed Ernest Green, a colored boy of this city, last week, technically surrendered herself to the warden of the district jail yesterday afternoon to await the action of the grand jury. At the same time she appeared before Judge Cole of the criminal court and was admitted to bail in the sum of $10,000. She was accompanied in court by her father and mother, her attorney, Ross Perry, John Cassel and Gen. Robert Macfeely. Miss Flagler appeared bright and happy and talked cheerfully with her friends. She was dressed in black and wore a heavy veil. When the court had been formally opened Assistant District Attorney Taggart stated that in view of the character of the finding of the coroner's jury it would be necessay to submit the case to the grand jury.

Finding for Manslaugter.

Miss Flagler's attorney, Mr. Perry, remarked that while the verdict of the coroner's jury was intended to be a complete exoneration of the crime it was technically a finding for manslaughter. He added that his client was in court and ready to furnish bail in any sum that might be demanded. Judge Cole stated that he had read the evidence taken at the inquest; that in his opinion the case was a bailable one, and that $10,000 would be sufficient. This was satisfactory to the assistant district attorney, whereupon Messrs. Cassel and Macfeely qualified as sureties.

Gen. Flagler Calls on Green.

Gen. and Mrs. Flagler called upon Mr. Green, the father of the deceased lad, but Green preferred to say nothing about the case, and the call was limited to expressions of regret on the part of Gen. and Mrs. Flagler at the unfortunate occurrence. There have been so many conflicting reports as to the intentions of Mr. Green that the latter has written a letter to a local paper in which he says that he has not determined what course he shall pursue.

Two Years the Minimum Sentence.

One feature of the case that is attracting considerable attention is the fact that the law in force in the District of Columbia gives the minimum sentence for manslaughter a term of imprisonment of two years in the penitentiary. Gen. Flagler is much affected by the trouble that has come into his family during the past week, and has sought to avoid interviews on the subject.

FUNERAL OF MRS. TALMAGE.

A Touching Incident During the Religious Services.

New York, Aug. 8.—The funeral of Mrs. Susan Whittemore Talmage, wife of the Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage, took place yesterday afternoon at the Lafayette avenue Presbyterian church in Brooklyn, which was crowded by relatives, friends and parishoners of Dr. Talmage. The services were the most impressive. An incident that was touching in the extreme was the baptism of the infant daughter of the Rev. Frank Talmage, pastor of the Second Presbyterian church of Pittsburg, beside her grandmother's coffin in the presence of the bereaved family. Mrs. Talmage's remains were taken to Greenwood for burial in the family plot. The grave was lined with sprays of green and flowers. Dr. Talmage and his family left, however, before the remains were committed to their last resting place.

IRISH ARE TO BLAME.

McCarthy Says They Are Responsible for the Unionist Victory.

London, Aug. 8.—Justin McCarthy, M. P., leader of the Irish nationalist party, has issued a manifesto appealing to the Irish members of parliament to end the dissensions in the ranks of their party, which, he says, have brought disaster to the national cause. They are themselves responsible for the return of the unionists to power. Mr. McCarthy asserts that it is almost impossible to over estimate the disastrous effect of T. M. Healy's charge made at the national convention at Omagh, county Tyrone, on July 8, when Mr. Healy accused John Dillon of selling Tyrone to the English party. Mr. McCarthy, in his manifesto, states that Mr. Healy's charges are unfounded, grossly, ludicrously untrue, and that Mr. Healy's action was disloyal to his party.

MRS. GARDNER GIVES IN.

She Starts for the West and Will Meet Her Husband To-night.

Norwich, Conn., Aug. 8.—Mrs. Anna M. Gardner, the missing Christian Endeavor delegate who was located in Norwich yesterday, left for Chicago last evening in company with J. W. Landers of Arcadia, Neb., who has been prosecuting the search for her for a month. Mrs. Gardner said Tuesday that she would not return home, but yesterday City Missionary Swan visited her and having gained her confidence, led her to express her desire to see her baby, and finally got her to consent to go to the home of her mother, Mrs. Barr of Sitka, Mich. Mrs. Gardner will meet her husband at the Palmer house, Chicago, at 9 o'clock to-night. Her condition is greatly changed from that of Tuesday. The arrival of Landers and the discovery of her past history which she thought she had buried have completely unnerved her. Mr. Landers said before leaving Norwich that Mrs. Gardner would undoubtedly be placed in a sanitarium as she was suffering from a mild form of insanity as the result of the drudgery of a farm life, her husband being a poor farmer. She is naturally bright and was well educated and fitted for a teacher. She is but 28 years old and has been married nine years.

WATERBURY FLOODED.

Considerable Damage Caused by the Two Rain Storms Yesterday.

Waterbury, Conn., Aug. 8.—The rain storms of yesterday proved the most disastrous of any in several years. Although the two-inch fall of the forenoon washed roads in all directions the return storm at 4 o'clock in the afternoon added to the injury to the town and city streets until it will take $10,000 and several weeks labor to repair damages. Three inches of rain fell yesterday afternoon. Streets were flooded to the depth of several inches and great gullies cut. The Naugatuck and Mad rivers overflowed their banks and Great and Little brooks burst their bounds, filling cellars in the center of the city near their banks. Cellars in all parts of the city were filled and merchants have many good damaged.

WAR ON NEGROES ENDS

Peace Declared by Whites at Spring Valley.

At a Mass Meeting the Foreigners Condescendingly Agree To Recognize the American Constitution—Colored Miners To Be Permitted To Return to Work.

Princeton, Ill., Aug. 8.—The war on negroes by the Italians of Spring Valley has been declared off. The Spring Valley Coal company will be permitted to resume operations and the negroes to return to their homes. This action was taken at a mass meeting of all the white miners, which assembled in the public square. About 500 miners were present, part of whom were English speaking. Interpreters were present for the Italians and French.

Condescending Foreigners.

A resolution was offered to the effect that the miners of Spring Valley would recognize the fourteenth amendment to the constitution of the United States which guarantees to every person equal liberties without regard to race, color or previous condition of servitude, and that the miners of Spring Valley would pledge their earnest support to all officers in the enforcement of the law. After being interpreted the resolution was put to a vote and declared carried by an overwhelming majority. About fifty Italians voted in the negative.

Agrees To Resume.

A committee was appointed to wait upon manager S. M. Dalzell of the coal company to inform him of the action of the meeting and to report that the miners were ready and anxious to return to work in the mines. Mr. Dalzell was closeted with the committee almost one hour. While the resolution adopted was not just what he had wanted he agreed to recognize it and to resume operations, the notification committee to report the condition of affairs to the colored miners, most of whom are at Seatonville.

Reports Not Exaggerated.

At noon Assistant-Adjutant-General Bayle of Springfield, the representative of Governor Altgeld, arrived in Spring Valley to canvass the situation. On the same train came C. W. Bush of Chicago, the representative of the organization of colored people in Chicago. Mr. Bush has a fair complexion and was thus enabled to talk with persons on both sides without prejudice. He said he had found the information as to the wounded and clubbed and the incidents as reported to be substantially correct. He thought the publication of the mob's doings had in a large measure been the means of bringing the mob's reign to a speedy termination. He says he has the names of six colored persons at Seatonville whom he found to be badly injured and the names of two who were slightly injured. Other injured persons were taken elsewhere. He also found a colored woman in a delicate condition who had been severely trampled upon.

REV. JAMES HUGHES DEAD.

He Was Vicar-General of the Catholic Diocese of Hartford.

Hartford, Conn., Aug. 8.—Very Rev. James Hughes, vicar-general of the Roman Catholic diocese of Hartford, died last evening of hemorrhages begun about 8 o'clock Tuesday night and continued intermittently until late last evening. They were caused by ulceration of the stomach. Father Hughes was born in county Longford, Ireland, in October, 1830, and came to this country when he was 15 years old. After being graduated from St. John's college, Fordham, he finished his education at the seminary of St. Sulpice in Paris, and was ordained July 4, 1852. Since November, 1854, he has been pastor of St. Patrick's church in this city, and has been a prominent figure in many of Hartford's affairs. Of large and commanding figure, keen blue eyes and a manner marked by suavity and diplomacy, he early took a commanding position in the affairs of his church in this city. He was appointed vicar-general by his uncle, Bishop O'Reilly.

DAYS OF ANGUISH

Dread, Doubt and Despair Invade Homes.

Unguarded Babies Succumb to Intestinal Disease.

Question of Infant Food Confronts Mothers.

UNDER-FED BABIES FALL EASY VICTIMS OF CHOLERA.

No Touch of Summer Disorder With Lactated Food.

If a mother's blind love could save the little ones what a happy world this would be.

There would be no more cholera infantum nor wasting summer disease that every year carry off so large a proportion of the babies under five years. The love of parents is strong, but unless intelligently directed can do little to ward off these diseases that threaten the tender years of babyhood.

Only when children are kept fully nourished and unexposed to contamination in their food, do they run no risk from hot August days and nights. Diarrhoeal diseases, the great scourge of infants, are wholly due to improper food, encouraged by high temperature. But for this ignorance and carelessness in baby's summer diet the hot months might be as healthful as any.

One has only to contrast the healthy full-fed happy condition of babies fed on lactated food with that of the many badly nourished drooping ones whose mothers persist in keeping them on the old diet upon which they are plainly not thriving.

Babies that are not gaining in weight, as their mothers wish, and who show too little animation and interest in things about them, soon gain a liveliness and zest for living when fed with this splendid nutriment. They gradually cry less and less; their sleep becomes sound by night, and by day they are bright and noisy and happy.

Such is the great difference between babies that are nourished by lactated food and those that are poorly, because improperly fed.

In its composition lactated food is well nigh identical with baby's earliest and best food—healthy breast milk. As a food, therefore, for mothers who nurse their little ones with difficulty, especially through the summer months, lactated food is ordered by physicians with the most gratifying results.

For invalids who require an easily digested absolutely pure, rich ailment, there is nothing equal to lactated food.

AGAINST FREE SILVER

Iowa Democrats Oppose the 16 to 1 Plan.

The Sense of the Delegates Twice Taken on the Question—A Sound Money Man Nominated for Governor, But the Lieutenant-Governor Is a Free Silver Advocate.

Marshalltown, Ia., Aug. 8.—The sense of the delegates in the democratic state convention held here yesterday was twice taken on the silver question and the party in this state is squarly on record as opposed to free coinage at the ratio of 16 to 1. The first test was indirect, the free coinage men and the opposition having candidates for permanent chairman. J. H. Shields of Dubuque, a champion of sound money, was chosen by a vote of 651 to 417. Later, when a direct proposition was made to substitute a free silver plank for the reaffirmation of the national financial plank of 1892, contained in the platform as it came from the committee on resolutions, the silver men again met defeat by a vote of 651 to 420. Judge W. G. Babb of Mount Pleasant, a sound money man, was nominated for governor by acclamation on motion of ex-congressman Walter I. Hayes of Clinton. In the same manner the nomination for lieutenant-governor went to S. L. Bestow of Charitown, who has been lieutenant-governor and is an advocate of free silver.

NEW YORK JAIL BREAKERS.

No Foundation for the Report That They Are on the Sorel Islands.

Montreal, Aug. 8.—The story circulated last evening to the effect that the three Ludlow street jail breakers, Killoran, Allen and Russell, were secreted by smugglers on the Sorel islands is pronounced untrue at police headquarters. The story appears to have grown out of the fact that the secretary of the detective department sent circulars containing description of the men to all country police authorities. Three Rivers among the rest, and a local reporter misconstrued the case. The secret service, who have had detectives in the Sorel islands for some time watching smugglers say that the postoffice thieves are not in this vicinity.

MRS. P. T. BARNUM WED.

Her New Husband, Callias Bey, Is Said To Be a Greek.

New York, Aug. 8.—Mrs. Phineas T. Barnum, widow of the American showman, was married in this city yesterday afternoon to D. Callias Bey, a gentleman who is said to be a Greek, though bearing a Turkish title. The ceremony was private and there was manifest on the part of those immediately concerned a disposition to keep the affair a profound secret. Mrs. Barnum has been staying at the Plaza hotel for about a week, and the bridegroom had been a guest at the Netherlands for a short period. Mrs. Callias declined to talk about the marriage. Callias Bey and his bride will sail for Europe soon, although the date of their departure has not positively been settled.

OFFICIALS AMONG THEM.

Names of Many of the Chinese Rioters and Murderers Secured.

London, Aug. 8.—The Standard to-day prints a dispatch from Shanghai stating that J. C. Hixson, United States consul at Foo Chow has, in the course of his inquiry into the recent outrages, obtained a list of names of more than fifty natives who are known to have been actively engaged in the outrage at Whasang. This list includes the names of the leaders and some of the actual murderers. Consul Hixson has also collected from the villagers abundant evidence to prove conclusively that the district officials were fully cognizant of the fact that mischief was brewing many days previous to the actual commission of the crimes.

JOINING THE INSURGENTS.

A Mayor and 2,700 Men Cast Their Lot with the Cubans.

Key West, Fla., Aug. 8.—Passengers by the steamer Mascotte report that Marios Garcia, mayor of the town of Sanoti Spiritus and a prominent leader in the last revolution, has joined the insurgents with 2,700 men. This fact is generally known in Havana and the press has been prohibited from publishing anything in relation to it. Roloff has blown up a bridge near the town of Sanoti Spiritus and besieged the town. Matagas, the famous bandit, has joined the insurgents with 250 men.

Death of John Hodge.

Lockport, N. Y., Aug. 8.—John Hodge, ex-grand master of the Masons of the state of New York, died suddenly at his home in this city yesterday afternoon. He had been ailing for some weeks. Heart disease is the probable cause of his death. Mr. Hodge was the secretary and principal stockholder in the Merchants' Gargling Oil company, and was worth probably half a million dollars.

France Wants Two Columbias.

RESCUED AT SEA.

Terrible Suffering of Two Fishermen Lost in a Dory.

Boston, Aug. 8.—The Warren line steamer Cambroman just arrived from Liverpool brought in two fishermen picked up on the Grand banks. Captain Jones said: "At 6:47 o'clock on the evening of Aug. 3 fifty-one miles east by north from Cape Race, New Foundland, just as the steamer emerged from a bank of fog, the look-out discerned a dory containing two men only a short distance ahead of the steamer. Thinking they must have lost their vessel, I ordered the steamer's engines reversed. The two men, although apparently very weak, managed to pull alongside the steamer and were taken aboard. The dory was abandoned and allowed to drift away. On reaching the ship's deck the men called for water, and after slacking their thirst they stated that their names were Charles Frederick Blinn, an Americon, and Peter Anderson, a Dane, and that they belonged to the Gloucester fishing schooner Wm. E. McDonald. They had left their vessel, which was lying at anchor on the banks, at 11 o'clock on the morning of Aug. 1 to haul trawls. The McDonald was at that time about 140 miles southeast from Cape Race. They had been engaged in hauling trawls but a short time when a thick fog shut in and obscured the vessel from view and they became lost.

Suffered Terribly.

The men suffered terribly from hunger and thirst. On the night before they were picked up by the Cambroman it rained heavily and the men secured some of the rain water in their sou'westers which gave them some relief. On the night of Aug. 2 the men heard the whistles of two European steamers which passed close enough for them to hear the swish of the propellers, but the fog prevented their being seen and their shouts for help were apparently not heard by those aboard the steamers. They were nearly exhausted from lack of food and water and had about given up hope of ever reaching land or being picked up when the Cambroman hove in sight and took them on board. The men were fifty-five hours in the boat before being picked up. On the steamer's arrival at the Hoosac dock the men immediately left for their homes in Gloucester.

Young Ladies Spend a Night Near Pikes Peak in a Fierce Storm.

Colorado Springs, Col., Aug. 8.—Four young ladies had an unpleasant adventure in the mountains surrounding Pikes Peak Tuesday night. They were the Misses Parker of St. Louis, Miss Ida M. Wright of Fulton, N. Y., and Miss Anna Wagner of Prairie Grove, Ark. With a driver they started in a coach for the summit of Pikes Peak. Against the advice of the driver they started to finish their journey on foot when four miles away and return to the carriage. The driver waited until 7 p. m., and thinking they had reached the summit and taken the cog road to return started for Colorado Springs. The ladies turned back before reaching the top only to find the carriage gone. They were compelled to face a furious storm of wind, rain, snow and hail and finally reached a section house where they spent the night.

JUBILEE PARADE.

Catholic Total Abstainers Turn Out in a Grand Spectacle.

New York, Aug. 8.—The Silver Jubilee parade of the Catholic Total Abstainers' union, which was held last night, was a grand spectacle and the line of march was thronged with crowds of spectators. The parade started from Sixtieth street and the Boulevard at 6:10 o'clock with fully 3,000 in line, headed by grand marshal James R. O'Beirne and his staff and aides, and arrived at Carnegie hall at 8:30. It was reviewed enroute by Mayor Strong. Last evening's meeting was held in Carnegie hall and the immense auditorium was filled by delegates from the many cities represented and persons interested. An overflow meeting of several thousand persons was held on the outside of the building and a number of priests and laymen delivered addresses.

THE DURRANT TRIAL.

Fourteen Jurors To Be Empanelled To Prevent a Possible Mistrial.

San Francisco, Aug. 8.—District Attorney Barnes announces that, for the purpose of avoiding delays that might arise from the sickness or death of jurors, fourteen jurors will be empanelled to try Durrant for the Emanuel church murders. The attorneys on both sides have agreed to this action, as the trial is expected to last several months. The two extra jurors will attend the sessions of the court regularly, the same as the other jurors, but will take no part in formulating a verdict unless called upon to act as alternates. The law authorizing the swearing in of extra jurors was passed two years ago by the California legislature.

GO SOUTH, YOUNG MAN

Hoke Smith's Advice to the Fortune Seeker.

The Secretary Enthusiastic in His Description of the Revival of Prosperity in the South—The Boom in Business Is Widespread and the Outlook Is Brilliant.

Baltimore, Aug. 8.—Hon. Hoke Smith, secretary of the interior, in an interview with the Manufacturers' Record in regard to the business outlook of the south, based on investigations during his recent trip, said: "I have never seen the south look so prosperous, especially Georgia. Hard times are rapidly becoming extinct, and I believe that the southern states are moving on to the most prosperous epoch in their history. Georgia farmers will make this year better corn crops and raise more meat than ever before. It is safe to say that the food supply of that state if properly distributed will be sufficient for two years' consumption. Cotton is sufficiently advanced to insure a good crop, and while Texas is behind in probable production, Georgia and the adjoining states will furnish an average yield."

Great Fruit Crop.

The secretary is enthusiastic over the signs of prosperity among the fruit growers of Georgia. "More peaches," he said, "have been raised and marketed than ever before in the history of the state. They are large and juicy, and in the eastern markets have almost entirely supplanted California peaches. The watermelon crop, too, was a tremendous one, and in most parts of the state a profitable one. Grape growing is also making rapid progress."

The Boom Is Widespread.

Secretary Smith says he believes that the industrial boom in the south, which was temporarily set back by the late panic, is on again. Cotton manufacturing was never more successful in the south than it is to-day and all through the cotton belt new mills are being erected and old mills are being enlarged. Much of this is being done by home capital, although a number of New England people are making large investments in cotton manufacturing companies in the south. In the iron district of Alabama a number of furnaces have recently gone into blast, and the workmen in that section are now fully employed and many of them at increased wages. All over the south the demand for labor is constantly increasing and at good prices. Conditions were never better for a return of prosperity unexampled in the the history of the entire south.

The Place for All.

"If our people continue in their present conservative way," said Secretary Smith, "much of the flow of eastern capital which has hitherto traveled elsewhere will come to us. The place for a young man, an old man, a rich man or a poor man willing to work and anxious to improve his fortune," concluded the secretary, "is in the south."

INDIAN BUREAU GRATEFUL.

Red Men Praised for Returning Peacefully to Their Reservation.

Washington, Aug. 8.—Commissioner Browning has sent a telegram to Agent Teter of the Fort Hall Indian reservation, Idaho, acknowledging the receipt of Mr. Teter's telegram in which he informed the Indian bureau of the return of the Indians to their reservation and of their good conduct while away from it. The commissioner said: "It is exceedingly gratifying to me and to all friends of the Indians everywhere that they have returned peaceably to their reservation and gone to work, without having committed any act of violence against the persons or property of the whites. This will certainly be to their lasting credit. Tell them so and that the office will do all in its power to have a faithful investigation of the killing of the Indians made and to see that justice is done."

WANTS AN OFFICIAL INTERVIEW

Baron Hickey's Chancellor Bothering the State Department.

Washington, Aug. 8.—The Count de la Boissbere, grand chancellor of the unrecognized government of Baron Harden-Hickey's island of Trinidad, sent a note yesterday to Mr. Adee, the acting secretary of state, asking the honor of an official interview. Mr. Adee was somewhat non-plussed by the request as the department knows nothing officially of the Trindad government. Up to the close of office hours, when Mr. Adee took a train for his country home, he had not sent an answer to the grand chancellor.

ADMIRAL AMMEN PROSTRATED.

A Serious Attack of Vertigo at the Navy Department.

Washington, Aug. 8.—Rear Admiral Ammen, retired, while on a visit to the navy department yesterday was prostrated by an attack of vertigo superinduced by the excessive heat. He was treated temporarily by Surgeon General Tryon in his office and then sent to his home at Anandale, Md., accompanied by Assistant Surgeon Guest. The attack is believed to be serious in view of the admiral's advanced age.

Quarantined Against Cattle.

Winsted, Conn., Aug. 8.—The cattle commissioners have notified cattle dealers in this county that hereafter they will be allowed to bring no cattle from New York state into Connecticut and New York is quarantined against Connecticut cattle on account of tuberculosis.

Will the freight house ever be moved?

After the post office thieves. Yes, after them. That's what has been the trouble.

There is nothing like being frank. The Westfield Leader says that "the Salvation army find Westfield a good battlefield."

With double leads this morning the New York World says that Garrett A. Hobart will not consider for himself the Republican nomination for Governor.

The Republican State convention will be held at Trenton on September 19th. There will be 842 delegates, forty-two of whom will hail from Union county, and seventeen from Somerset county.

Great conventions for the moral and religious welfare of the people have been numerously held during the past few weeks, and it is a gratifying sight to see the multitude of young members of the Catholic Total Abstinence Union in convention in New York. They are a working force for the principles for which they stand that is something powerful.

Read you! Read you! You men of the hirsute adornments. The Daily Press today officially publishes the ordinance "relating to the morals, peace and good order of the city of Plainfield." A barber receives ten cents for removing the growth of hair upon one's face, and now if he performs the labor on Sunday he may have to pay a fine of $25. Let the barber have a rest on Sunday. He deserves it.

Wherever free band concerts have been given they have proved a popular feature, and the announcement that Plainfielders may now have an opportunity of enjoying them, is something pleasant for The Daily Press to record. But with the congratulations a word of advice may not come amiss. The concerts will naturally attract a large crowd, and a crowd does not always act in a manner like an individual. The residents in the section of the city where the concerts are to be held take particular pride in having well-kept lawns, and it is hoped that the crowd will be just as careful in not treading on them as any well-mannered individual would be.

Whatever idea the young girls who practice "street-mashing" may entertain, it may be set down as a certainty that when a respectable young man desires the acquaintance of one who may some time be his wife, he does not go out on the street and seek her acquaintance through a flirtation. The flirt, no matter how innocent her intentions may be, is the last one he would select as a companion. He desires purity without and above suspicion. All young girls who engage in this sort of pastime should bear in mind that they not only endanger their reputation and leave a stain on their good names, but their names become by-words among those with whom they flirt, to be handed about in saloons, on the street corners, and in the low-down unholy places of the town, fastening on their otherwise fair, respectable and honored names a stigma or stain that will follow them years after they have seen their folly and attempt to mend their way.—Manasquan News.

SURPRISERS SURPRISED.

Mrs. Fernandez Was Ready and Have a Good Time.

Surprise parties are usually very nice affairs, and so was the one given to Mrs. Fernandez, of Dog Corners, last evening, but it turned out rather unexpectedly. About fifty friends of Mrs. Fernandez from Plainfield, Westfield, and this vicinity, drove up to the house expecting, of course, to surprise her greatly, but what was their astonishment to find the house and lawn all gaily decorated with Chinese lanterns, and the one they came to surprise waiting to greet them. Inside another very pleasant surprise awaited them, for there was Professor Frazee all ready to furnish the music for dancing which was soon enjoyed by all. A fine supper was served later in the evening, and the guests all agreed that the joke was on them this time, and it was they, and not Mrs. Fernandez, who were surprised. All declared it a most delightful surprise party.

Collapse of a Building.

New York, August 8.—The centre of a building in course of construction on the northeast corner of West Broadway and Third street fell at 10:50 a. m. today from the roof to the ground floor, carrying with it and burying more than a dozen of the eighty-two men employed there.

DOANE & EDSALL.

EARLY INTELLIGENCE.

CYCLING COMMENT.

Louis G. Timpson is now riding a '95 Columbia, purchased of the Eldridge Cycle Company.

Police Sergeant Patrick Kiely and John P. Powers, of Reynold's pharmacy, rode down to Asbury Park on their wheels today.

Harry Milligan, of West Fourth street, rode over to New Brunswick on his wheel to-day where he will stay a short time with friends in that city.

Walter Williams, of East Front street, leaves for an all-day cycling trip tomorrow. He will first ride to New York, then to Staten Island, and after riding about there will retu n via Perth Amboy.

The two bicycle races which were to have been held yesterday, the twenty-mile road race between Simms and Grobes, and the ten-mile trade race between Keefe and Betts, were both postponed indefinitely.

David Shafer, the manager of Sanger, denies most positively the story sent broadcast a few days ago that he was arranging a racing syndicate and that he proposed to make it lively for race-meet promoters, as he would have several of the fastest riders in the country under his management. Shafer says that he knows entirely too much about cycling to do anything of the sort. The differences between Shafer and Eck are not likely to set the cycling world on fire.

Fraternal Visitation.

Iona Council, Degree of Pocohortas, had a big time last night. They invited Menemooshe Council, of Elizabeth, and several visitors from Jersey City and Long Branch were present. The evening was passed in dancing, singing, speaking, and upon the request of the visitors the home team worked the adoption degree. An elaborate spread followed.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer one hundred dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

A Chance to See the South.

The dedication of the Chickamauga-Chattanooga National Park takes place September 19th and 20th. A rate of one cent a mile for the round trip has been made by the southern lines. As yet the trunk lines have not made their rates. The round trip rate from Washington to Chattanooga will be $12.70, from Norfolk, $13. The Old Dominion Steamship Company have made a rate in connection with the Norfolk and Western Railroad, going down by Old Dominion steamer to Old Point Comfort, Norfolk and Roanoke to Chattanooga and returning all rail via Roanoke, Natural Bridge, Luray Caverns, Washington, Baltimore and Philadelphia for $25, round trip. This is the lowest rate ever made to any southern point, and offers people in the east a chance to see a great deal of the country, including Old Point Comfort, and those wonders of nature, natural bridge and Luray caverns, for a very small sum of money.

A Reply to Critics.

Dr. Max Nordau writes a "Reply to My Critics" in the August number of The Century. His book on "Degeneration" has called out a large amount of simply abusive criticism, and while he pays his respect to such writers, he gives serious answers to several obtions which have been urged against his theories. Dr. Nordau thinks that the present epidemic of hysteria and degeneration is due to the over-exertion of the last sixty years; and that, while it is not the first phenomenon of its kind, it is more dangerous than the previous ones because it has gained a far greater headway.

FOOTPADS ABOUT RAHWAY.

A Peddler Attacked and Badly Injured at Colonia.

James McManus, as the result of his encounter with tramps, has been lying in a precarious condition all day yesterday in a barn at Colonia, a small station a mile south of Rahway. At five o'clock last evening an ambulance arrived from New Brunswick and McManus was taken to the hospital there. He is a peddler of hosiery and trinkets, and is well known in Union and Middlesex counties. His wife usually travels with him. He is a war veteran.

Just about dust McManus was passing along the edge of the woods when he saw a man among the trees ahead. McManus had had trouble with tramps before, and he turned and started to run. As he did so another man sprang out behind him and, drawing a pistol, fired three shots, none of them taking effect. The peddler was knocked down by a blow from behind and set upon by five tramps, who beat and kicked him into insensibility. They then took his pack and $7. They were seen and pursued, but made their escape in the woods.

McManus was carried into the barn, and it was not until today that medical attendance arrived. The beaten man recognized one of his assailants, the one who fired the shots, as an itinerant peddler who bears the nickname of "Whitey." He says he could identify the others if he saw them. McManus recently befriended "Whitey," and fed him when he was recovering from a prolonged debauch. "Whitey" was also recognized by a third person, whose name is withheld.

THE ANTHRAX EPIDEMIC.

Great Mortality Among Cattle—Vaccination with Pasteur's Lymph.

State Dairy Commissioner George McGuire received yesterday morning a report from Special Milk Inspector P. L. Vandergrift, who has been inspecting milk in the district in south New Jersey where the disease known as anthrax, that is killing the farmers' cows, horses, mules and hogs, is doing the greatest damage. The inspector's report is dated several days ago. In it he said that seventy-two head of cattle, horses and mules have succumbed to the scourge in Cumberland county alone, and that many animals were still sick at the time of making his report.

His time has been so taken up in this one county, he reports, that he has had no opportunity to visit adjoining counties where the disease is prevalent.

He believes many more animals have died of the disease in Cumberland county than he has reported. The inspector's instructions were to prevent the sale of milk from infected districts. Many gallons of milk are shipped from Cumberland county to Philadelphia each week.

Dr. Vandergrift says that in the opinion of Dr. R. W. Hewitt, of Bridgeton, who has investigated the epidemic, nothing but vaccination with Pasteur's lymph will prevent the spread of the disease.

Funny Blow Out.

The wretched condition of the crosswalk at the corner of Park avenue and Front street causes many lights on wheels to go out. A person who has watched it frequently, says it is remarkable how the lights are extinguished. Wheelmen run chances of being captured by the policemen, for oftentimes they do not notice that they have no light.

CURIOSITIES OF DISMAL SWAMP.

Queer Things Found by a Government Scientist in that Strange Region.

"I have just returned from a visit to the Dismal Swamp," said Dr. A. K. Fisher, ornithologist of the Department of Agriculture, to a Washington Star writer. "It is a strange region, full of oddities that are not to be found elsewhere. The purpose of my expedition was to investigate the fauna of the locality, and of rare mammals and birds I secured quite a number.

"There are plenty of cattle in the swamp—small, dark and very wild. They are the progeny of animals that have strayed from domesticated herds. Hunters stalk and shoot them like deer. Bears are numerous. In the autumn they feed greedily on the fruit of the sour gum.

Wildcats, opposums, and raccoons are not scarce, while squirrels are remarkably abundant. The squirrrels have discovered an easy way to get a living, by going along the shores of Lake Drummond and picking up the nuts and berries which have fallen into the water and drifted in windrows. They trot along the logs and fish them out with their paws. Deer are common but hard to get. In the fall hunters run them into the lake and then catch them with dogs.

"The boats used in the Dismal Swamp are all dug outs, made from cypress logs, twelve feet long and very narrow. To shape such a craft properly is a nice piece of work. The novice who steps into one of these boats is apt to go out on the other side, but the native stands up and paddles with security.

"The water is darker than amber and excellent to drink; it is said to be a sure cure for malaria. There is no malaria disease in the swamp. The swamp is full of magnolias, from the size of bushes to trees sixty feet high. When I was there they were full of flowers. The cypress trees are cut for shingles. The best trees for the purpose are those which fell from twenty-five to ninety years ago, and are now covered with moss. The negroes wade in and cut off the moss and rotten bark. Then they cut up the log into shingles on the spot. The next best tree is one that is newly fallen, and the third quality is the tree that has to be felled.

"The Dismal Swamp is the most northern of the great morass swamps. Lake Drummond, in the center of it, is four miles long and of an oval shape. There is a very odd fact about the Jericho Ditch, which extends for a distance of eleven miles from the Nansemond River to the lake. From the middle point of the ditch the water runs both ways; there is a current toward Lake Drummond and another current in the opposite direction toward the Nansemond River."

COLUMBIAN HALF DOLLARS.

Columbian centennial coins not heretofore circulated have been found frequently in change of late. They are fifty-cent pieces of 1893, and the reason given for their appearance is that many coin collectors and others believed that many coin collectors and others believed that immediately after the Columbian Exposition they would have special value as rarities, and so hoarded them for a premium. They were so held for the better part of two years, but no appreciation in value followed, and now they have been thrown upon the market and are freely circulated. They have a more attractive appearance than the regular fifty-cent pieces, but this superior attractiveness has not, to any visible extent, mitigated the regret which collectors have had in parting with them.

The silver coinage of the United States in use varies from time to time according to no definite law with which the Treasury officials are familiar. At times silver dollars circulate with much ease and freedom, and there does not seem to be any serious demand for a greater number of the smaller coins. Again, ten-cent pieces seem to be greatly in demand, and the dollars are stored away in banks and trust companies and in the Treasury vaults, and are grudgingly received by business men. But silver half dollars always circulate freely.

Mr. Smith's Tame Bears.

Mr. Henry L. Smith is fond of horses and dogs, but there is nothing on four legs that could win his affection more than the two tame bears now quartered on his property on Rensselaer Island. Few of Mr. Smith's friends have failed to see his pets. Yesterday the Tourist had a glimpse of them. Many will remember them over a year ago in Mr. Smith's store window. They were then only a month or so old. They were caught near Mr. Smith's preserve in the Adirondacks when only three days old, when the mother was shot.

They were brought up on a bottle and have prospered as well as if their mamma was still with them. They had never been chained or beaten, but have been conquered through their stomachs. They have not yet attained their half growth and give promise of becoming immense fellows.

Their quarters are large and with a tub apiece are made cool these hot days. They frolic all day and are in an ecstacy when one offers candy through the bars. They answer to the names of Jim and John. When Mr. Smith goes in with them they lick his hand as a dog would do and want to be petted. They are also very friendly with Mrs. Smith, and have never shown the least violence toward any one.—Albany Journal.

AN ELECTRIC GIANT.

THE GREAT LOCOMOTIVE BUILT FOR THE B. & O. COMPANY.

Tests that Prove It One of the Most Powerful Machines of the Kind in the World. Its Simplicity and Ease of Operation.

Baltimore has a tunnel which the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad has recently completed. For years the New York and Philadelphia trains of this railroad had to be ferried across the channel by boats, a process that was at once slow and expensive. In 1890 the railway undertook to drive a tunnel straight through the heart of the city, for the most part through Howard street, one of the principal thoroughfares. This tunnel is about one and a half mile long, and is one of the longest soft earth tunnels ever driven.

The tunnel completed, the company determined not only to light it with electricity, but to run its trains through by this power as well, and thus avoid all smoke and gases.

To this end the General Electric Company built the big locomotive shown in the picture. It is not merely the greatest electric motor ever constructed, but one of the most powerful locomotives, steam or electric, in existence. Its weight is 96 tons, and its extreme length over all 35 feet. It stands 14 feet high and its four electric motors yield 1,440 horsepower. It stands on two trucks and has eight driving wheels. The drawbar pull is equivalent to 28 tons and the starting pull is 60,000 pounds, or thirty tons.

Translated into terms that will convey some meaning to the general reader these figures mean that this locomotive can drag a train of 200 to 250 empty cars on a flat track with perfect ease. The engine is built to maintain a speed of about forty-five miles an hour for passenger trains and about fifteen miles an hour for freight trains.

The engine was built at the company's works at Schenectady, and was put up and tested there before it was taken to Baltimore. In order to remove it to the scene of its operation it was necessary to take it apart and ship it in sections. No road would give it haulage as it stood, because its 96 tons of weight are thrown directly upon its eight driving wheels, which are built close together, whereas the weight of an ordinary mogul is distributed over ten or twelve drivers and a number of smaller wheels, giving twice the base length.

One of the tests which afforded an idea of the machine's tremendous power was when it engaged in a tug of war with two steam locomotives. One day two of the heaviest yard locomotives were hitched up together and coupled to the electric engine.

The engineers in charge of the steam locomotives threw open their throttles and went flying away down the yard, dragging their opponent behind them. When they had attained full speed and under a full head of steam, the engineer in charge of the electrical engine began to throw on his current. Gradually the trio began to slow down. The wheels of the steam locomotives began to slip round in a dizzy fashion.

Plainly a stronger power was pulling them in the other direction. At last the three locomotives came to a dead stop and then began to move slowly in the opposite direction. All the steam that could be applied to the steam engines was put on, but to no avail. The engineer in charge of the current on the electric engine increased the power, and soon he was dragging the steam locomotives backward up the yard. His engine had proved itself more than equal to the two moved by steam.

Next to the ease and perfect adjustment of the engine is its simplicity. It is as little complcated as the gearing of a trolley car. A bright boy of ten can learn to manipulate its driving machinery in five or ten minutes, and run the engine as well as an old experienced engineer.

Of course this electrical engine carries no coal, develops no steam, is sootless and smokeless and goes without a roar or a puff. When you seek to discover whence comes the power which propels it, the engineer points up to a curious trolley arrangement overhead and just at the side of the cab. Between the two sets of tracks, and overhead, runs an iron rail of something the same size and appearance as an ordinary steel rail, and along this slips a movable trolley arrangement that looks like a pantagraph built on a large scale. By means of this pantagraph like adjustment the trolley keeps its hold upon the rail around curves and as the engine bends and sways, very much as your arm would do if you were standing on the cab and were trying to hold on to a wire or a rope running alongside of the track.

CHASED BY AN ANGRY ELEPHANT.

The Narrow Escape of Animal Trainer Conklin From Death.

The most critical experience of animal trainer Conklin came several years ago when he was traveling through Idaho. The show was in a little town called Haley, and the morning procession was just over, when the six-ton elphant Samson burst the chains by which he had been staked and made a rush for his keeper. At the time Conklin was inside the lion's cage, where he had been riding in the procession, for he is not only one of the most experienced elephant trainers in the world, but he is a tamer of lions and tigers as well. As he saw the elephant rush at the cage, he realized that he was going to have a close call for his life. By great good luck he managed to undo the bars and get out before the shock came, but Samson was after him with trunk waving and with shrieks of rage. Conklin dodged behind another cage of animals, which Samson butted over as if it was a child's cardhouse, the leopards inside squealing in terror. Again Conklin dodged for his life, while Samson butted over the cage that came next in his way. Thus in succession six cages were overturned by the infuriated monster. Then Conklin succeeded in getting on a horse. Throwing himself into the saddle, he dug his heels into the horse's flanks and made for the open prairie. Samson the meanwhile trumpeting behind and running at full speed. Now, a large elephant, when his rage is up, can run as fast as a fleet horse, and Conklin soon found this out to his cost.

Ride as he would, Samson kept gaining on him, the speed being so great that the red and gilt caparison with which Sampson had been clothed for the parade stood out in the wind at each side like a pair of curious wings.

"Make for the railroad," some one shouted to the flying showman.

Like a flash Conklin caught the idea, and swerving his horse to the left crossed the tracks that ran across the prairie in a long ridge. In a moment his horse was over the railroad and out on the open ground on the other side.

But the track caused Samson some delay in scrambling over, and thus Conklin and his horse made a little gain. But once across the elephant only ran the faster, and once more began to close up the space between them. By this time the news had spread through the community that a mad elephant was chasing Conklin to kill him, and a company of cowboys, armed with rifles, revolvers and lassoes, came galloping to the rescue. A fusillade of shots was fired into the elephant, but paying not the slightest attention to the attack he kept straight on in pursuit of Conklin.

Again and again the showman was obliged to cross the track to make a gain. But Samson's speed seemed only to increase, while the horse was steadily getting fagged out.

About three miles from the show grounds a cowboy gave Conklin a shotgun and a bag of buckshot, and turning on his horse the showman began to fire into Samson's trunk. Fifteen times he emptied the gun, the bullets striking home every time. Soon the elephant was bleeding profusely, but he kept on, unflinching in his hatred. At the sixteenth, however, he turned tail and fled. He was conquered at last, and complete victory was assured later that day when Conklin chained him down and had him whipped by assistants until he squealed and begged for mercy. In spite of his many wounds, Samson recovered entirely, and remained with the show three years, his death not coming until the fire which swept through the Barnum show when in its winter quarters at Bridgeport.

The Conductor's Calculations.

A newsboy, a passenger and a conductor came together on a Market street car yesterday. The conductor wanted a fare from a passenger, the passenger wanted a paper from the newsboy, and the newsboy wanted change from the conductor. The passenger handed the conductor and the newsboy each ten cents. The newsboy handed his dime to the conductor for change. The conductor rang up a fare, gave the boy four nickels and went out to the front of the car. The boy gave the passenger three nickels and a paper and jumped off the car.

The conductor returned, and recollecting that he had not given the passenger his change out of the dime, gave him a nickel. The passenger then had his twenty cents back and had paid for his ride and paper.

The conductor retired to the rear platform and commenced to figure. He counted it all up on his fingers, shook his head doubtfully and counted it up again, but he could not figure it out to his satisfaction.

He was morally certain that he had been flim-flammed, but he couldn't fix the responsibility either on the newsboy or the passenger. The number of fares he missed while trying to figure himself out even would have cost his job if a spotter had been aboard.—San Francisco Post.

The American Cornstalk Ahead.

American cellulose, of cornstalk pith, is beating cocoa cellulose, originally a French product, in every way. Some time ago it showed its superiority clearly when fired into, water soaking through the holes made in the cocoa cellulose much quicker than through those in the cornstalk pith.

More recently the two have been tried under similar condition to test their keeping properties. It was found that the cocoa cellulose, after a fortnight's soaking in fresh water, had corroded the iron box in which it was placed, eating off the paint, while in the case of the cornstalk no such action had occurred. Of course this an important matter, and the cornstalk pith seems to be ahead in that as in other particulars. There are few parts of a war vessel concerning which American ingenuity does not find, sooner or later, some method of improvement.

CHAPTER V.—THE EVIDENCE POINTS TO ONE.

Monday night.—The detective came as I expected. I was up as soon as it was light, and he came across the dewy fields with his cyclopaedia under his arm. He had stolen out of Phoebe Dole's back door.

He had me bring my father's pistol; then he bade me come with him out into the backyard. "Now, fire it," he said, thrusting the pistol into my hands. As I have said before, the charge was still in the barrel.

"I shall arouse the neighborhood," I said.

"Fire it," he ordered.

I tried; I pulled the trigger as hard as I could.

"I can't do it," I said.

"And you are a reasonably strong woman, too, aren't you?"

I said I had been considered so. Oh, much have I heard about the strength of my poor woman's arms, and their ability to strike that murderous weapon home!

Mr. Dix took the pistol himself, and drew a little at the trigger. "I could do it," he said, "but I won't. It would arouse the neighborhood."

"This is more evidence against me," I said despairingly. "The murderer had tried to fire the pistol and failed."

"It is more evidence against the murderer," said Mr. Dix.

We went into the house, where he examined my box of clues long and carefully. Looking at the ring, he asked whether there was a jeweler in this village, and I said there was not. I told him that my father oftener went on business to Acton, ten miles away, than elsewhere.

He examined very carefully the button which I had found in the closet, and then asked to see my father's wardrobe. That was soon done. Beside the suit in which father was laid away, there was one other complete one in the closet in his room. Beside that, there were in this closet two overcoats, an old black frock coat, a pair of pepper-and-salt trousers, and two black vests. Mr. Dix examined all the buttons; not one was missing.

There was still another old suit in the closet off the kitchen. This was examined, and no button found wanting.

"What did your father do for work the day before he died?" he asked then. I reflected and said that he had unpacked some stores which had come down from Vermont, and done some work out in the garden.

"What did he wear?"

"I think he wore the pepper-and-salt trousers and the black vest. He wore no coat while at work."

Mr. Dix went quickly back to father's room and his closet, I following. He took out the gray trousers and the black vest, and examined them closely.

"What did he wear to protect these?" he asked.

"Why, he wore overalls!" I said at once. As I spoke I remembered seeing father go around the path to the yard with those blue overalls drawn up high under his arms.

"Where are they?"

"Weren't they in the kitchen closet?"

"No."

We looked again, however, in the kitchen closet; we searched the shed thoroughly. The cat came in through her little door, as we stood there, and brushed around our feet. Mr. Dix stooped and stroked her. Then he went quickly to the door, beside which her little entrance was arranged, unhooked it, and stepped out. I was following him, but he motioned me back.

"None of my boarding mistress' windows command us," he said, "but she might come to her back door."

I watched him. He passed slowly along the little winding footpath which skirted the rear of our house and extended faintly through the grassy field to the rear of Phoebe Dole's. He stopped, searched a clump of sweetbriar, went on to an old well, and stopped there. The well has been dry many a year, and was choked up with stones and rubbish. Some boards are laid over it, and a big stone or two, to keep them in place.

Mr. Dix, glancing across at Phoebe Dole's back door, went down on his knees, rolled the stones away, then removed the boards, and peered down the well. He stretched far over the brink and reached down. He made many efforts; then he got up and came to me, and asked me to get for him an umbrella with a crooked handle or something that he could hook into clothing.

I brought my own umbrella, the silver handle of which formed an exact hook. He went back to the well, knelt again, thrust in the umbrella and drew up, easily enough, what he had been fishing for. Then he came bringing it to me.

"Don't faint," he said, and took hold of my arm. I gasped when I saw what he had—my father's blue overalls, all stained and splotched with blood!

I looked at them, then at him.

"Don't faint," he said again. "We're on the right track. This is where the button came from; see?" He pointed to one of the straps of the overalls, and the button was gone. Some white thread clung to it. Another black metal button was sewed on roughly with the same white thread that I had found on the button in my box of clues.

"What does it mean?" I gasped out. My brain reeled.

"You shall know soon," he said. He looked at his watch. Then he laid down the ghastly bundle he carried. "It has puzzled you to know how the murderer went in and out, and yet kept the doors locked, has it not?" he said.

"Yes."

"Well, I am going out now. Hook that door after me."

He went out, still carrying my umbrella. I hooked the door. Presently I saw the lid of the cat's door lifted and his hand and arm thrust through. He curved his arm up toward the hook, but it came short by a half foot. Then he withdrew his arm, and thrust in my silver handled umbrella. He reached the door-hook easily enough with that.

Then he hooked it again. That was not so easy—he had to work a long time. Finally he accomplished it, unhooked the door again, and came in.

"That was how?" I said.

"No, it was not," he returned. "No human being, fresh from such a deed, could have used such patience as that to fasten the door after him. Please hang your arm down by your side."

I obeyed. I looked at my arm, then at his own.

"Have you a tape measure?" he asked.

I brought one out of my work-basket. He measured his arm, then mine, and then the distance from the cat-door to the hook.

"I have two tasks for you to-day and to-morrow," he said. "I shall come here very little. Find all your father's old letters and read them. Find a man or woman in this town whose arm is six inches longer than yours. Now I must go home, or my boarding mistress will get curious."

He went through the house to the front door, looked all ways to be sure no eyes were upon him, made three strides down the yard, and was pacing soberly up the street with his cyclopaedia under his arm.

I made myself a cup of coffee; then I went about obeying his instructions. I read old letters all the forenoon; I found packages in trunks in the garret—there were quantities in father's desk. I have selected several to submit to Mr. Dix. One of them treats of an old episode in father's youth, which must have years since ceased to interest him. It was concealed after his favorite fashion—tacked under the bottom of his desk. It was written forty years ago, by Maria Woods—two years before my father's marriage—and it was a refusal of an offer of his hand. It was written in the stilted fashion of that day; it might have been copied from a "complete letter writer."

My father must have loved Maria Woods as dearly as I love Henry to keep that letter so carefully all these years. I thought he cared for my mother. He seemed as fond of her as other men of their wives, although I did use to wonder if Henry and I would ever get to be quite so much accustomed to each other.

Maria Woods must have been as beautiful as an angel when she was a girl. Mother was not pretty—she was stout, too, and awkward, and I suppose people would have called her rather slow and dull. But she was a good woman and tried to do her duty.

Tuesday evening.—This evening was my first opportunity to obey the second of Mr. Dix's orders. It seemed to me the best way to compare the average length of arms was to go to the prayer meeting. I could not go about the town with my tape measure and demand of people that they should hold out their arms. Nobody knows how I dreaded to go to that meeting, but I went, and I looked not at my neighbors' cold, altered faces, but at their arms.

I discovered what Mr. Dix wished me to, but the discovery can avail nothing, and it is one he could have made himself. Phoebe Dole's arm is fully seven inches longer than mine. I never noticed it before, but she has an almost abnormally long arm. But why should Phoebe Dole have unhooked that door?

She made a prayer—a beautiful prayer. It comforted even me a little—she spoke of the tenderness of God in all the troubles of life, and how it never failed us.

When we were all going out I heard several persons speak of Mr. Dix and his Biblical Cyclopaedia. They decided that he was a theological student, book canvassing to defray the expenses of his education.

Maria Woods was not at the meeting. Several asked Phoebe how she was, and she replied, "Not very well."

It was very late. I thought Mr. Dix might be over to-night, but he has not been here.

Wednesday.—I can scarcely believe what I am about to write. Our investigations seem all to point to one person, and that person—it is incredible! I will not believe it. Mr. Dix came as before, at dawn. He reported, and I reported. I showed Maria Woods' letter. He said he had driven to Acton and found that the jeweler there had engraved the last date in the ring about six weeks ago.

"I don't want to seem rough, but your father was going to get married again," said Mr. Dix.

"I never knew him to go near any woman since mother died," I protested.

"Nevertheless he had made arrangements to be married," persisted Mr. Dix.

"Who was the woman?"

He pointed at the letter in my hand.

"Maria Woods!"

He nodded.

I stood looking at him—dazed. Such a possibility had never entered my head.

He produced an envelope from his pocket, and took out a little card with blue and brown threads neatly wound upon it. "Let me see those threads you found," he said.

I got the box, and we compared them. He had a number of pieces of blue sewing silk and brown woolen ravelings, and they matched mine exactly. "Where did you find them?" I asked.

"In my boarding mistress' piece-bag."

I stared at him. "What does it mean?" I gasped out.

"What do you think?"

"It is impossible!"

(To be concluded.)

A DESIGN IN SWISS STYLE.

Adapted Only to Rural Surroundings and Best Suited to a Mountainous Landscape

(Copyright 1895 by the Co-operative Building Plan Association, N. Y.)

There are some styles that are particularly fitted to the American climate and social conditions. There are others that can seldom be used with good effect, but inasmuch as there are occasional calls for the construction of houses in these styles, it is fitting that they should be considered.

The design illustrated herewith is that of a Swiss cottage—a style that is not fitted for this country in general.

Swiss architecture is the outgrowth of the needs and conditions of the inhabitants of Switzerland, and, like all national institutions, is most appropriate to its natural surroundings. The life of the Swiss peasant is divided by his occupations into two seasons; the summer, when he is watching and tending his cattle on the high Alps, and the winter, when he is forced to find shelter from the rigorous climate, with its fierce storms, in the low-lying, secluded valleys.

COOP. BUILDING PLAN ASS'N
ARCHITECTS N.Y.

Swiss architecture, as built in this country, has been—shall we say—somewhat Americanized, and the accompanying sketch shows a structure that would be effective and pleasing if erected in a suitable location. The latter point is one upon which an architect, versed as well in the technical points of landscape, should be consulted, as many a man spending his money freely but not discreetly in the erection of a house has found too late that he has made a serious mistake in trusting too confidently to his own taste.

It may be found necessary for him to sell a house that has cost him thousands of dollars, and because of its expressing too strongly his own individuality, finds he will not be able to realize a third of his investment. It is the proper duty of the architect not only to draw plans but to advise with his client upon the general style, accommodation and arrangement of the house to be chosen, as well as, and perhaps above all, to see that it harmonizes with its surroundings and suits the artistic demands of the neighborhood.

The design illustrating this article would be much out of place by the seashore, but for a country residence or the suburbs of a city, where the land is not flat but rather mountainous or hilly, its tasteful and striking appearance would be most appropriate. A brief description is given as follows:

General dimensions: Width (over all) 36 feet; depth, including veranda, 48 ft. 3 in.

Heights of stories: Cellar, 7 ft.; first story, 10 ft.; second story, 9 feet.

Exterior materials: Foundation, brick; first story, clapboards; second story, gables and roofs, shingles. Outside, blinds.

Second Floor

Interior finish: Hard white plaster, plaster cornices in hall, parlor, dining-room and three chambers; soft wood flooring and trim; ash stairway; panels under windows in parlor, hall and dining-room; bath-room and kitchen wainscotted; interior woodwork finished in hard oil.

The principal rooms and their sizes, closets, etc., are shown by the floor plans.

Cellar under kitchen and pantry. Fireplaces with hardwood mantels in hall, parlor, dining-room, and one bedroom and kitchen range included in estimate. The cost of this design as described is $3,516, not including heater, the estimate being based on New York prices for materials and labor, but in many sections of the country the cost should be less.

SURGERY BY A BLIND MAN.

Delicate and Dangerous Operations Done With Nerve and Skill.

When Dr. James R. Cocke, of 138 Huntington avenue, Boston, was two months old both of his eyes were ruined by a blundering doctor, who administered a wrong medicine.

Since then he has been totally blind. He is now 32 years of age, and he is consulted in difficult cases by the most eminent of the regular physicians of Boston.

He has performed recently two very delicate and difficult surgical operations, and in both cases the patients are doing well. He locates a disease by his sensitive touch, and he tells the color of goods in the same way, singular as it may appear. A lady who had eight or ten samples of dress goods, each about three inches square, and of different colors and shades of colors, handed them to Dr. Cocke the other day, and he at once told accurately the color, and even the shade of color, of each, and selected the samples of best quality. When handed several national bank and government currency bills he at once told the denomination of each, and the color, whether green or black. He tells the complexion of a person by touching the skin.

It is difficult to believe that a blind man could do this, but he is seen to do it, and accurately, too.

Dr. Cocke went among Buffalo Bill's Indians the other day, and designated their character by their voices, spoken in the Indian dialect. He has three diplomas from colleges in this and foreign countries, and four certificates of commendation from institutions where he has taken special courses of study. He went through a course of study under the famous Weir Mitchell. Before Dr. Cocke was 21 years of age he was employed by a large tobacco house to select the raw material for them. He never failed in getting the best quality and the most desirable color—all by the touch.

From this source he earned over $3,000, which paid his expenses at a university in Tennessee, where he stood at the head of his class. From Tennessee University he entered a medical school, where he was "to the fore" all through the class. He has taken special studies in five other institutions, a part of them in Europe. To attain all that this remarkable man has accomplished in the higher classics and professional studies of the colleges requires a large and firmly knit brain, perseverance and self-reliance to an unusual degree.

The two women patients that he operated upon last week are both doing well. In one case a large tumor was removed; the other was a still more difficult and delicate case. In lifting out the tumor Dr. Cocke found that he had twenty-four forceps holding veins and arteries. He tied blood vessels quickly and removed the forceps. He takes up and ties severed arteries in difficult cases more rapidly than any of the clear-seeing surgeons.

He has no idea of the appearance of the moon and the planets and stars, nor the sun; and night and day are all the same to him, except that the stillness of the night does not escape his attention. He is a hard worker and unflagging student. He has a typewriter, to whom he dictates. His wife writes medical prescriptions in Latin.—Hartford Times.

AN IDEAL FIELD FOR THE FLAG.

The forty-four stars now in the field of the American flag present a very jagged appearance. There does not seem to be any way to arrange them in equal rows; all sorts of forms and arrangements have been adopted by flagmakers. Perhaps some uniform plan of placing the stars would be settled if it were not that every one expects that the number will be shortly increased.

No change can be made, however, until 1896, as the law requires that additional stars shall be added only on the Fourth of July succeeding the admission of new States. In all probability Utah and New Mexico will be admitted next winter, which will increase the stars in the field to forty-six. But even then there will be almost the same irregularity, though the field will be more nearly filled up and will appear less jagged than now.

Forty-eight stars could be arranged so as to present a perfectly regular appearance, and it is not improbable that the number may be reached before long. Oklahoma, a booming Territory, is asking admission, and Arizona has long had pretentions to Statehood.

With the admission of those four organized Territories the national domain will be exhausted unless the Indian country is to be absorbed or admitted as an Indian State. There is, of course, Alaska, but that region can hardly be considered as a possible State. It might be added to our extreme Northwestern State, or even to California, as there is no constitutional objection to this.

An ideal number of stars for arrangement in the field of the flag would be forty-nine. Up, down, and diagonally there would be rows of seven, the mystic number.

It is quite possible that there may be forty-nine States before the end of the century. The civilized Indians in the Indian Territory may ask and obtain admission, or the American colonists in the Hawaiian Islands may come in. It is true that they now maintain an independent republic, but they constantly avow their purpose to ask admission to the Union.—San Francisco Chronicle.

REFORMERS AND RADICALS.

What a Plainfield Woman Has to Say About These People.

"Reformers and radicals," said Mrs. Florence Howe Hall at a woman's club meeting, "should be careful not to impede progress. This, from the very fact that they are themselves in the lead, they are apt to do. Their being in front often keeps others back—not intentionally nor invariably, of course, but none the less definitely, and at times, certainly. Also, of course, the evil is never a lasting one, but while it does last it is most effectual and for a time defeats the very purpose that the reformers set out to accomplish. The same principle acts upon any other sort of crowd. At the ferries and railway stations it isn't the people behind, it's those in front, who retard progress and so make all the trouble."—Evening Sun.

HE PULLED HER HAIR.

Another Boulevard Scrap Between Two Colored Denizens of Battle Row.

Battle Row appeared to be quite appropriately named, when two colored residents of that place had quite a lively little scrap on West Fourth street yesterday. No one appeared to know what the row was about, only that a colored man was arguing with a colored girl when he seized her by the hair, threw her down, and brutally kicked and beat her. A crowd collected and some of them were about to interfere, when the man left his victim in the gutter and walked off. The names of the participants could not be learned, but it is known that they are not husband and wife.

DESERTED AND DESTITUTE.

A Fanwood Mother Left to Support Four Small Children.

Application has been made to H. Hand, overseer of the poor, of Fanwood township, for relief to the family of William Peel, a milkman, who for the last two years has been living at the corner of Terrell road and Midway avenue, in Fanwood.

Up Where the Vassar Girls Are.

J. Hervey Doane and family, of La Grande avenue, are visiting Mr. Doane's neices, Mrs. Samuel Moore, and Miss Belle Bradshaw at their home in Poughkeepsie, N. Y. His neices are both well known in this city as they once resided here. Samuel Moore is the owner of the leading shoe store of Poughkeepsie. The party will return to Plainfield tomorrow. Mr. Doane took his camera with him, so several fine views of the place may be expected.

Young Soldiers at Boynton.

The First New Jersey Battalion Boys' Brigade, under command of Major Thomas W. Wightman, are in camp at Boynton Beach. Seventy-five tents have been erected on the field adjoining the ball ground. The camp has been laid out in streets and looks quite soldierlike. The boys will be in camp for ten days and will be given a taste of camp life in the way of guard duty, etc. There will be a dress parade every afternoon.

A Sail on the Hudson.

B. R. Force and son, Augustus Force, of East Front street, and Mrs. G. W. Force, Miss Ida Force, and Miss Emma Force, of West Second street, and Charles Burnett, of Central avenue, took the day boat up the Hudson yesterday to Newburgh, and returned on the down steamer in the afternoon. A most enjoyable day was spent.

There Is No Doubt About It.

Africa is a continent of great possibilities, and promises to take an active part in the future history of the world, but in preparation for that, a day of rest by the ocean would be of great benefit, and as the excursion of the Hope chapel goes Saturday, you will make a mistake if you do not go, too.

BARBERS ON SUNDAY CLOSING

SOME ARE FOR AND SOME AGAINST THE MOVEMENT.

Various Arguments are Offered Pro and Con—Some Say it Will Hurt Their Business, While Others Say Not.

There are many minds of many opinions among the barbers in regard to the Sunday closing ordinance which has passed the City Council on its second reading.

A Daily Press reporter made the rounds yesterday and learned many things on the subject.

The first man interviewed was P. H. Decker, of North avenue. He said that he had made up his mind to close whether anyone else did or not as he wanted his Sunday off. He was not concerned about the others.

Brown & Hill said they were not in favor of it for many reasons. One being that they had a class of customers who only came to their shop on Sunday mornings as they could not come any other time. Their customers were also kicking about it and were very much against it.

Charles Suhr was much opposed. His customers, he said, were loud in their talk against closing. Mr. Suhr said if the shops were closed Sundays the journeymen would lose a half a day as they would not get their day off in the week. He also thought that under the present rule all of the barbers could go to church if they wanted to and that there was no excuse.

William Bamberger was the next man seen and he was inclined to be neutral on the subject, although he signed the petition to close. He said it made no difference to him whether or not they closed, but thought if a man wanted to be an objectionist he could have a little fun.

The next man interviewed was George Richter on Somerset street. At first he was not inclined to say much, but finally said he did not favor the idea. He stated that a large number of his customers could not possibly get shaved on Saturday night and were obliged to come on Sunday. He thought it was a poor plan to close all the shops, but if any wanted to close they could do so. When the reporter saw Charles Hui, the originator of the idea, he was free to give his opinion. He thought that a man ought to be able to do all his work in six days, and also, if married, ought to have some time to spend with his family; if not, he ought to have the day to himself. He was strongly in favor of closing and hoped the ordinance would become a law

Eugene Laine was found in front of his shop and when asked if he was in favor of closing, said he was most emphatically. Mr. Laine said that for a number of years past he had worked hard to have the shops close but never succeeded. He was strongly hoping that this time it would go through.

George Kesselring was asked for his opinion of closing on Sundays. He was in faver of the idea, but wants all to close. He thinks that a man can do all necessary work in six days, and although he did not sign the petition he is perfectly willing to abide by the ordinance.

E. B. Maynard thought it was an excellent plan, and was enthusiastically in favor of it. His opinion was that it would be a success in every respect.

Theodore Kurzhals did not favor Sunday closing. His customers were opposed to it. And he thought there should be no law compelling all to close. His idea would be to let anyone close that wanted to. It was the people that keep the shops open, and they should be the ones to regulate the business in that respect.

William Feiring, whose barber shop is under George Hallock's hat store on West Front street, said that he was willing to close if the rest did. He does not object to the ordinance and does not care much about the whole affair.

P. J. Kreitling, further down West Front street, was one of the first signers and was, of course, much in favor.

"Dave" of the same street was another signer of the petition and William Claassen, of Liberty street, was one of the promoters of the idea and therefore is very much in favor of the ordinance.

Sheridan Held.

Lawrence Sheridan, of Summit, who is in the county jail charged with forgery, and who was to have an examination yesterday afternoon before Justice Kelly, has waived an examination on advice of his counsel, T. M. Kelly, of Elizabeth. Judge McCormick has placed the bail at $1,000.

Picnicers on Hudson's Meadows.

Miss Goff, of Liberty street, gave a picnic on Hudson's meadows to a number of her friends from Elizabeth and Plainfield, yesterday. A most enjoyable day was spent.

For Moving Endeavorers.

R. B. Sinclair, superintendent of the correspondence department of the State Christian Endeavor Union, has been diligently furthering the work of his department, and, at the present time, he is able to report seventeen unions with superintendents of correspondence. They are Essex and Hudson counties, Atlantic City, Camden, Hollywood, Middlesex county, Plainfield, Paterson and vicinity, Sussex and Warren, Somerset, Northern and Central, Trenton, Pittsgrove, Hackensack Valley, Shore Union, and Ocean county. The object of this department is to enable the societies to follow Endeavorers moving from place to place.

Mr. French's Enterprise.

John H. French states that it will not be a hotel which he is to erect on the mountain, but a first class boarding house. His present plans are to have a twenty-four room house, which is to be erected on the bluff at this end of the mountain near the Moore property and not more than ten minutes walk from the terminus of the trolley road.

Mr. French calculates to have the building completed by next fall and just as soon as possible he will put a force of men at work clearing away the brush and trees to get an open space where excavation can be commenced.

Four New Members.

Four candidates were initiated at the meeting of Franklin Council, No. 41, J. O. U. A. M., last evening and the arrangements for the Council's annual excursion to Asbury Park were completed. Several of the members will visit the Scotch Plains Council this evening.

Had to Pay For The Dog After All

The valuable dog that was presented to Charles Arnold, the Somerset street butcher, got away yesterday and was put in the pound. It cost its owner $2.10 to redeem the canine.

—The regular monthly shoot of the Climax Gun Club will take place next Wednesday.

My boy was taken sick with a disease resembling bloody flux. The first thing I thought of was Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. Two doses of it settled the matter and cured him sound and well. I heartily recommend this remedy to all persons suffering from a like complaint. I will answer any inquiries regarding it when stamp is inclosed. I refer to any county official as to my reliability. Wm. Roach, J. P., Primroy, Campbell Co., Tenn. IT IS WARM, BUT OH WHAT FUN.

The Revere House Waiters Dance Merrily Last Night.

It was a warm night but that did not make any difference to the waiters in the Revere House and their friends, for Central Hall was well filled with those who came to attend the waiters' ball. The inspiring music, furnished by Professor Guttman, hardly ceased once during the evening and the brilliant costumes of the dancers made a lively and everchanging picture.

Howard Grobes made an excellent floor manager and was assisted by William Lewis and Samuel Lewis. William Lee acted in the responsible position of ticket-seller, while Benjamin Hayard took them at the door. A great convenience to the guests was the cloak-room, where John Perkins checked such articles as were wished. The table of refreshments was under the control of Miss Arlie Lewis and Miss Lottie Johnson.

The grand march took place at ten o'clock and was led by Lewis Peterson and Miss Agnes Perkins. From that time until midnight the guests gradually came in until the hall was crowded. Quite a number of the guests of the Revere House came to witness the affair.

The event of the evening was a cake-walk, of which there were two. The first was a plain one and the best walkers were Lewis Petersen and Miss Agnes Perkins. In the second, which was a fancy one, the contest was very close and it had to be walked twice to allow the judges to decide. The enthusiasm of the spectators was great and they tried to encourage their favorites on to greater efforts by cheering and clapping. One man became so excited that he jumped up and down in his endeavor to help his friend.

The second cake walk was won by Daniel Upsher and his mother. The success of the first two walks led to a third which was won by James Grouth and a companion from Fanwood.

A prize of a ladies diamond pin was given to Miss Agnes Perkins and Lewis Peterson as the best waltzers.

The financial part of the ball was very successful, as all expenses were paid and a neat balance left in the treasury.

COULD NOT EQUAL THE PRISONER.

A West End Young Man Fails to Win His Wager.

They are not all dead in the west end of the city, neither have they lost their sense of fun. The other evening a number of men heard the story of how a prisoner once escaped by crawling out of a hole six by ten inches in size. The case was discussed and one young man was very sure it could be done; the rest were inclined to think otherwise. Finally a bet was made that this young man could not crawl through a hole of the required size. Yesterday the trial took place in a secluded part of the West End. The young man removed his clothing and greased himself preparatory to the trial. And then he tried to squeeze through the opening but wiggle his prettiest he could not manage to equal the prisoner's performance and finally had to desist amid the laughter of his comrades.

A RECORD BREAKER.

Dr. Lawler Called to Westfield to Treat a Badly Injured Horse.

One of the longest runaways that hass been heard of for some time took place Wednesday evening at Westfield. Mr. Wittke of that place was driving a young but very valuable colt when another horse coming from behind frightened the animal who started to run. Mr. Wittke was thrown from the carriage but not seriously injured, while the horse was not found until six o'clock yesterday morning three miles north of this city, with a very serious wound. The muscles on the right hind leg had been torn away from the hock to the fetlock. Dr. J. H. Lawler, the well-known veterinary surgeon from New York, who is now located in Plainfield, was called and performed a very skillful operation which will probably save the leg of the valuable animal.

Where to Enter.

Any one who wishes to enter the one hundred and fifty mile bicycle run can do so this evening by applying to John Rickett on North avenue.

Electric Bitters.

Electric Bitters is a medicine suited for any season, but perhaps more generally needed in the spring, when the languid exhausted feeling prevails, when the liver is torpid and sluggish and the need of a tonic and alterative is felt. A prompt use of this medicine has often averted long and perhaps fatal bilious fevers. No medicine will act more surely in counteracting and freeing the system from the malarial poison. Headache, indigestion, constipation, dizziness yield to Electric Bitters. Only 50c per bottle at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

A TRAMP'S UNLUCKY RIDE.

HIS FOOT CAUGHT BETWEEN THE BUMPERS AND CRUSHED.

Joseph Miller, Who Hails From St. Louis, Now in the Hospital—Liable to Lose One of His Legs.

When a man attempts to "travel on his face," which is a common expression among a class of people, he is apt to get in trouble.

Such was the case of Joseph Miller, a tramp, who said he lived in St. Louis. He was stealing a ride on a coal train on the Central railroad and he met with an accident at Lebanon last night which will probably cost him his left foot.

He was sitting between two coal cars with his feet hanging near the bumpers. The train pulled out very quickly and for some reason made a sudden stop. Miller's left foot was caught between the bumpers, which resulted in three toes being crushed and a portion of the foot. He managed to get his mutilated member out where he remained until found by brakemen Saltzman.

He was brought to Plainfield on engine 350, and taken to the Hospital in the ambulance.

It will probably be found necessary to amputate the foot.

WHERE IT WAS COOL.

German Reformed Church People Enjoy a Pleasant Day.

When most of Plainfield was sweltering in the extreme heat yesterday afternoon, fifty-five member of the singing school of the German Reformed church were enjoying themselves under the cooling shade of Hyde's woods. Refreshments, in the shape of ice cream, lemonade and sandwiches were dispensed among the singing people with a liberal hand. Mrs. Doerenger looked after the frozen delicacies while Miss Anna Ptaschinska Mrs. Bechtle and Mrs. C. Menzenbach were in charge of the other table.

Every effort was made to make the afternoon an enjoyable one for the young people. For the boys there was a back jumping contest which was won by Albert Utzinger. August Neher was second and Charles Doerenger third.

An egg race furnished plenty of excitement for the fair sex and in it Miss Annie Doerenger proved herself to be the best. Miss Carrie Meyers was third. To end the athletic contests a tug of war was held between the two sexes and old and young joined in the fun. It is said that the coming women will lead the men but the tug of war showed that they were doing it already. A fish pond in which the young people fished for packages was another attraction.

The committee in charge of the picnic consisted of August Wolffe, Philip Bach and Mrs. Stahl, and they deserve great credit for the excellent manner in which everything was arranged.

A SUCCESSFUL TRIUMVIRATE.

Three Washington Park Young People Give a Successful Entertainment.

Two little girls and one boy gave an entertainment at the residence of Thomas B. Brooks on Rockview avenue last evening for the benefit of the Fresh Air Fund. The energetic little promoters of the entertainment were Miss Ray Hooley, Miss Mabel Hooley and Charles B. McLean. The programme consisted of tableaux and charades, all of which were most prettily given. One of the best was "Me and Jack," which was represented by Miss Mabel Hooley and a large bulldog. The loud applause frightened the dog and he made a leap, almost upsetting his pretty companion. Another of the last tableaux was "The Sleeping Beauty," in which Charles McLean was the gallant prince and Miss Ray Hooley his sleeping love. The entire entertainment was given in a most pleasing manner that well merited the hearty applause that it received. Lemonade was served at the close of the programme. The receipts were $7.12, which will be duly sent to the Fresh Air Fund.

The Harvest Home.

Great preperations are being made for the grand annual harvest home at Smallytown in the beautiful grove on the grounds of Mr. C. Wengle and I. J. Coon, on Thursday, August 29th. Excellent adddresses, good music, big dinner and splendid opportunity for boat riding, the harvest home being held on the on the banks of the Passaic river. The committee are also arranging for an attractive game of base ball.

A Gain for This Year.

North Plainfield's apportionment of school money is $7,541.88. Last year it was $6,535.72, a gain of $1,006.16 for this year

LIFE AT CAMP PLAINFIELD.

Mr. Franklin Investigates His Thirteen-Pound Cake.

Lake Hopatcong is a delightful place for camping, with its beautiful scenery and lake, boating and fishing. A party of Plainfield young men are camping there, and some time ago a Mr. Franklin, of Waynwood place, sent them an immense cake, weighing thirteen pounds. Last Tuesday morning he rode up on his wheel to see them, and returned yesterday afternoon shortly before six o'clock. He had had no intention of remaining so long at "Camp Plainfield," as the boys term their ground, but he found the life there so enjoyable that he remained much longer than he expected. He found the party, which consists of Walter B. Rittenhouse, J. Vincent Rittenhouse, and Everett J. Peck and George F. Rose, completely satisfied with camp life, which they say has twice as much enjoyment in it than they expected. There are two banjos in the party, and on the night of Mr. Franklin's arrival he was entertained with selections on them and a song, which was a joint composition of the whole party, which was sung to the tune of "Solomon Levi." The words were as follows:

We are a lazy sort of crowd,
On pleasure we are bent;
We sit away our idle days
Beneath our ragged tent.
And when it comes to cooking grub,
And scratching round for feed,
We are a crew who know the ropes,
And we can do the deed.

CHORUS.

Fried fish and taters are peachy agately, brown;
Oatmeal and pancakes turn summersaults on the way down.
There's Guggeret Peck, who trots for wood,
While Georgy runs the place,
The Kid he does the dirty work,
While Brit he feeds his face.

The boys expect to return to Plainfield on Monday, as their three weeks' outing will then be up.

OFFICIALS AT WAR.

Rahway's Mayor Said to Have Acted in a Summary Way.

War has been declared between Mayor Daly and the Aldermanic Committee on Lamps and Gas, and it has all arisen over the action of the Common Council in passing a resolution empowering the Committee on Lamps to make a contract with the Rahway Gaslight Company to light 100 lamps for the month of August or until such time as the electric light company is ready to complete its contract for lighting the city. It seems that Mayor Daly went to the gaslight company the day after the Council's last meeting, told it to go ahead, and in consequence the company officials did not consult the Lamp Committee of the Council at all, but started 100 lights burning. This aroused the committee, who that same night had forty-five of the lamps put out. Next night the gas company lighted up again and have been doing so ever since, wholly ignoring the authority of the Lamp Committee. Alderman Gruener, chairman of the committee, says that the gas company will not get a penny for the work, as they have done it without entering into a contract with the city. Mayor Daly, on the other hand, declares he will see to it that the bill is paid.

Postoffice at Mt. Bethel.

Postmaster-General Wilson has upon the petition of influential inhabitants created a new post office at Mount Bethel, near Millington, to be known as Gallia. This name was given it in honor of the nativity of Prof. Eugene Rezendie, of No. 686 Lexington avenue, a venerated member of the French colony in New York city, who for many years had a summer residence at Mt. Bethel.

Oh, That Watermelon.

The word watermelon brings up pleasant thoughts of past experiences, but to the colored people of this city a chance for another experience is coming. A lawn party and watermelon feast is the title of a festival which is to occur on the grounds of the Fillmore avenue Baptist church on the afternoon and evening of August 21st.

Shut Down.

The block-cutting department in Love's wall-paper making establishment shut down last Saturday for two weeks. All the employes are thus getting a vacation.

When moving into our present home I found a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm left by a former tenant. On the label I found the statement that it was good for cuts and burns. I can testify to the truth of this. Nothing in all my experience has found its equal for treating blisters or burns. F. E. Barrett, manager Le Sueur Sentinel, Le Sueur, Minn. Pain Balm is also a sure cure for rheumatism. For sale at Reynolds Pharmacy, Park and North avenues; T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

JUSTICE JACKSON DEAD

The End Came After a Long Illness.

Passed Away at His Home in Tennessee Surrounded by All of His Family Except Two Children Now Abroad—His Last Work Was on the Income Tax.

Nashville, Tenn., Aug. 9.—Howell Edmunds Jackson, associate justice of the supreme court of the United States, died at 2 o'clock yesterday at his residence at Weat Meade, six miles from this city, aged 65. Judge Jackson had been in failing health for several years, but it has been only in the last nine months that the progress of the disease began to cause his family and friends uneasiness. Last year hs went on a lengthy trip to the far west in search of health. Later he went to Thomasville, Ga., where it was hoped the mild and bracing climate would restore his vigorous constitution. The trip did him little good and after a time he was brought home.

Income Tax His Last Case.

At his old home, surrounded by the scenes he loved so well, Judge Jackson seemed to improve steadily until he went to Washington to sit in the second hearing of the income tax case. He stood that trying trip fairly well and after his return home appeared to lose strength rapidly. He was afflicted with a complication of diseases which it was impossible to fight off. Nevertheless Judge Jackson did not take to his bed until eight days ago. Since that time his family and friends realized that the end was near, and his death was not unexpected.

Twice Married.

Judge Jackson was twice married, the first time to Miss Sophia Malloy, daughter of David B. Malloy, a banker of Memphis, who died in 1875. To this union were born four children, as follows: Henry, Mary, William H., and Howell Jackson. Henry Jackson is at present soliciting freight agent of the Southern railway with headquarters at Atlanta. W. H. Jackson, jr., is district attorney of the Chesapeake & Ohio Railway at Cincinnati. Howell Jackson is manager of the Jackson Cotton mills at Jackson, Tenn. In 1876 Judge Jackson married Miss Mary E. Harding, daughter of the late General Harding. Of this union three children, Misses Elizabeth and Louise Jackson and Harding A. Jackson survive him.

Only Two of His Family Absent.

With the exception of Miss Elizabeth Jackson and William H. Jackson, jr., who are in Europe, the children were at the bedside when the distinguished sufferer passed away. The news of Judge Jackson's death caused general sorrow in the city where he was so well known and admired. The arrangements for the funeral have not been fully completed, but it is known that it will take place next Sunday afternoon.

JUDGE HOWELL E. JACKSON.

Sketch of the Career of the Late Supreme Justice.

Judge Howell E. Jackson was the son of an eminent physician of Jackson, Tenn. He was born in Paris, Tenn., April 9, 1832. He graduated from the University of Virginia with the highest honors, and was a classmate of ex-Judge, now Rev. Dr., Lowe, late of Avondale Presbyterian church. His home was at West Mead farm, near Nashville. His son William H. Jackson is engaged in the practice of law in Nashville, and is a candidate for the appointment to the United States district attorneyship.

Elected United States Senator.

Judge Jackson served one term on the supreme bench of Tennessee in 1881. He was elected United States senator from this state at a time when the fight concerning the state's debt was on. The judge championed the cause of those who were for the payment of the debt. As senator he served on various important standing committees, notably the judiciary committee, the committee on claims, committee on pensons, and the special committee on the tenth census.

Appointed by Harrison in '93.

Elected senator in 1881 his term did not expire until March 4, 1887, but he was appointed to the United States district court bench by President Cleveland April 1886. It is said that Mr. Cleveland would have appointed him to the supreme bench during his first term as president had it not been for the fact that Mrs. Jackson was much averse to living in Washington, and so told him. He was appointed to the supreme bench in January, 1893, by President Harrison. His nomination was confirmed by a republican senate although he was a staunch democrat.

Domestic in His Habits.

Judge Jackson was domestic in his habits and desires. Many incidents are related showing the different sides of his character. On one occasion, while district judge, he was hearing an argument of a noted Louisville lawyer on a question involving a matter of interest. Judge Jackson, in his ruling decided against the gentlemen, who brought forward an authority which he said he hoped would have weight with the court. It was a report of the senatorial judicial committee on a case bearing upon the same question. Judge Jackson recognized the report as one which had been made by the judiciary committee while he was a member of that committee. He asked the attorney if he expected to hold a man as judge responsible for an opinion he had held as senator.

ANOTHER CHINESE OUTRAGE.

American and British Mission at Fatshan Attacked.

London, Aug. 9.—A dispatch from Hong Kong states that a large mob of infuriated Chinese attacked the British and American missions at Fatshan, near Canton, at noon Wednesday. Some of the missionaries fled to Shameen for safety, but the others remained at Fatshan. A Chinese gunboat has been sent to quell the rioting. It is reported that the anti-foreign agitators intend soon to destroy all the missions in the province of Kwang-Tung and to drive the missionaries into the treaty ports. The Chinese sect known as the Vegetarians, who are at the bottom of the outrages, now number 12,000 men. They are organized and well-armed and are able to withstand the Chinese troops.

Mission Houses Looted.

A dispatch to the Pall Mall Gazette from Shanghai say that Europeans ridicule the idea of a Chinese escort accompanying the British consul at Foo-Chow to Kucheng, where he goes to investigate the massacre of British missionaries. When the viceroy's troops were dispatched to the scene of the massacre they immediately looted the mission houses. The dispatch adds that owing to the unsettled state of the province it has been decided to send 200 British Indian Sikh troops from Hong Kong to escort the consul to Kucheng. The London Missionary society has received a cable dispatch from the Central Chinese agent stating that Central China is quiet.

To Prevent Further Massacres.

Lord Salisbury and the Chinese ambassador had a long interview at the foreign office. It is supposed that the meeting between the prime minister and the Chinese representative was in relation to the massacre of missionaries and the steps to be taken to prevent a recurrence of the outrages.

Hong Kong, Aug. 9.—A great indignation meeting was held here last night to protest against the massacre of Christians by Chinese. Among the resolutions adopted was one expressing disgust at the apathy and indifference of the British government in failing to recognize the gravity of the situation and for not taking adequate measures to protect British subjects.

PROBABLY SIXTEEN KILLED.

Workmen Still Searching the Ruins of New York's Collapsed Building.

New York, Aug. 9.—If all the men still missing are found in the ruins of the new building that collapsed at the corner of South Fifth avenue and Third street yesterday the number of dead as a result of the accident will be sixteen. William Fox, John Clune, James Kinney, Neil Guider, Frank Mazzoconi, William Frank, and John Kelley were taken from the ruins alive and they are expected to recover. The gang of men put to work overhauling the ruins soon after the accident worked all night by electric light. The work will not be completed it is believed until this evening. Contractor Parker and Jefford Sellick, the foreman of the work were arrested on the charge of manslaughter and released on $15,000 bail each. It is now pretty well known that the cause of the accident was the overweighting of the upper floor by the contractor. There was probably 400 pounds of rock plaster to the square foot on the floor which was only planned to stand 250 pounds.

MORE TROOPS IF NECESSARY.

Spain Is Determined To Suppress the Cubans, Says Castillo.

Madrid, Aug. 9.—Prime Minister Canovas del Castillo has informed his political friends that General Martinez Campos has returned to Havana in full confidence of the success of the government in suppressing the insurrection in Cuba. General Campos considers the reinforcements already sent to the island amply sufficient to put down the rebellion, but, nevertheless, the premier says the government is prepared to send 100,000 more troops or even a greater number to Cuba, being resolved to end the rebellion before the end of the present year.

ARMENIAN MISRULE.

The Grand Vizier Said To Have Againg Resigned.

Constantinople, Aug. 9.—The grand vizier is again reported to have resigned owing to the opposition of the sultan to the proposals of the powers. Said Pasha favors their acceptance. The sultan, it is stated, has not accepted his resignation. Advices received from Mush say that the Turkish authorities are placing obstacles in the way of the distribution of further relief by the Armenian committee, and it is expected that the funds collected for the succor of suffering Armenians will be placed in the hands of the American missionaries.

VICTORIES OF GERMANS

Franco-Prussian War Celebrations Begun.

Demonstrations in Different Parts of the Fatherland—A Dispatch from the Emperor—Munich Council Makes an Appropriation for a Grand Celebration of Sedan Day.

Berlin, Aug. 9.—Celebrations in commemoration of the German victories during the Franco-Prussian war continue to be held in various parts of the empire. At Aachen the Hohenzollern regiment (the 40th) held a demonstration, at which a telegram from Emperor William, who is at Cowes, Isle of Wight, attending the regatta of the Royal Yacht squadron, was received. His majesty in his dispatch said: "I remember thankfully the glorious share that the Hohenzollern fusiliers took in the battle fought at Specheren for the protection of the frontier." At Jena 500 veterans of the Thuringian regiment (the 94th) held field services before the warriors' monument, near the Forsthaus. Pastor Kirms, of Berlin, who served in the war of 1879 with the 3d battalion, preached a sermon to the veterans in the historical market place, and Major General Frank held a review, at the conclusion of which he made a touching speech. The celebration was ended with cheers for the Grand Duke of Saxe-Weimar-Eisenach and the emperor. All the houses in Jena were profusely decorated. Eight hundred veterans of the Bavarian Jager battalion of Aschaffenburg arrived this morning at Rudesheim, where a demonstration was held before the Germania monument. The burgomaster of Aschaffenburg delivered the principal address, which was of a patriotic character.

Preparing for Sedan Day.

The Munich council of magistrates have voted the sum of 5,500 marks for the celebration of Sedan Day (September 2). The Ludwigstrasse will on that day be converted into a via triumphalis as it was on the day of the entry of the victorious troops under Crown Prince Friedrich twenty-five years ago. Veterans of the different branches of the army, rifle clubs and gymnastic societies will form in procession and bearing torches will march through the Siegesthor, or Gate of Victory, to the Feldherrenhalle, where the army monument will be decorated with wreaths. A chorus of a thousand voices will render patriotic songs, and Burgomaster Borscht will deliver an address. The bells of all the churches in the city will be rung and guns will be fired on the artillery ground of Oberwiesenfeld. The celebration will be concluded by the chanting of "Die Wacht am Rhein."

FORGOT ABOUT THE EXPRESS.

Cause of the Fatal Head-on Collision Near Plymouth.

Plymouth, N. H., Aug. 8.—The terrible head-on collision between the Cannon Ball express and a freight train yesterday on the White Mountain division of the Boston & Maine railroad near here, resulting in the instant death of Engineer Stevenson and Fireman Merrill of the passenger train and Fireman Giles of the freight, seems to have been caused through carelessness on the part of some one. The freight was an extra with no time given and those in charge forgot about the express train. Both engines were demolished, as were thirteen new freight cars just put out of the shops. Of the ten or fiteen injured, Brakeman Austin is the only one whose injuries may prove fatal.

PLEADS FOR HER SON.

The Mother of a Condemned Man Calls at Buzzards Bay.

Buzzards Bay, Mass., Aug. 9.—Mrs. S. F. Hatch of Oklahoma City, was here yesterday. She came on to see the president with regard to securing, if possible, an absolute pardon for her son, Clyde Mattox, who is now under sentence to be hung October 11th for the killing of a negro in that city some six years ago. The case has been tried three times and the papers are now in the president's possession awaiting his decree. The president drove over to the village and saw her. Mrs. Hatch stated her story of the shooting as gleaned from newly discovered evidence. The president was unable to give the poor lady any encouragement, from the fact that he had not fully considered the voluminous matter now before him.

CAUSE FOR FRIGHT.

Thrilling Experience While Making a Parachute Descent.

Haverhill, Mass., Aug. 9.—Professor Wolcott had a thrilling experience at the Pines yesterday afternoon. When his balloon was up 3,000 feet and he was preparing for his parachute leap his sash caught around the trapeze and he descended fully 150 feet head first before the parachute opened, but he landed safely on his feet. Professor Wolcott said it was the first time he has been thoroughly frightened.

A Child Strangled To Death.

Hoboken, N. J., Aug. 9.—A five-months-old child of Mrs. Lena Dickel, wife of Charles Dickel of Sherman avenue, Guttenburg, was discovered dead in bed with its demented mother yesterday. From marks on its throat the child is believed to have been strangled to death by its mother, who became violently insane.

BEAUTY.

How to Increase in Weight and Otherwise Improve One's Personal Appearance.

Every normally constituted man and woman wants to look well. This is natural and right. We have little sympathy for those people who through indolence or gluttony have permitted themselves to take on too much flesh. They know that by living abstemiously and taking plenty of exercise they can get back to their normal weight.

We do however have a great deal of sympathy for those poor, pale, thin sufferers who either have no appetite else whose food distresses them to such a degree that they are forced to live on most frugal diet.

"Going into a decline." How often do we hear this expression. What does it mean! It means that people are losing flesh, growing thin, wasting.

Their trouble arises from the fact that they are unable to digest sufficient food and when the stomach is out of order and fails to do proper work, foods are worse than useless. They simply ferment in the stomach and fill the system with poisonous principles.

What these people need is something that will digest their food after it has been eaten, and it is in just such cases that the Digestive Cordial is made by the Mount Lebanon Shakers is proving remarkably successful.

It is so prompt in its action that a sense of relief almost immediately follows the first dose, and a rapid increase in weight is soon noted.

The Shakers have issued an interesting pamphlet which may be obtained upon inquiry at any drug store.

You can stoop without effort and without fear if you wear a BALL'S CORSET. It won't stay bent and it can't break. IT IS GUARANTEED.

PERILS OF THE OCEAN

Three Vessels and Many Lives Lost.

The Steamer Catterthun Goes Down and Probably Seventy-seven Persons Perished—Two Ships Sunk in Collision and All on Board One of the Unfortunate Vessels Are Lost.

Sydney, N. S. W., Aug. 9.—A boat's crew of Chinese has been landed at Forster, about 100 miles north of this port. The men report that the British steamer Catterthun, 1,406 tons, which sailed from Hong Kong on May 27 for Australian ports, was wrecked Wednesday. Later in the day some details of the wreck were received here from Forster. The steamship was wrecked on Seal Rocks off Cape Hawk early Wednesday morning during a gale. The passengers, who numbered 70 persons, of whom 55 were Chinese, were asleep below when the vessel grounded. Only three of the European passengers and the second mate of the steamer were saved.

Seventy-seven Missing.

The passengers and officers missing and supposed to have been lost are seventy-seven in number. Among them were Neil Shannon, the captain; Mr. Pinney, the first officer; Third Officer Leffler, Chief Engineer Harper, Second Engineer Adams, Third Engineer Wilson, Fourth Engineer Wolstenholme, Chief Steward Manning and Surgeon Anderson Phips, thirty Chinese and eighteen Lascars. The passengers who are supposed to be lost are Mesdames Mathias, Loring and Smith, Miss Loring and Robert Fraser and fifteen Chinese steerage passengers.

Life Boats Swept Away.

The seas swept the unfortunate vessel fore and aft. Every effort made to lower the boats was baffled by the seas, which swept them inboard after they had been swung out on the davits. The port lifeboat was lost entirely, being swept from the davits. Notwithstanding the dangerous position of the steamer, which it was now seen was doomed, excellent discipline was maintained. During an attempt to lower the starboard cutter a tremendous sea broke aboard the steamer and carried away the cutter. It also swept from the bridge the captain and chief and second officers and Capt. Fawkes. The last named, having been unable to reach his cabin to obtain a life belt, had borrowed the captain's knife, and was in the act of cutting the lashings of a small table when he was swept off into the sea.

PROBABLY FORTY PERISHED.

Two Vessels Sunk in Collision in the South Atlantic.

Philadelphia, Aug. 9.—The thrilling story of the sinking of two vessels in collision and the probable loss of about forty lives is told by Captain Henderson, late of the British ship Prince Oscar, who with sixteen of his crew arrived at this port on the British steamer Capac from Chilian and Peruvian ports. Four of the crew of the Prince Oscar went down on the ship, and two others were drowned by the upsetting of a lifeboat in the heavy seas.

Believes All Perished.

The name of the ship with which the Prince Oscar was in collision is not known to Captain Henderson, and her entire crew are supposed to have gone to the bottom with their vessel. Captain Henderson says the unknown ship had four masts and was full rigged, and he thinks from her size that her crew numbered thirty or forty. The collision occurred on the night of the 13th of July about 500 miles southeast of Cape Saint Roque near the route of ships bound from London to Melbourne, Australia.

Picked Up After Two Days.

After drifting about for two days and a half without food or water and suffering hardships and misery Captain Henderson and his men were picked up by a sailing vessel, which transferred them to the Capac. Captain Henderson said that the accident was due to the other vessel not displaying side lights thus making it impossible to diocover her exact position. Both vessels went down in ten minutes.

"JAMES I.'S" PROTEGE.

Mr. Adee Receives the "Chancellor" of the Island of Trinidad.

Washington, Aug. 9.—Mr. Adee, the acting secretary of state, after thinking over the matter all night, concluded to see Comte de la Boissierie, whose cards describe him as grand chancellor of the principality of Trinidad, but not officially. Boissierie came in behalf of his sovereign, James I., otherwise Baron Harden-Hickey, whose crown and dominion are threatened by the desire of Great Britain to possess the little island which he claims. As the principality has not been recognized by this government the chancellor was received by Mr. Adee in an informal way, just as any ordinary visitor would be received. They spent some time in Mr. Adee's office, the count presenting the claim of Baron Harden-Hickey for recognition sa a sovereign prince, and the necessity for the United States to see that Great Britain did not seize the island.

CHANNEL TOO SHALLOW.

Philadelphia Loses a Trans-Atlantic Steamship Service.

Philadelphia, Aug. 9.—The International Navigation company's steamer Southwark which has been plying between this port and Liverpool, and which is one of the largest cargo carriers afloat, left here at 11:30 a. m. yesterday for New York. She will henceforth run between New York and Antwerp. The Southwark was withdrawn from the Philadelphia service because of the shallowness of the channel in the Delaware river and bay. The Kensington, a sister ship which is now plying between Liverpool and Philadelphia, will also be withdrawn shortly for the same reason and transferred to the New York-Antwerp route.

Will Appeal to the Lords.

London, Aug. 6.—Countess Russell, it is stated, intends to appeal to the house of lords against the decision dismissing her appeal from the judgment of the lower court in the suit brought by her husband, Earl Russell, for a legal separation.

NEGROES WILL RETURN.

Spring Valley's Mayor at Last Takes a Hand To Maintain Order.

Princeton Ill., Aug. 9.—The action of the sheriff and the news of the general indignation created in all parts of the country at the treatment of the negroes by the whites has at last brought the Italian mayor of Spring Valley to a realization of his position. Mr. Shilling representing the governor addressed a mass meeting yesterday afternoon. He said the governor would stand no more trifing and that if the mob was not brought to a speedy end in Spring Valley and negroes guaranteed their equal rights with the Italians the state troops would be ordered out at once. Sheriff Clark notified the mayor that he was ready to go with men whenever called upon to do so and also said that if some definite plans were not agreed upon at once he would organize an armed force, move to Spring Valley at once and take control of the town. Mayor Delmargo, in view of the way matters were shaping themselves, issued a proclamation announcing that the colored people were about to return to the city and called upon the people to protect every one in their rights regardless of race color or creed. Mr. Schilling told the mayor that he must agree to appoint ten colored policemen to protect their section of the city and forty-five white policemen in other quarters which the mayor promised to do. Everything is consequently quiet and the negroes will return. It is now believed the mines will resume operations.

ALLEGED ROBBERS.

An Assistant Postmaster and Three Other Men Under Arrest.

Kansas City, Mo., Aug. 9.—Four men, all of them prominent, were lodged in jail here late last night charged with robbing the Brookfield, Mo., post-office of $1,000 in February, 1894. They are W. S. Day, who was assistant postmaster at the time of the robbery; Henry Strode, J. E. Haveyly and Augustus Severey. Day was captured at East Liverpool, O., a few days ago, after a long search, while the others were arrested at Bevier, Mo., at about the same time. Their arrest is an important one, several other charges of robbery being laid at their doors.

THE NAVAL MANOEUVRES.

Further Delay in Assembling the North Atlantic Squadron.

Washington, Aug. 9.—Rear-Admiral Bunce will meet with another delay in getting together the ships of the north Atlantic squadron for the manoeuvres. It was expected that the Columbia would go into dock yesterday, but owing to the delay in taking out the Raleigh she will not be docked until Monday Secretary Herbert and Rear-Admiral Bunce conferred at Newport yesterday as to which ship of the north Atlantic squadron shall relieve the Atlanta at Key West. It is believed at the navy department that the Cincinnati or the Minneapolis will be chosen for the duty.

SCANDAL IN HIGH LIFE.

Mrs. Jacoby Wants Damages from Countess Cowley for Slander.

London, Aug. 9.—An action for damages for slander which commenced before Justice Hawkins in the high court of justice yesterday is exciting comment in society circles. Mrs. Jacoby, wife of the brother of J. A. Jacoby, M. P. for the middle district of Derbyshire, asks the court to award her damages against Countess Cowley, wife of the Earl of Cowley, who is alleged to have charged that Mrs. Jacoby was the writer of anonymous indecent letters that were circulated in 1893 in the Badminton district, the best known hunting district in the west of England.

ACQUITTAL OF COL. VAN CLEEF.

A Verdict Reached After Twenty-four Hours' Deliberation.

Trenton, N. J., Aug. 9.—The jury in the case of Col. John T. Van Cleef, ex-secretary of the state board of assessors, who was indicted for obtaining money from the state for maps under false pretences, after being out twenty-four hours came in with a verdict of not guilty. Van Cleef was in court and shook hands with the members of the jury. The jurors agreed not to say how they stood, but it is understood that they first stood nine for acquittal. The other indictments against Van Cleef will not be dismissed.

Rosa Gordon Acquitted.

Louisville, Aug. 9.—At Bourbonville, Ky., the jury in the Rosa Gordon murder trial returned a verdict of not guilty. Miss Gordon's plea was self-defense. She quarreled with Mary Sutherland aged 16, and Melissa Brown, aged 14, at Corbin about three weeks ago. She drew a knife and stabbed the Sutherland girl to the heart, killing her instantly. The Brown girl was seriously wounded.

THE OUTPUT OF GOLD

Officials Reticent on the Subject of the Reserve.

Believed in Some Quarters That the Treasury Is Uneasy—What Action the Syndicate Will Take Not Known—Next Week May See the Critical Period.

Washington, Aug. 9.—The reticence that prevails among treasury officials when they are approached on the subject of the condition of the gold reserve and their absolute refusal to offer any opinion as to what this outflow of gold of the past two weeks signifies, leads to the conclusion in some quarters that the treasury is uneasy about the situation. It is quite probable that by Saturday the syndicate will be compelled to prove whether it considers its contract fulfilled or whether is feels constrained to assist the government in maintaining the reserve. The rapid diminution of the reserve; the speedy descent from more than one hundred and seven millions to a very little margin over the amount the reserve is required to be, has shown how easy a raid, even under the guise of the ordinary course of business, can be conducted.

The Loss Is Felt.

Treasury officials are emphatic in their statement that this loss of gold is due to legitimate business and point to the character of the houses taking it out to show that it is not the result of speculation. Whatever may be the cause, the loss is felt and will be felt to a still greater extent before the week is ended. There was an intimation at the treasury that notice would be give before the day was closed off a withdrawal of export Saturday and officials do not hesitate to admit that the indications point to the further loss of the amount equal, if not greater, than that which was shipped on yesterday's steamer.

Loss of $4,500,000.

At the close of business yesterday afternoon the reserve stood at the $104,118,662 mark, a loss over Wednesday of $349,442. The one million shipped yesterday has not been reported to the treasury in the official balances from New York and will not therefore appear in the reports until this evening. The actual condition of the treasury then finds the reserve amounting to only $103,118,662. This shows a loss of four and a half millions since the syndicate made its last payment, July 5, and sent the reserve up to $107,569,208. The gold reserve was not nearly so low as on the 27th of July when the syndicate felt called upon to increase it. At that time the reserve had dwindled down to a little below one hundred and five and a half millions and by Monday it had been swelled to a little more than one hundred and seven and a quarr millions.

Doubt as to the Syndicate.

Some treasury officials who discuss the situation privately admit that unless the syndicate again steps in and fills the gap that has thus been made the public will be warranted in believing that the syndicate considers its contract to have been completed in its entirety and that it is no longer morally bound, if not by the disputed meaning of the text of the contract, to maintain the reserve. Acting Secretary Curtis said to-day that he did not know what the intentions of the syndicate were, but so far as the treasury situation was concerned he saw nothing in it now to justify any feeling of alarm.

May Be a Critical Period.

The gold that was going out was sent abroad in the payment of debts and within a few days treasury officials believe there will be a flow in this direction. Crops were beginning to move and the presence of commercial bills in New York, some of which were already on the street would loosen the tension and bring down the rate of exchange and stop the export of gold. There are some however in the treasury not so sanguine and many of these are beginning to look forward to the next week as a critical period, one that must show which way the tide will turn. Meanwhile the gold continues to go out and no official expression of the proper interpretation of the bond contract is made.

INCREASE OF IMMIGRANTS.

The Better Class of Italians Coming in Large Numbers.

New York, Aug. 9.—According to the figures given out by the immigration authorities 147,819 immigrants entered this port through Ellis island between January 1, 1895, and August 1. During the same period in 1894 the number was 112,028, showing an increase in the seven months of 35,791. Commissioner McSweeney said yesterday that a large percentage of the increase consited of the better class of Italians who are coming here in large numbers.

A BAT, NOT BURGLARS.

While Calling for Help, Miss Holland Plunges from a Window.

Philadelphia, Aug. 9.—Believing that burglars were in her home Eve Holland, aged 17 years, of No. 1939 North Twenty-second street, raised a third story window to call for aid and fell out. The girl was seriously injured. The noise which she and also her sister thought was due to robbers was caused by a bat that had flown in through an open window.

Murderer Burgess Captured.

Oswego, N. Y., Aug. 9.—Charles Burgess, the murderer of farmer Charles Whitlock, was captured last night seven miles from the scene of the murder by William Deal, a hired man of P. McGardis, who found him under the barn. Burgess surrendered on condition that he would be protected from mob violence and was taken to Auburn.

Grand Master Workman Sovereign has not declared the boycott off on national bank notes, but as yet, no glut of this particular article seems perceptible.

Senator Quay attributes much of his success to always answering letters, even from the most humble individual. Whether or not it contributes to one's success, it is a good trait to possess.

While respectable citizens are being waylaid and robbed in the vicinity of Rahway and New Brunswick, Plainfield people are resting in peace and security so far as any such bold crimes are concerned.

What the Daily Press said in reference to its being easy enough for an investigating committee to convict a man, while the court would find it very difficult, is exemplified in the acquital of Colonel Van Cleef. The political complexion of the jury was nine Republicans and three Democrats.

Secretary of State Kelsey is preparing a report of New Jersey's population. The returns for each census of 1895 are all in and it is expected the work of revision and tabulation will be finished by October 1st. A Peddler's Poor Aim.

Clara Buckle, the young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James F. Buckle, of 59 Westervelt avenue, met with a peculiar accident this morning.

She was playing about the yard when a Hebrew peddler went by. Mr. Buckle's dog ran out and barked at the man. He became excited, picked up a stone, and instead of it hitting the dog, as was intended, struck the little girl in the head. The injury was slight, but it might have been a serious one. The peddler went on his way unmolested.

Emphatically Denied.

The report in yesterday's issue of The Courier-News that the wages of sewer laborers had been reduced to one dollar by the contractors, is most emphatically denied. They say that most of their men get $1.50 per day, and if they can't earn $1.25 they don't want them.

The case of Welch against Kenney in tort, was adjourned today for one week.

A Long Day at the Sea.

These hot cultry days make the Hope chapel people long for Saturday, the day of their annual excursion to Asbury Park, and not only the 600 Hope chapelites, but all their friends, and that means most of Plainfield. They are all thinking of the cool breezes all day Saturday, and particularly Saturday evening. It will be long after sunset when the excursion returns. It is hard to leave the seashore at five or six o'clock, so Hope chapel will stay until five minutes to eight. What a chance for a long day at the sea.

They Were Disappointed.

Two tramps wanted a ride on a freight train yesterday, but Chief of Police Grant thought that they were better off under his care. They were caught at Greenbrook and taken before Judge Storms, of New Market, who gave them an invitation to make a twenty days' visit at the New Brunswick jail. They accepted and Officer Dougherty escorted them there.

Paid at Last.

Andrew McClelland was arrested for non-payment of taxes last evening, and taken from his dinner table to go to jail. But after the ticket was bought by the officer, he paid part of his tax, and gave security for the rest.

Tom Smith and George Saunders are planning a wheel ride to Asbury Park for Sunday.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer one hundred dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

CYCLING COMMENT.

Fred VanEps took a run on his wheel to Newark yesterday afternoon.

The latest thing in mud and dress guards are those made of aluminum. The Remington ladies wheel has them on.

L. A. Hummer, of Somerset street, went to Bound Brook on his wheel yesterday afternoon, He went on business.

Charles H. Angleman and Arthur H. Serrell went on their wheels to Boynton Beach this morning. They will spend the day in fishing.

Frank Kesselring, of Chatham street, is visiting at Princeton and Asbury Park. He goes on his wheel and will spend several days in this manner.

The father of five girls, all ardent wheelwomen, is authority for the statement that it costs $1.70 per month to keep a bicycle in perfect repair.—Evening Sun.

There is some talk in the west of forming a wheeling association for colored men. There is also a project on foot in Brooklyn to arrange a race meet for colored riders.

The annual road races of the Montclair Wheelmen will be held at Montclair tomorrow. The contests will consist of a one-mile novice, two-mile handicap, five mile club handicap, one-mile boys' race, two-mile tandem, and a two-mile handicap for colored men.

John S. Johnson was the first bicyclist to ride the mile inside of two minutes in the following different ways; the mile flying start, standing start, straightaway unpaced, standing competition, and flying competion. The first performance was done three years ago.—American Wheelman.

There was some fast riding done on Maltby's track yesterday. Howard Grobes was timed by three reputable men, and all their watches gave the time as two minutes and eighteen seconds. Peter Simms also rode a mile in 2:29. The match race between the two men comes off some day next week.

The American Wheelman secret lap race scheme is to be tried shortly in Boston. The scheme has met with the hearty approval of all the race promoters who have given it any thought, and it will, no doubt, become very popular during the coming season. A number of prominent racing officials discussed the plan at Asbury Park recently, and they all decided that it was an excellent one.—American Wheelman.

"The system of pacemaking," says one man, "in open bicycle events as now conducted does not always result to the equal advantage of all the competitors. Stringent rules rules should be at once adopted by the Racing Board to govern this phase of the sport. Pacemakers should be required to start from a given position much in advance of the one usually taken, so as to give every starter in the race an equal chance of 'hooking on,' and the pacemaking machine should in every instance be compelled to drop out at some specified point by the time the last quarter is reached. This would enable the bunch to put up a struggle in the straight for home on equal terms. As it is, if the pacemakers do not drop out, the man nearest them has an immense advantage, for few riders can develop a spurt that will land them ahead or on even terms with a tandem or quad."

Ladies Take a Hand.

Meeker, who will personally superintend the cleaning of the lecture room of the church, commencing next Thursday morning. This however, did not detain them long as they only caught two.

Marvelous Results.

From a letter written by Rev. J. Gunderman, of Dimondale, Mich., we are permitted to make this extract: "I have no hesitation in recommending Dr. King's New Discovery, as the results were almost marvelous in the case of my wife. While I was pastor of the Baptist Church at Rives Junction she was brought down with pneumonia succeeding la grippe. Terrible paroxysms of coughing would last hours with little interruption and it seemed as if she could not survive them. A friend recommended Dr. King's New Discovery; it was quick in its work and highly satisfactory in results." Trial bottles free at L. W. Randolph's drug store. Regular size 50c and $1.

"ONLY SKIN DEEP", yet freckles, sunburn and tan don't add to one's beauty! What then, aside from the dangerous and poisonous "skin cures" so freely advertised, can we use to clear and bleach a bad complexion? Well, why not try your grandmother's cure—lemon juice? It will surely do all that can be safely done to clear the skin. And try it in the pleasant form of REYNOLD'S LEMON JUICE AND GLYCERINE. The results will please you. Depew's Advice.

In his address at Vanderbilt University, Chauncey Depew said:

"No man until he is assured in some way of independence of the emoluments of office can afford to enter public life. The most lamentable wrecks which I have seen in thirty odd years since I graduated have been the men who have abandoned everything for the public service, only to be thrown out by the changes of politics and to find that their places in the professional and business world have been occupied by younger men, leaving them helpless and stranded."

Mr. Depew said he was tired of the talk about "rings" and "bosses," and adds:

"If the educated men of the country, who are ministers, lawyers, doctors, journalists, business men or farmers, would perform their duties in the primary school of the caucus we never would experience the despotism of the machine."

THE FUTURE OF WAR.

Modern Guns Will Necessitate a Change in Tactics.

The modern guns will make great changes in the art of war, and the plans employed in former campaigns by the great commanders will receive many modifications. Defensive battles will be at a premium, and defensive warfare will be simplified. Armies will maneuver for position, and the generals commanding them will gain fame by movements skillfully conducted to concentrate their scattered battalions at the proper time with the purpose of forcing an antagonist to give rather than to accept battle. If a campaign with a designated objective point is planned, and the strategy is offensive on the part of one of the commanders, if possible his tactics will be defensive. Hostile armies will keep at greater distances, and in open country out of sight of each other, unless they can take up a line at night and intrench; and direct flank movements will not be attempted where troops are visible before the assault. Field balloons will locate position, and photography mark the formation, of contending forces, while telephones and electricity will play prominent parts in the war drama. Night marching and night attacks will be more frequent, and columns of troops organized to charge stationary positions will be moved under darkness to close points, so that the charge at dawn will occupy the shortest time possible.

Raging battles will be fought by infantry and artillery, and one of the problems will be the protection of the horses that draw the guns. Temporary field works cannot shelter them, and unless hills afford protection they will perish in the leaden hail. Cavalry will not be employed on the main field of a battle, but on the flanks of armies, against cavalry. Cavalry chieftains will no longer assail infantry or artillery, and no more charges will be recorded like those of Ponsonby at Waterloo or Murat at Jena. This arm will still be effective in reconnaissances, picketing, guarding trains and as escorts, but except in small bodies its use for advance and rear guards will be diminished. The target presented is too large to be risked before field guns firing with great rapidity, even if several miles distant, as well as before infantry rifles incessantly flashing a mile away.

Maneuvering a cavalry corps with, say, 10,000 horses, on a future battlefield would be a high type of cruelty to animals; but the regiments, brigades and divisions composing it can still render good service. They can be moved with celerity long distances, and the troopers, except the horse-holders, can be dismounted and used as infantry, their modern carbines being nearly as effective as the magazine rifle of the infantrymen; but it will be most difficult to protect the horses while locating them in such a position as to reach their riders or be reached by them quickly, when necessary.

Perhaps the most interesting problem to be solved by those who organize armies in the future is the disposition and arrangement of the immense ammunition trains. The greedy guns must be fed, and great will be their rapacity. Next to the commanding general and his principal assistants will rank in importance the field chief of ordnance, who has the location of supply depots and the management of the transportation of large and small cartridges to the combatants. The continual replenishing of caisson and limber boxes, the smaller charges for infantry during actual conflict, and the safety and efficiency of vast trains where electric or steam roads cannot be constructed, will require a brave, enterprising, cool, vigilant officer of conspicuous ability and executive capacity.

The medical departments, too, must be reorganized and enlarged to convey the disabled to field hospitals, for field ambulances cannot be placed close to battle lines, and the numbers of the wounded will be greatly increased.

The great captains of future wars will be those who fully comprehend the destructive power of improved cannon and small arms, and whose calm and fertile intellect will grasp the importance of so maneuvering as to force the antagonist to give offensive battle, and who will never be without a "clear conception of the object to be achieved and the best way of achieving it." They will parry and fence like great swordsmen, but they will thrust only when the enemy rushes upon them.—Gen. Fitzhugh Lee in the Century.

Acknowledged His Error.

"Waldo," said Mrs. Bostone, "your mamma tells me that you called her a mean, stingy thing to-day."

"Yes, father, I did," replied the boy, with a sob.

"And don't you know it was very wrong of you to do so?"

"Yes, father. The words stingy and mean convey the same idea, and I was guilty of a bit of tautology of which I am heartily ashamed; but in the heat of my wrath at her refusal to bestow a second morsel of the pie on me I completely forgot all questions of rhetorical import."—Harper's Bazar.

The Way the World Goes.

Old Flinting—My boy, never be discouraged; don't halt at the foot of the hill; climb up! Climb! Climb unwearingly——

Young Flinting—Then what? No rest?

"No, no! Not until you reach the top of the hill——"

"Ah, I see! Then sweet, refreshing rest."

"Yes, you might sit down then, for you will see a fellow going down the other side with what you've been climbing after." — Cleveland Plaindealer.

MRS. STANFORD'S JEWELS.

The Costly Collection to be Sold for Stanford University.

The statement that Mr. Leland Stanford is about to sell her marvelous collection of jewels has revived interest in these famous gems. Mrs. Stanford, on several occasions, either at White House receptions or State dinners, wore such elegant jewels that it was generally supposed that Washington had seen the best of them. But the reverse is the truth.

After the death of her son, Mrs. Stanford preferred not to wear jewels, and when she did so it was because of her husband's desire, and then she selected the simplest ones. The others reposed in the darkness of her banker's vaults and were never brought to this city.

There are few more choice or extensive collections of gems owned by the royal families of the Old World. Their value is variously estimated at from one to two millions of dollars.

Mr. Stanford bought four sets of diamonds for his wife when the valuables of Queen Isabella of Spain were sold in Paris, and he paid upwards of $600,000 for the four. One set is of the kind known as blue diamonds, as they emit violet rays by day. Another set has pink rays in its stones. The third set is of yellow diamonds, as yellow as topaz, and the fourth set is of flawless white stones. Each set has a tiara or necklace, pendant, brooch, earrings, from four to six bracelets and some finger rings, all of the same style of make and of corresponding stones.

In addition to these Mrs. Stanford has some genuine black diamonds, cut pear shaped, and numerous other diamond ornaments in a variety of styles. One necklace (not belonging to any of the sets above named) is valued at $100,000, and its pendants at $30,000. This was manufactured to order, and consists of large colored diamonds intermixed with small white stones, sapphires, rubbies, and emeralds, all of the purest water. A band of large yellow diamonds encircles the throat, each set in a smaller white stone. Beneath this band is placed a floriated design in small white diamonds and colored stones, extending in deep points. Between each of these points is suspended an immense yellow diamond, set in white diamonds and attached to the upper part of the necklace by a ruby, emerald, or sapphire. There are five of these pendants, the central one being the largest and having once figured in the collection of the Duke of Brunswick.

This magnificent ornament is accompanied by a comb, a brooch, and earrings to match, and the necklace itself can be converted into pins, hair ornaments, etc., while the upper row of diamonds can be worn as a necklace without the pendant and the pointed floriated band.

Mrs. Stanford has also over sixty diamond finger rings, and many more diamonds in monograms on books, purses and card cases.

But for the litigation by which the Stanford estate is now tied up $2,500,000 would have been available for immediate use in the Stanford University, and Mrs. Stanford will, it is stated, sell her jewels to meet the present emergency.

Uncle Sam's Money and Mails.

There were 189,576 miles of telegraph line in the country in 1892, carrying 739,105 miles of wire. The number of messages exceeded 62,000,000, or nearly as many as the people. The average charges per message was 31.6 cents, and the profits were enormous in and between the great cities, but elsewhere there was often a decided loss.

The Bell-telephones in use numbered 512,477, with 265,546 miles of wire, 216,017 subscribers, $5,127,000 gross earnings, and $1,220,000 dividends for the parent Bell Telephone Company alone, and $80,000,000 capital for it and ten subsidiary companies, largely in franchise.

In 1891 there were 9,662 miles of street railway, and in 1892 there were 385 electric roads of all sorts, with a capital of $155,000,000, operating 3,980 miles of road.

The mail service in 1892 included 67,119 Post Offices, most of them petty, with 447,591 miles of post routes. The receipts were $71,000,000 and the expenses 76,000,000, the deficit thus being 5,000,000. The mail handled was 7,865,000,000 pieces, surpassing the record of any country, not excepting Great Britain.

The total amount of circulating media used in the United States in the year 1891 was $1,175,000,000, and that the amount in the Treasury would, if added, increase this to $2,014,000,000. The first amount, the money in circulation, consisted of $407,000,000 in gold, $59,000,000 in silver, and $58,000,000,000 in fractional silver. The balance was paper money.

The coinage in 1890 was $20,700,000 gold, $39,200,000 silver, and $1,400,000 minor silver pieces. The total amount of gold coin minted for the hundred year ending with 1892 was $1,582,000,000; of silver, $657,000,000; of minor coins, $24,000,000.

The national banks in 1891 numbered 3,677, with a capital of $967,400,000, and resources amounting to $3,218,000,000. The savings banks numbered 1,011, with 4,533,217 depositors; total deposits of 1,623,000,000, averaging $358 to each depositor, and total assets of $1,885,000,000.

ONE KIND OF MODELS.

Their Business is to Display Good Clothes.

There are hundreds of young women in New York who make their living as models; one authority says that there are more than a thousand; which estimate leads to the conclusion that good looks are not scarce on the island of Manhattan, for these young women owe success entirely to their fine physique. The models here alluded to are not those who sit to artists, and whose charms are transferred to canvas, but those who try on suits, silk waists, jackets, cloaks and capes for the benefit of the customers in the stores and dressmaking establishments.

The more exclusive and expensive of the uptown women's tailors all employ models to display their gowns. The best firms in the shopping districts have them, but the great majority of models find occupation in the big wholesale houses in middle and lower Broadway, a number of firms in that vicinity employing as many as a dozen the whole year round. The average downtown model is paid from $12 to $15 a week, but an unusually pleasing subject may command as high as $18. Those in the big retail establishments who combine the office of a model with that of a saleswoman get $20.

The available model must measure thirty-six inches about the bust and twenty-three or twenty-four around the waist, her height being in proportion, the trying on of gowns and cloaks for women built on a less liberal plan being intrusted to the misses' models; that is, to unformed girls fourteen or fifteen years old.

"I think our work is much to be preferred to that of the ordinary salesgirls," said a handsome model of the brunette type, employed in a large suit and cloak house in Broadway, a concern which is said to be the largest of its kind in the world. "Our hours are shorter, and for months at a time there is scarcely anything to do. Of course the very busy months are busy indeed, but we are treated with the greatest respect, and we always get of at half past 5 the year round. Some of the firms in town lay off many of their models as soon as business gets slack, but this firm never does; our salary goes on just the same, whether there is much or nothing doing. We are always certain of our vacation of two weeks, and certain of our pay during that time. Of course, if a girl wants a longer vacation she has to pay for the extra time."

"Do you have to dress in any prescribed style?" inquired one interested in the subject.

"Oh, yes! We are required to dress in black; all of us; just a simple, tight-fitting waist, and a good style, plain skirt. You mustn't judge of our uniform by the way we look this morning," she added, glancing at her companion. "But as there is very little doing this month, we are permitted to wear cotton waists, they being cooler and more convenient," and she adjusted a stud in her blue-striped shirt waist. "August is our busy time," she continued, "and we will be busier than ever this year on account of so many of the dry-goods houses beginning to deal in furs."

"You try on the furs and cloaks?"

"Yes, and that is warm and tiresome work when the thermometer is in the nineties."

"How long do you have to keep the garments on?"

"Oh, sometimes the buyer does not know just what he wants and we must await his decision, or try a number of garments to see how he likes them; then again, in ten minutes a man will buy a quantity of goods, and we will be released. In the winter, in February, when everybody is cloaked up and wearing heavy clothing, we adopt tight-fitting jerseys and try on thin, unlined summer costumes for the next season's trade. Trying on the thin things in winter, though, isn't as bad as cloaking up in heavy suits in summer."—New York Tribune.

Bryant's Early Pecuniary Rewards.

It is amusing to know how small were the pecuniary rewards of Bryant's literary labors, whatever may have been the fame they brought him. Two dollars a poem was the price that he named, and he seemed to be abundantly satisfied with the terms. A gentleman met him in New York many years after and said to him:

"I have just bought the earliest edition of your poems, and gave twenty dollars for it."

"More, by a long shot," replied the poet, "than I received for writing the whole work."—Century.

Circuses Will Skip This Town.

Oxford, N.Y., is bound to go down in the annals of circus history as the worst in the United States. A few days ago a wagon circus after liberal advertising by posters pitched its tents in this village, and although the band chariot made a tour through the streets not a person visited the circus during the afternoon or evening. The circus men say that they never before experienced such a chilly experience.

A Compromise.

It was in an absent-minded sort of way that she read the sign "Ice Cream."

"Oh, ah! ice cream," said he. "Did you ever read that there were deadly ptomaines in ice cream."

"Yes," she said, a little spitefully. "Did you ever read of the microbes in kissing?"

On reflection he concluded to compromise on a basis of present cream and future kisses.—Indianapolis Journal.

We propose to clean those clothes—or to dye them for you—either way to make them wearable. This is an economical suggestion.

We take out grease spots so they stay out, or we dye clothes with a color that wears. We charge as little as possible for the work.

CHAPTER VI.—THE REVELATION.

Wednesday, continued.—When Mr. Dix thus suggested to me the absurd possibility that Phoebe Dole had committed the murder, he and I were sitting in the kitchen. He was near the table; he laid a sheet of paper upon it, and began to write. The paper is before me.

"First," said Mr. Dix, and he wrote as he talked, "whose arm is of such length that it might unlock and lock a certain door of this house from the outside? Phoebe Dole's.

"Second, who had in her piece-bag bits of the same threads and ravelings found upon your parlor floor, where she had not by your knowledge entered? Phoebe Dole.

"Third, who interested herself most strangely in your blood-stained green silk dress, even to dyeing it? Phoebe Dole.

"Fourth, who was caught in a lie, while trying to force the guilt of the murder upon an innocent man? Phoebe Dole."

Mr. Dix looked at me. I had gathered myself together. "That proves nothing," I said. "There is no motive in her case."

"There is a motive."

"What is it?"

"Maria Woods shall tell you this afternoon."

He then wrote:

"Fifth, who was seen to throw a bundle down the old well, in the rear of Martin Fairbanks' house, at 1 o'clock in the morning? Phoebe Dole."

"Was she—seen?" I gasped. Mr. Dix nodded. Then he wrote:

"Sixth, who had a strong motive, which had been in existence many years ago? Phoebe Dole."

Mr. Dix laid down his pen and looked at me again. "Well, what have you to say?" he asked.

"It is impossible!"

"Why?"

"She is a woman."

"A man could have fired that pistol, as she tried to do."

"It would have taken a man's strength to kill with the kind of weapon that was used," I said.

"No, it would not. No great strength is required for such a blow."

"But she is a woman!"

"Crime has no sex."

"But she is a good woman, a church member. I heard her pray yesterday afternoon. It is not in character."

"It is not for you, nor for me, nor for any mortal intelligence to know what is, or is not in character," said Mr. Dix.

He arose and went away. I could only stare at him in a half dazed manner.

Maria Woods came this afternoon, taking advantage of Phoebe's absence on a dressmaking errand. Maria has aged ten years in the last few weeks. Her hair is white, her cheeks are fallen in, her pretty color is gone.

"Say I have the ring—he gave me—forty years ago?" she faltered.

I gave it to her; she kissed it, and sobbed like a child. "Phoebe took it away from me before," she said, "but she sha'n't this time."

Maria related with piteous little sobs the story of her long subordination to Phoebe Dole. This sweet, child-like woman had always been completely under the sway of the other's stronger nature. The subordination went back beyond my father's original proposal to her; she had, before he made love to her as a girl, promised Phoebe she would not marry, and it was Phoebe who had, by representing to her that she was bound by this solemn promise, led her to write the letter to my father declining his offer, and sending back the ring.

"And after all, we were going to get married, if he had not—died," she said. "He was going to give me this ring again, and he had had the other date put in. I should have been so happy!"

She stopped and stared at me with horror-stricken inquiry.

"What was Phoebe doing out in your back yard at 1 o'clock that night?" she cried.

"What do you mean?" I returned.

"I saw Phoebe come out of your back shed door at 1 o'clock that very night. She had a bundle in her arms. She went along the path about as far as the old well; then she stooped down and seemed to be working at something. When she got up she didn't have the bundle. I was watching at our back door. I thought I heard her go out a little while before, and went down stairs, and found that door unlocked. I went in quick, and up to my chamber, and into my bed, when she started home across the field. Pretty soon I heard her come in; then I heard the pump going. She slept down stairs; she went on to her bed-room. What was she doing in your back yard that night?"

"You must ask her," said I. I felt my blood running cold.

"I've been afraid to," moaned Maria Woods. "She's been dreadful strange lately. I wish that book agent was going to stay at our house."

Maria Woods went home in about an hour. I got a ribbon for her, and she has my poor father's ring concealed in her withered bosom. Again, I cannot believe this.

Thursday.—It is all over; Phoebe Dole has confessed! I do not know now in exactly what way Mr. Dix brought it about—how he accused her of her crime. After breakfast I saw them coming across the field. Phoebe came first, advancing with rapid strides like a man; Mr. Dix followed, and my father's poor old sweetheart tottered behind, with her handkerchief at her eyes. Just as I noticed them the front door bell rang; I found several people there, headed by the high sheriff. They crowded into the sitting-room, just as Phoebe Dole came rushing in, with Mr. Dix and Maria Woods.

"I did it!" Phoebe cried out to me. "I am found out, and I have made up my mind to confess. She was going to marry your father—I found it out. I stopped it once before. This time I knew I couldn't, unless I killed him. She's lived with me in that house for over forty years. There are other ties as strong as the marriage one, that are just as sacred. What right had he to take her away from me and break up my home?

"I overheard your father and Rufus Bennett having words. I thought folks would think he did it. I reasoned it all out. I had watched your cat go in that little door. I knew the shed door unhooked, I knew how long my arm was; I thought I could undo it. I stole over here a little after midnight. I went all round the house to be sure nobody was awake. Out in the front yard I happened to think my shears were tied on my belt with a ribbon, and I untied them.

I thought I put the ribbon in my pocket—it was a piece of yellow ribbon—but I suppose I didn't, because they found it afterwards, and thought it came off your young man's whip.

"I went round to the shed door, unhooked it and went in. The moon gave light enough. I got out your father's overalls from the kitchen closet; I knew where they were. I went through the sitting-room to the parlor. In there I slipped off my dress and my skirts and put on the overalls. I put a handkerchief over my face, leaving only my eyes exposed. I crept out then into the sitting-room; there I pulled off my shoes and went into the bed-room.

"Your father was fast asleep; it was such a hot night the clothes were thrown back and his chest was bare. The first thing I saw was that pistol on the stand beside his bed. I suppose he had had some fear of Rufus Bennett coming back after all. Suddenly I thought I'd better shoot him. It would be surer and quicker; and if you were aroused I knew that I could get away and everybody would suppose he had shot himself.

"I took up the pistol and held it close to his head. I had never fired a pistol, but I knew how it was done. I pulled, but it would not go off. Your father stirred a little—I was mad with terror—

"I SHOULD HAVE TO DO THE SAME TO YOU."

I struck at his head with the pistol. He opened his eyes and cried out; then I dropped the pistol and took these"—Phoebe Dole pointed to the great sling shears hanging at her waist—"for I am strong in my wrists. I only struck twice, over his heart.

"Then I went back into the sitting-room. I thought I heard a noise in the kitchen—I was full of terror then—and slipped into the sitting-room closet. I felt as if I were fainting, and clutched the shelf to keep from falling.

"I felt that I must go up stairs to see if you were asleep—to be sure you had not waked up when your father cried out. I thought if you had I should have to do the same by you. I crept up stairs to your chamber. You seemed asleep, but as I watched you stirred a little. But instead of striking at you I slipped into your closet. I heard nothing more from you. I felt myself wet with blood. I caught hold of something hanging in your closet, and wiped myself off with it. I knew by the feeling it was your green silk. You kept quiet and I saw you were asleep, so I crept out of the closet and down the stairs, got my clothes and shoes, and, out in the shed, took off the overalls and dressed myself. I rolled up the overalls and took a board away from the old well and threw them in as I went home. I thought if they were found it would be no clue to me. The handkerchief, which was not much stained, I put to soak that night and washed out next morning before Maria was up. I washed my hands and arms carefully that night, and also my shears.

"I expected Rufus Bennett would be accused of the murder, and maybe hung. I was prepared for that, but I did not like to think I had thrown suspicion upon you by staining your dress. I had nothing against you. I made up my mind I'd get hold of that dress before anybody suspected you and dye it black. I came in and got it, as you know. I was astonished not to see any more stains on it. I only found two or three little streaks, that scarcely anybody would have noticed. I didn't know what to think. I suspected, of course, that you had found the stains and got them off, thinking they might bring suspicion upon you.

"I did not see how you could possibly suspect me, in any case. I was glad when your young man was cleared. I had nothing against him. That is all I have to say."

"THAT IS ALL I HAVE TO SAY.

I think I must have fainted away then. I cannot describe the dreadful calmness with which that woman told this—that woman with the good face whom I had last heard praying like a saint in meeting. I believe in demoniacal possession after this.

When I came to the neighbors were around me, putting camphor on my head, and saying soothing things to me, and the old friendly faces had returned. But I wish I could forget!

They have taken Phoebe Dole away—I only know that. I cannot bear to talk any more about it. When I think there must be a trial, and I must go!

Henry has been over this evening. I suppose we shall be happy after all, when I have had a little time to get over this. He says I have nothing to worry about. Mr. Dix has gone home. I hope Henry and I may be able to repay his kindness some day.

* * * * * * *

A month later.—I have just heard that Phoebe Dole has died in prison! This is my last entry. May God help all other innocent women in hard straits as He has helped me.

(The end.)

More Work for Jerseymen.

The Tollwick Manufacturing Company, of New York, has leased the old Carteret Brick Works, which have lain idle for nearly five years and are thoroughly repairing the works, which will be used to manufacture underground conduits for electric wires. The works are close to the Carteret Station, and when in operation again will furnish steady employment for 150 or 200 hands, as the Tollwick Company has obtained a big contract which will take a couple of years, it is said, to finish. The industry will be quite an acquisition to Carteret.

HOW AN ADVERTISEMENT SAVED A WOMAN'S LIFE.

[SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.]

"For four years I suffered with female troubles. I was so bad that I was compelled to have assistance from the bed to the chair. I tried all the doctors and the medicines that I thought would help me.

"One day, while looking over the paper, I saw the advertisement of your Vegetable Compound. I thought I would try it. I did so, and found relief. I was in bed when I first began to take the Compound. After taking four bottles, I was able to be up and walk around, and now I am doing my housework. Many thanks to Mrs. Pinkham for her wonderful Compound. It saved my life."—MRS. HATTIE MADAUS, 184 North Clark Street, Chicago, Ill.

REBUILDING THE FERRIS WHEEL.

The Monarch of the Midway Again to Be an Attraction in Chicago.

The big Ferris Wheel, which everybody who even so much as heard of the Chicago World's Fair knows all about, and which everybody who visited the Fair remembers with a vast amount of interest, after being housed in small sections for a year or more, is again to be set up in the Windy City to afford Chicagoans a chance to get above their atrocious atmosphere and have an occasional glimpse of the sun. There have been all sorts of suggestions of a new site for the wheel, and some negotiations looking toward its purchase as an attraction for various summer resorts. At one time it was almost settled that it was to be set up at Coney Island. But these various schemes fell through, and finally the company owning it, and which operated it during the fair, has decided to re-erect the wheel in Chicago as the leading feature of a new excursion resort on the northern outskirts of the city.

Several notable copies of the big wheel have been built in Europe, and one that eclipses the Midway giant in the mere matter of height is an attraction at the Empire of India Exhibition now running at Earl's Court, London. But none of the imitations has eclipsed, if even equaled, the Ferris Wheel as a triumph of clever designing and engineering. The absolute perfection of the gigantic structure in its every part and as a whole is being made more evident in the rebuilding than seemed apparent at its first setting up. The solid steel axle, measuring thirty-three inches in diameter and weighing fifty-six tons, retains its pre-eminence as the largest steel casting ever made.

THINGS HAD CHANGED.

The Old Man Had Been Away From New York for a Time.

The old man had been away doing the Continent and had just returned, as was evident from the foreign hotel "stickers" on the bag he carried. He was evidently in a hurry, too, for he came around the corner with a rush that carried him full tilt into the broad expanse of a roundsman coming the other way.

"Gosh! Whoop! Beg pardon——" the old man began. "Excuse me! Carelessness itself, I'm sure. I hope——"

The resplendent cap was lifted politely as the officer courteously interrupted him.

"Don't mention it, sir. I beg your pardon sincerely. It was my own fault."

The old man's jaw fell and he slunk away as though in sudden alarm as the officer, with a profound bow, passed on.

"Gosh!" he muttered feebly, "this sun is pretty hot, and I guess my hearing isn't what it used to be. But that hat certainly went up! And he didn't even hunch me—not a hunch. Do I look like Byrnes? Something's wrong!"

A policeman stood mopping his face on the corner and the old man approached him with the air of one in painful doubt.

"He can't do any more than run me in," he said to himself, "and if I've got a sunstroke I may as well find it out."

"Very warm day," he observed casually, in a tone that was meant to be unconcerned, but which to the close observer would have betrayed a hideous fear.

The officer did not seem to notice it.

"It is, sir," he replied courteously, "very warm indeed! I hope, however, that it may be cooler to-morrow."

The old man staggered back against a lamppost.

"Mad!" he murmured. "Mad as a March hare! Oh, why did they let me off the ship!"

"Officer," he said desperately, as one who dares all in a final throw, "officer, come in and have a drink with me, will you?"

The officer gazed searchingly at the old man. He noticed his pitiful agitation and he winked softly to himself.

"No, I thank you; I never drink, Mr. Roosevelt," he answered.

But the old man did not hear the name. The final shock of the negation was too much for his shattered nerves. He had fallen, a lifeless heap, upon the pavement.—Truth.

The Hearty Hospitality of the West.

"The people in the East," says Mr. John P. Miller, who has just returned from a trip through the West, "do not know what broad, open-hearted hospitality means. It takes the experience of a trip through the Northwest to learn how much one man can do for another. I never saw anything like it. The mere fact that I came from Washington in itself was frequently the open sesame to everything. If I knew some one who knew some one else, and he in turn knew the man I was talking to, there was nothing in the town too good for me. One gentleman to whom I was introduced out in a Montana town did not think it too much trouble to drive me around to several places I had to visit, and yet he and I were total strangers until we were introduced an hour before. Another gentleman whose name I did not even learn presented me with a flask of the finest whisky, while a hotel keeper, who happened to hear that I wanted to meet a prominent citizen of the town, sent three of his bellboys out to hunt up the man and bring him to the hotel. I could tell instance after instance of the hospitality of the Western people, and I am willing to bet that my experience could not be duplicated in the East if I were to travel for a thousand years."—Washington Post.

BERKSHIRE PEOPLE.

Spiritual and Intellectual Forces Strong Among Them.

And this region, so favored by nature, owes much of its character and interest to its history as well. Settled later than the seacoast, the western part of the State was in its beginnings made up of more varied elements than the eastern. From the valley of the Connecticut Colonists pushed through the mountain gaps into that of the Housatonic; the hills attracted settlers from the flat and sandy lands of Cape Cod; while the Dutch from New York have left in name and character their impress upon the Berkshire people of to-day. Spiritual and intellectual forces were largely prominent in the laying of its foundations, and such forces have contributed and continued their influences ever since.

Missionary zeal, represented by such names as Eliot and Sargeant, founded Stockbridge. Jonathan Edwards here spent the years which represented the prime and fullness of his powers. Ephraim Williams, the fighter in the French and Indian war, dying on the battlefield, left his fortune to plant and endow the college which bears his name.

Mark Hopkins, Berkshire born and bred, another Arnold of Rugby, set his stamp upon a whole generation; throughout its history, soldiers, saints and scholars have both represented and impressed its life. The reasonings of Jonathan Edwards, which for good and evil have had so great an influence upon theological thought, found their most powerful expression in his treatise on the will, which was written while he lived in Stockbridge.

Lenox heard the last public utterances of Channing; his successor, Orville Dewey, born a hundred years ago (1794) at Sheffield, long made that place his home; and there, too, were born the two Barnards, one the president of Columbia College, the other the soldier-scholar of our Civil war.

Oliver Wendell Holmes lived for years at Pittsfield. Catharine Maria Sedgwick drew around her at Stockbridge and Lenox a distinguished circle of the best literary society of our own country, and many cultivated wanderers from the old world.

Fanny Kemble here made for years her home. Longfellow, Lowell, Hawthorne, Herman Melville, Beecher, G. P. R. James, George William Curtis, Matthew Arnold and others lingered among and loved the beauties of these hills, where plain living and high thinking have found noble expression in the past, and where here and there they still survive, in spite of the inflowing tide of wealth and luxury that floods the Berkshire of to-day.—Century.

A Camphor Famine.

The greater portion of our camphor comes from China and Japan. Before the war it was cheap, but as soon as hostilities were begun the price went up. With the close of the war the manufacturers thought camphor had reached its top price and must recede, so they did not increase their stocks. But it turned out that they were wrong, and those who delayed buying had to pay a higher figure for camphor, the price of which, like that of everything else, is regulated by the relation of demand to supply. Camphor costs to-day from £7 to £8 per case of hundredweight; but a few years ago the price touched £9, and at a former period even reached £20. There is no reason why the price should not advance beyond the very moderate figure it stands at now, which is not excessive compared with what it was in former years. Camphor is dearer in China to-day than in London, a case that costs £7 16s. here being sold in China for £9.

It would appear, therefore, that there is less camphor in England to-day than is necessary to meet the requirements of the manufacturers; and when the Continental buyers begin to purchase heavily, it is more than likely that camphor may fetch £12 or perhaps even £14 a case. A good deal of camphor is held by a syndicate, who will, it is understood, sell to manufacturers at a moderate price sufficient camphor to carry on their business. But speculators who have sold camphor they did not have and could not obtain, will suffer.

A Cat's Sorrow.

A rather pathetic cat story comes from the down river suburbs. Little Pearl Kelch, the daughter of Mr. Enos Kelch, has a large pet cat which has slept for many months in a basket by her side.

About a week ago the child was taken by her mother to Nebraska. They left in the morning before the cat was up, and Pearl's little nightgown was left in a heap on the floor. When the cat missed the child it went to the little gown and laid itself on it, and has refused to leave it, save at short intervals, ever since. The other members of the family have not had the heart to take the garment away from the disconsolate cat.—Cincinnati Tribune.

Paternal Grief.

"Augh-Wagh!"

It was the baby. He had repeated the remark sixty times in the last hour.

Mr. Newleigh's hair, such as it was, stood on end.

"Gwow ahwd wowbdgwow filwaugf!" added the baby, while people living across the street got up and closed their windows.

Mr. Newleigh ground his teeth."

"To think," he groaned, burying his head in the pillows, "that I should grow up to become the father of a Union Station train crier."—Rockland Tribune.

Though Cruel Separation Comes.

"Don't cry so bitterly, darling," said the policeman to the weeping fair one, "I can't help it."

A tender heart beat under his blue coat, and he murmured:

"Even though I am removed to another beat, sweetest, fortune, I trust, will be kind to me; so wipe away your tears. I will meet another cook, and I will remember to love her, if only for your sake."—Harlem Life.

CAMP WOLF.

A Worthy Cause That Appeals to the Charitable People.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—Riding on my wheel the other day and passing through Westfield I bethought me of a promise made to my friend, Rev. Mr. Fox, of New York, to visit Camp Wolf. So turning into Summit avenue I went a little beyond the school-house and there found what I consider a very worthy institution.

Mr. Fox finds many a weary mother and child to whom a fortnight's sojourn in the country would be a benefit as well as pleasure; widows who know hardly any cessation from toil; children who are starving for fresh pure air; wives whose domestic duties are too often increased by a drunken husband.

Such are the people from whom he makes his selection, on the score of need, and without reference to nationality or religious beliefs. These poor women and children are housed, given an abundance of good substantial food and once a day assembled to enjoy a religious service.

After a fortnight's stay they return to the city, and their places are filled by others. The good people of Westfield have put up a good frame dormitory, capable of lodging about seventy people.

All this work is carried on by voluntary contributions, and I make bold to urge upon the good people of Plainfield to assist these friends. If you are riding out, stop and visit the camp, and you will be rewarded by what you will see and hear.

Take provisions or the cash with you; if you cannot go, leave your contributions with G. Q. Packer on Park avenue, and they will be forwarded. Six dollars will support the camp for a day. By so doing you will gladden the life of some hard-worked woman or pinched child, and receive the recognition of Him who said "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of these little ones ye have done it unto Me." Rev. C. R. Barnes.

Rev. Mr. Schenck in Better Health.

Rev. Cornelius Schenck, wife and two boys, Cornelius, Jr., and Harold, left this morning for Spruceton, Greene county, N. Y., where they expect to remain till the last of August. His health is better than when he first left, and his many friends hope a complete rest in the mountains will make him strong enough to resume his pulpit in September.

Union County Directory.

The new Union County Directory is being canvassed for, and will be out in about three weeks. It will include the cities of Rahway, Plainfield, Elizabeth, and the townships of Union county. It is published by Heidingsfeld & Mulholland, offices in New York and New Brunswick.

Park Club Whisters.

A very enjoyable game of duplicate whist was played at the Park club Thursday between Rogers and Howell of the Parks and Beebe and Perkins of Westfield. The former won by one point. Some very interesting games may be looked for at this place in a few weeks.

More Improvements.

Samuel Drier is planning to build a store at the corner of New and West Front streets. There are to be two dwelling houses erected next door also. Work is now commenced and the trees, which are in the way, are being cut down.

Too Strong.

A young man came in Sebring's store yesterday and leaned upon the glass top of the show-case. There was a loud crash and the young fellow's elbow went down. A new pane of glass was put in immediately.

Sunday-school to Go to Boynton.

The Sunday-school of the First Church of Christ will enjoy their excursion to Boynton Beach next Tuesday. They will go by stage, leaving the chapel at 7:30 in the morning.

Courts Suspend Business.

The Union County courts have suspended business until September 1st, and the judges, with their families, are enjoying a vacation at the mountains or seashore.

Now an Incorporated Body.

At the meeting of Paugh-Caugh-Naugh-Sinque Tribe, I. O. R. M., last Wednesday evening, H. C. Runyon reported that he had incorporated the tribe according to instructions.

In order to introduce Chamberlain's Cough Remedy here we sold several dozen bottles on strict guarantee and have found every bottle did good service. We have used it ourselves and think it superior to any other. W. I. Mowrey, Jarvisville, W. Va. For sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves; T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

WILL THEY TRY AGAIN?

A Cow Fight Is Developing Into an Exciting Suit.

There is going to be a lively time at Justice Huff's court in Dunellen next Friday when the case of Harriet Mallison vs. Samuel Pyatt comes up. The case was set for last Thursday but was then postponed eight days on account of the illness of Justice Huff.

A young man, who lives near Miss Mallison and saw the entire affair, is about the most important witness and last Wednesday he was arrested and taken six miles to Justice Wood, of Metuchen, to answer to the charge of shooting Pyatt's cow. As there was no evidence against him he was released. But Thursday, the day of the trial, the constable appeared again and arrested the lad the second time. Despite his protest against being taken so far away when Justice Huff lived about a mile away, he was again carried over to Justice Wood on the charge of threatening to shoot Pyatt's daughter and again he was discharged.

A Yachting Party.

A very congenial party consisting of Elston French, William French, David Lenox, A. L. C. Marsh, and Fred Daboll will leave town for an enjoyable trip of two weeks. They have secured a yacht, and will spend the time in cruising on Long Island Sound.

Tracey Gets Off.

Bernard Tracey was arrested by Constable Taynor yesterday and taken before Justice Crosley. There being no one present to make a complaint, the Justice released him.

AT THE NETHERWOOD.

A Progressive Euchre Party—Season at Its Height.

The progressive Euchre party at the Hotel Netherwood last evening was participated in by a large number of the guests, the following handsome prizes being awarded: Ladies first prize, gold buckle belt, won by Mrs. Barcklay; second ladies prize, Dresden hair pin, won by Mrs. Rodrignez; ladies consolation, Miss Steenworth, a gold belt pin; gentlemen's first prize, silver handled umbrella, won by Mr. Finnegan; second prize, silver pocket knife, won by Mr. Stevens; gentleman's consolation perpetual calander, awarded to Mr. Plass.

The present season is one unsurpassed socialy, the young ladies being particulary attractive, as are also a number of young matrons. Among the young ladies Miss E. V. Pitman, of Brooklyn, N. Y., an ellegant and graceful girl, is a general favorite.

Under the able management of Mr. John Spitler the Hotel is gaining in popularity daily.

Chief Clerk Hightower is a genial personality, never ruffled or aggravating, and very popular with the guests.

AFTER THE TRUNK.

Martin Did Not Recognize Any of the Wagons.

"The Case of the Stolen Trunk" would make a good title for another adventure of Sherlock Holmes, buut unless Sherlock Holmes or some other expert appears, it seems very likely that the trunk stolen from the station will never be found. Yesterday Chief of Police Grant and Constable Rymar, of Mount Bethel, went to Berkeley Heights, accompanied by Ed Martin, to see if Martin could recognize any of the vehicles in that place as the one which carted away the missing trunk. The search proved fruitless, but the police have not given up the chase and hope to get it yet.

An Evening of Pleasure.

A very enjoyable children's party was given by Miss Lucile Simmonds, of Watchung avenue, to a number of her young companions last evening. Games formed the principal part of the evening's pleasure while at the close dainty refreshments were served.

Miss Mary Simmonds and Miss Josephine Simmonds assisted in entertaining the guests.

Among those present were Miss Margaret Simpson, Miss Alice Chamberlin, Miss Bessie Bowen, Miss Brieton, of Elizabeth, Miss Dumont, of Finderne, LeRoy Wheeler, William Beale, Charles King, and Clarence Mills.

Bright Little Runaway.

A three year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Jule Stephany, of 108 Summit avenue, strayed away from home this morning. He was found at the corner of Park avenue and Second street by Chief Grant. When the Chief asked where he lived he replied, "In a house, see!" He was taken to Garret Q. Packer's furniture store, where Mr. Packer succeeded in learning his name.

The latter then took him home when he met the boy's mother looking for him.

Last of The Season.

The last excursion of the season to Asbury Park is Franklin Council, Jr. O. U. A. M., on Thursday, August 15th. Trains leave Plainfield at 7:45, returning from Asbury Park at 9 p. m., giving three hours longer at the shore than any other excursion of the season. The Independent Fife and Drum Corps has been engaged to accompany the Order from this city. President Cleveland and Governor Werts has been invited to review the parade.

A Severe Talking To.

George Summers, the fifteen-year-old boy, who shot Sherman Haberle in the jaw on Wednesday, was taken before Justice Crosley this morning by Chief Vanhorn. The Justice gave him a severe talking and reprimanded him for what he done. He was then released.

Too Much.

Drunk and disorderly was the charge preferred against John Hagerty, of Westfield, and Wm. Wilson, better known as "Packer," this morning. They were both released and ordered to appear before Judge Coddington on Monday.

My boy was taken sick with a disease resembling bloody flux. The first thing I thought of was Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. Two doses of it settled the matter and cured him sound and well. I heartily recommend this remedy to all persons suffering from a like complaint. I will answer any inquiries regarding it when stamp is inclosed. I refer to any county official as to my reliability. Wm. Roach, J. P., Primroy, Campbell Co., Tenn. TURNED UP AFTER THIRTY YEARS.

Photographer Thorn Runs Across a Reminder of a Disastrous Fire.

G. Thorn, the East Front street photographer, has just finished a very beautiful and lifelike platinotype picture of the father and mother of Collector H. N. Spencer.

A remarkable coincidence in connection with the picture is the fact that the plate from which the picture has been produced, is almost thirty years old. It was made in September, 1866, and in 1869, three years after, Mr. Thorn's photograph gallery was destroyed by fire, and out of nearly 9,000 negatives or plates stored away in his gallery, only about 400 were carried out by the firemen and citizens, and the plate of Mr. Spencer's father and mother proved to be one of the 400 saved. Mr. Spencer is greatly pleased at this piece of good luck, and the very excellent picture produced by Mr. Thorn.

IT WILL SOON BE BUILT.

Traction Company Officials Viewed the Road From Plainfield to Elizabeth.

Several prominent officials of the Traction Company rode in a carriage from Plainfield to Elizabeth on Wednesday for the purpose of viewing the best road on which to locate a line for trolley cars between the two cities. They were several hours in making the trip because of the close attention which they gave the matter in hand.

One of the officials told the informant that the route was a good one, and he had no doubt the road would be built at an early day—perhaps before the close of the year.

It would be better for the public if the road to out-lying towns was owned and managed by another company, but if nobody else will step up and fill the long-felt want on the part of the people, we shall be glad to see the Traction Company undertake the task of its construction and equipment.—Elizabeth Leader.

THIEF WATCHED HIS CHANCE.

When Andrew D. Godown Went to Sleep His Watch Made an Exit.

The back parlor of the City Hotel was the scene of quite a little adventure for A. D. Godown yesterday noon. He came into the room with a stranger who has been lounging around the hotel for several days, and the two men began joking and fooling with each other. At last Godown lay down to take a nap and the fun ceased. When Godown woke up the stranger was gone and his valuable gold watch was a minus quantity. It is supposed that the stranger skipped with the watch and the police were at once notified, but as it was not until six o'clock that the theft was discovered, the culprit had plenty of time to escape.

JOE MILLER'S TRILBY COMPANY.

An Amusement Enterprise Fostered by a Former Plainfielder.

J. B. Miller, formerly of Plainfield, but now of the Elm House, on Grand street, Elizabeth, has in rehearsal a farce comedy entitled "Trilby up to Date," with seventy-five people in the cast, headed by Mrs. J. B. Miller, nee May Winchester, the well known soprano. The company will be under the management and direction of J.E. Fisher and Mr. Miller. The famous Hungarian Band, eighteen in number, will compose part of the company. A full dress rehearsal will be given Monday evening at Syracuse. A number of Mr. Miller's Elizabeth friends have decided to attend, and have arranged for a special car.

Man's Greatest Boon.

Man's greatest boon is health, and one of the greatest contributors to health is the preservation of the sight. Any disorder of the eyes may lead to permanent nervous debility and make one miserable for life. Do not therefore fail to heed the first symptoms of failing vision, but have your eyes examined by a competant optician, such as you will find at Colliers, 103 Park avenue where all examinations are free.

Electric Bitters.

Electric Bitters is a medicine suited for any season, but perhaps more generally needed in the spring, when the languid exhausted feeling prevails, when the liver is torpid and sluggish and the need of a tonic and alterative is felt. A prompt use of this medicine has often averted long and perhaps fatal bilious fevers. No medicine will act more surely in counteracting and freeing the system from the malarial poison. Headache, indigestion, constipation, dizziness yield to Electric Bitters. Only 50c per bottle at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

THE VENINO DIVORCE CASE.

THE HUSBAND BEGINS AN ACTION IN A SPOKANE COURT.

Friends of Mrs. Venino Will Make a Determined Effort to Prevent the Coup of Separation—Who is "Margaret."

The fact that the Venino divorce case is to be reopened will interest many Plainfielders.

It will be remembered that Mr. Venino was assisted by philanthropic citizens of this city to get on his feet, so to speak, after an illness, and then helped him to reach Spokane, Washington, where he was assured of work which would give him a sufficient amount of compensation to support his family consisting of a wife and six children.

At first he sent his wife allowances each month. Then the allowance was reduced until he began to claim hard times and said he could send her nothing. Shortly afterwards he began proceedings to obtain a divorce.

But friends of Mrs. Venino interested themselves in her case and besides securing counsel at Spokane, Lawyer Charles A. Reed, of the firm of Reed & Coddington, was retained as counsel. The case was tried and Mrs. Venino won it; which was supposed to settle the matter.

Recently Venino had the case reopened, and through notification by an unknown friend in Spokane Mrs. Venino was made acquainted with Venino's movements. Mrs. Venino's counsel lost no time and prepared affidavits and took testimony which will be used at the trial which comes up Monday, August 12th, at Spokane.

The Daily Press has been informed that a person going by the name of "Margaret S" is playing an important part on Mr. Venino's side.

A Beautiful Summer Resort.

There is no more beautiful or romantic excursion resort than Mauch Chunk. Close beside it is Glen Onoko and both are in the Pennsylvania Blue Ridge mountains, now cool, green and delightful. The Switchback gravity railroad starts from the summit of Mount Piscah, the highest point in this immediate vicinity, and the ride is nine miles. The excitement is as great as the road is wonderful. These places can be visited next Wednesday by all who will go on the Central Railroad of New Jersey's low-rate excursion, which will be run as a special train. A lunch car will be attached to the train from which food and refreshments can be procured at reasonable prices.

Where Does He Stand, Anyhow?

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—If the editor of a party newspaper disagrees with the policy of his party, and is not accord with the policy of the opposition, where does he stand? Is he a dependent or an independent? Is he independent because that which he depended on is not forthcoming? Is he dependent on the blandishments of hoped for popularity? Is The Courier-News sincere, or is its editor playing to the galleries?

Electric Profundity.

And Still They Go.

Another excursion, and still people continue to go to Asbury Park in larger numbers than before. Two sections of ten cars each carried the members of Hope chapel and friends to the shore. The first section started from Plainfield and was but scantily filled, but the second, which had Grant avenue for its starting point, was crowded.

He Will Return.

G. Sutphen-Martin, Past Councilor of Franklin Council, No. 41, J. O. U.A. M., of this city, will return home Monday to assist the excursion committee of his lodge in their final preparations for their excursion on Thursday next. Mr. Martin has been overseeing the sowing of winter wheat on his farm in Hunterdon county.

A Talk by an Armenian.

There was an excellent attendance at the Christian Endeavor meeting in the First Baptist church last evening.

S. M. Melkoyan the Armenian, who has been creating an interest among Plainfield people in his work, gave a very able talk. He told many things of a peculiar interest about his people and the meeting was one of profit.

Who Was He.

On complaint of his wife a man was called out of Charles Smith's saloon last night by Chief Grant. She charged him with being abusive and carrying a revolver with him. The chief took him to the rookery, confiscated the weapon and released him.

Owing to the man's business connection his name is witheld.

On Their Way Back.

The Plainfield boys who have been camping out at Hank's pond left there yesterday at twelve o'clock. They expect to arrive home this afternoon.

CONDUCTOR HETFIELD HURT.

Thrown From a Car By a Peculiar Accident at Sea Girt.

Conductor Augustus P. Hetfield, of Madison avenue, was yesterday afternoon the victim of a peculiar and very painful accident, which, to say the least, was a narrow escape from a fatality. Mr. Hetfield runs between Jersey City and Long Branch on the Jersey Central, and is one of the most popular conductors on the road.

He was running the train up from the Branch yesterday afternoon, and just as it was pulling into the Sea Girt station at 3:40 o'clock, he walked out on to the platform of a car and naturally placed his hand on the brake handle as a means of support from the jar of the car. The train was still going at a rapid rate, when the engineer applied the air brakes. Unluckily the brake on this particular car was on just enough to catch the action of the air mechanism, with the result of the handle which Conductor Hetfield had grasped turning with a force and a rapidity sufficient to precipitate him ten feet out from the car and landing him all doubled up on the depot platform.

The shock and jar which he received was something terrible, and getting up and making an examination he found his coat badly torn and body painfully bruised and injured.

He was quickly surrounded by passengers and railway employes and assisted on to the train. A Somerville physician happened to be a passenger on the train and made him as comfortable as possible, stating that his left arm was broken. The train was run into Jersey City by Brakeman Richard Bellis.

Mr. Hetfield came home in the evening and called Dr. Endicott, who, after a thorough examination, declared that the arm was not broken, though severely bruised. The unfortunate man will be layed up for some time with his injuries.

BE CAREFUL WHERE YOU STEP.

Don't Tramp All Over The Lawns at The Band Concert Tonight.

Are you going to the band concert this evening?

Why, of course, you are.

But, say, when you go up there in that beautiful residential section be careful and not tramp all over some one's lawn.

You can tramp on your neighbor's feet all you want to, only get away from him just as soon thereafter as convenient, because some people don't like that sort of treatment. And you know what some people do when people step on their corns.

PECULIAR PHYSICAL FORMATION.

A Plainfield Ice Cream Dealer Who Has Double Joints.

One of the strangest developments in the human frame is the double joint, and G. W. Ralph, son of James W. Ralph, the Liberty street ice cream dealer, has these unusual joints at the knee. Dr. Adams has examined it and said it is one of the very few cases he ever saw and advised Ralph to go to New York and allow the doctors there to examine this wonderful formation. On one wrist there is a large lump, the cause of which cannot be given.

Former Plainfielder Killed in New York.

Among the dead found in the ruins of the building that collapsed at West Broadway and West Third street on Thursday was Michael Flynn, aged thirty-four, a plasterer, living at 84 Third avenue. Mr. Flynn was a resident of Plainfield several years ago and was well known here. He moved to New York where he had been engaged at his trade. He leaves a large family. The funeral services will be held tomorrow afternoon from his late home. A few Plainfielders will attend.

When moving into our present home I found a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm left by a former tenant. On the label I found the statement that it was good for cuts and burns. I can testify to the truth of this. Nothing in all my experience has found its equal for treating blisters or burns. F. E. Barrett, manager Le Sueur Sentinel, Le Sueur, Minn. ATTACKS ON MISSIONS

Details of the Outrages Received in Washington.

Officials Aided in the Bloody and Destructive Work—Even the Paving Stones Removed from One Mission House—A Viceroy's Plan To Seek Revenge for His Removal.

Washington, Aug. 10.—Acting Secretary Adee has received from United States Consul-General Jernigan at Shanghai a dispatch, dated July 12, enclosing four letters received by him from missionaries giving in great detail accounts of the events in China leading up to the riots against the missionaries at Chengtu in the province of Szechuen. One of these from Spencer Lenir, very comprehensive in scope, dated Chungking, China, says that the West China missions of the Methodist Episcopal church is the only American mission represented at Chengtu. The Americans there were the Rev. Olin Cady and wife, H. L. Canwright, M. D., and wife and two children, and Rev. J. F. Peat and wife and two children. This mission owned but one piece of property in Chengtu on which was a Chinese building fitted for the residence of two families, a Chinese building used as a chapel, a dispensary and minor structures.

Even Paving Stones Carried Off.

Mr. Lenir says that substantially all these are gone, even the paving stones being carried out of the courts. The total loss, exclusive of personal losses, is about 6,000 taels. The American Baptist Missionary union had stations at Sui-Fu, Kiating and Yacheo. The missions and personal property in Kiating and Yacheo are probably all lost, though particulars had not been received by Mr. Lenir when his letter was written. At Sui-Fu the Americans owned a great deal of property, but not much damage was done to it.

Betrayed by Chinese Officials.

Mr. Lenir describes the various attacks made on the missions at Chengtu, the particulars of which have been printed in the American newspapers. In the attack on the premises of the Canadian Methodist mission, the two physicians in charge of the hospital and chapel which were afterwards looted and burned, kept the mob at bay, but the officials would give no assistance, although several of them were quite near. Late that evening, May 28th, the members of the American Methodist mission sought refuge in the district magistrate's yamen, but were refused and told they would be protected if they returned home. Relying on this promise, they were entirely unprepared for the mob which soon visited them and had barely time to escape. Operations were renewed by the mob at daybreak next day and before noon the attack was general on all the Catholic and Protestant mission places.

Soldiers Assisted in the Looting.

The American Methodists from their hiding places in an attic only six feet away watched the mob for twelve hours plundering their houses. Some of the 10,000 soldiers of the province assisted in the looting and dug up a number of bones which they took to the district magistrate's yamen representing them to be the bones of babies which the foreigners had eaten. The viceroy, says Mr. Lenir, and consequently all lower officials, were simultaneously suffering from a severe attack of indisposition. He makes serious charges against the viceroy. Cheo Taoti, claiming that as he had been degraded and was soon to be recalled he was bent on giving a parting hit both at the foreigners, whom he hated, and the government.

The Viceroy's Parting Hit.

When the flames burst forth from the Roman Catholic bishop's residence, scarcely a stone's throw from the viceroy's yamen, the viceroy remarked, according to Mr. Lenir, that this was a matter for his successor to attend to, and he states that only after everything was quite destroyed did the viceroy make an effort to restore order, in the meantime having sent out telegrams that a mutilated child had been found at a foreign place, with a result that nearly all the natives believed the story. Mr. Lenir scores the viceroy severely and demands the punishment of hostile officials. He enclosed copies of the inflamatory placards that were posted everywhere charging that the foreigners were kidnapping children and using oil from their bodies.

Praise for Yachan Officials.

George W. Hill of the American Baptist Missionary union at Yachan tells of the flight of himself and party from that place and of an attempt to mob them while proceeding down a river in a boat. He was unable to tell at the time the letter was written, whether or not the Baptist mission property at Yachan had been destroyed, but he learned before leaving there that all the stations on the Chengtu and Yachan roads, Catholic and protestant, had been looted, and there had also been riots at Hung Ya Kiating, Sui-Fu, Li Chinang and other places where the missions were attacked. Mr. Hill praises the action of the Chinese officials in giving them every protection at Yachan.

The Stakeholder Disappeared.

Toledo, O., Aug. 10.—A couple of hundred local sports drove to the Michigan state lines at an early morning hour to witness a proposed finish fight between "Kid" Murphy of Philadelphia and Dan Bailey of Sioux Falls, S. D., for a purse of $300. The principals were on the scene but the stakeholder disappeared with the money. There was no fight.

Big Suit Settled.

Duluth, Minn., Aug. 10.—It is learned from sources that are thoroughly authentic that the Rockefeller corporation has quietly settled with William McKinley for $198,744, the suit of Mc Kinley against the Lake Superior Consolidated Iron Mines, for $600,000.

New Bank Authorized.

Washington, Aug. 10.—The application of T. Ellwood Carpenter and associates for authority to organize the Mount Kisco (N. Y.) National bank has been approved by the comptroller of the currency.

Monterey at San Diego.

Washington, Aug. 10.—The coast defense vessel Monterey reached San Diego yesterday from Acapulco.

PROBABLY THE HOLT HILL.

Believed She Was the Vessel Sunk with the Prince Oscar.

New York, Aug. 10.—It is believed that the four-masted vessel which with the British ship Prince Oscar was sunk in a collision off the coast of Brazil, as mentioned in this paper, is the British ship Holt Hill. There are only five American four-masted vessels, two are now at this port, while the other three are bound from here for San Francisco and would not have been sailing the course of the ill-fated ship. The Holt Hill sailed from San Francisco for Queenstown April 23, probably carrying only grain. On July 9, four days before the collison, she was spoken about 442 miles south of the scene of the disaster. With a fair wind she would have been on the 13th in about the position indicated. The facts and figures above are considered conclusive by men in shipping circles that the Holt Hill was the unknown vessel with which the Prince Oscar collided and sunk with all on board.

CRUSHED IN AN ELEVATOR.

Horrible Death of a Negro Employed by War Department.

Washington, Aug. 10.—Martin Murphy, colored, an elevator conductor in the war department, met a strange accidental death yesterday. He was standing outside his car in the sub-basement of the building, and in response to a call from one of the upper floors, jumped for his car and pulled the lever before he was fairly in. The car went upward with great rapidity, the lower part of Murphy's body and his legs being outside. When the car reached the basement floor, the unfortunate conductor's back came sharply in contact with an iron flange, and his body was wedged so tightly between the car and the wall that the car was brought to a standstill. Murphy's back was broken and he was dead before Dr. George C. Herndon, a surgeon of the navy, could reach the scene from his office in the navy department.

STEAMER ORIENT BURNING.

Not Enough Water in the Port of Sydney To Sink Her.

London, Aug. 10.—A dispatch from Melbourne says the British steamer Orient, which sailed from London July 28 for Sydney, N. S. W., is burning fiercely in port there. The fire started in her coal bunkers. The city fire brigade had been playing on the steamer for seven hours when the dispatch was sent. There is only nineteen feet of water where the vessel lies, and a depth of twenty-eight is necessary to sink her sufficiently deep to extinguish the flames, and little progress is being made in the work of quenching the fire. Much of the Orient's cargo of tea is greatly damaged.

THE MORA CLAIMS.

Carlists and Republicans Pledged To Resist the Government.

Madrid, Aug. 10.—At a meeting of the Carlist and Republican deputies, the members present pledged the two parties to oppose the payment of the Mora claims. It was also decided to send a petition to the queen regent against the decision of the government to pay the claims, and if these steps were not successful in preventing the payment, to issue a manifesto to the nation.

Washington, Aug. 10.—The president has awarded a medal of honor to first lieutenant Francis M. Smith, adjutant First Maryland infantry, for "most distinguished gallantry in action," at Dabney's Mills, Va., February 6th, 1865, in voluntarily remaining with the body of his regimental commander under heavy fire after the brigade had retired, and bringing the body safely off the field.

WAR ON THEIR BEER

Monks Will Probably Stop Brewing.

Pennsylvanias Benedictine Were Simply Following Examples Set Abroad, and They Have No Desire To Antagonize the Temperance Sentiment in This Country.

Washington, Aug. 10.—The complaint against the maintenance by the Benedictine monks at Beatty, Westmoreland county, Penn., of the brewery which they established there and which was criticized in the meeting of the Total Abstinence union in New York yesterday, has been before Mgr. Satolli, the papal delegate, for his action for some time. It was stated at the legation today that the author of the complaint could not consistently be made public, but it was asserted that the correspondence upon the subject upon all sides had been conducted with the utmost good feeling, and with bright prospects of a satisfactory issue to all concerned.

Only Following Their Training.

The Benedicine monks, nearly all of whom are foreigners, it is said had no intention or desire to antagonize the temperance sentiment in this country and in the Catholic church by the establishment of their brewery. In the old world the temperance question presented itself under different conditions from those that exist in this country. There the monks of Chartreuse manufactured liquor which takes its name from that body and the Franciscan monks of Bavaria produce a beer that is advertised all over that country without causing criticism or afront. The Benedictines in the old country also make a liquor that is known wherever their name is spoken. So that the monks at St. Vincent's had gone into the manufacture of beer here innocently enough viewed from the standpoint of their training and observation.

Will Probably Abandon It.

Some years ago the Augustine monks in the same state engaged in a like enterprise, but at the request of Rome abandoned the business, and this incident is believed to forecast the result of the complaint that has been made to Mgr. Satolli with respect of the Benedictines at St. Vincent's.

GENUINE TEXAS FEVER.

The Disease Contracted by Cows Grazing on Railroad Tracks.

Tyrone, Pa., Aug. 10.—Dr. F. Bridge, the state veterinarian, came here yesterday to investigate the reported epidemic among the cattle at Birmingham. Dr. H. G. Patterson, a veterinarian of Altoona, made an examination of the dead cows and pronounced the disease Texas fever, in which he was substantiated by Dr. Bridge. Dr. Bridge says the disease was contracted by the animals pasturing on the railroad track over which Texas cattle had been hauled in cars. The disease was transmitted by ticks which fell from the passing cattle. These ticks, which are similar to a wood louse, become impregnated in the skin and cause sickness and death in a few days. The disease is not contagious and there is no danger of its spreading.

WELL SUPPLIED WITH WIVES.

Sensational Chapter in the Career of Samuel Douglas.

Washington, Aug. 10.—An evening paper unfolded a sensational chapter in the career of Samuel Douglass of Indianapolis, Ind., who a few days ago eloped to Baltimore with Miss Mamie Douglass, daughter of one of the Ford's theatre victims. They were married there, and Douglass abandoned her in two days after getting possession of $500 of her money. The paper asserts that Douglass, although young in years, has four wives living, two in Washington, one in Georgetown and one in Indianapolis. His first wife is said to have been a Mrs. Van Lou, whom he married here and deserted in Indianapolis after securing something like $2,000 of her money. Douglass is now a fugitive from justice.

This is the first time women have been given a right to vote in Kentucky, but their suffrage is restricted to voting for members of the board of education. The meeting was harmonious. It was presided over by Miss Laura Clay, daughter of the former minister to Russia, Cassius M. Clay.

MAY BE BADLY INJURED

Feared Grounding Has Strained Defender.

Those Directly Interested in the Great Racer Assert That She Was Not Injured—Examined by a Diver—Reported That She Is To Be Placed on Dry Dock, However.

Newport, R. I., Aug. 10.—Although those directly interested in the Defender assert that the great racer is not any the worse for grounding yesterday, other yachtsmen express the belief that she is badly strained and that her fin is damaged. A diver viewed her bottom this morning and as a result of his report it is said the boat will be placed on dry dock.

And Capt. Haff Was at the Wheel.

The yacht ran aground while trying to make its berth in Brenton's cove after taking a spin outside. Captain Hank Haff was at the wheel when Defender struck, and he worked like a beaver until the boat floated again. It was about 4:45 when the Defender's towering sail was seen making in past the permanent wharf at Fort Adams. Just about this time Captain Haff stepped up to the wheel, and when the boat had what was considered proper bearings he threw over the wheel with the intention of shooting up into the cove to an anchorage. He had come a little short of his proper course, and with its nineteen feet draft the yacht brought up all standing in a mud bank about 300 yards off Blackbury, where there is a decided shoal.

Quivered from Stem to Stern.

The yacht had considerable headway on and after the first time fetching up appeared to forge ahead in two distinct hitches, each time stopping so suddenly as to quiver from stem to stern. The tide was about one hour high, so there was little danger of the Defender careening and wrenching her fin, though a stiff breeze was striking the yacht broadside, and if there was any damage done it was in striking, or later, from pressure of the wind. The tender Hattie Palmer was shortly alongside and tried from various positions to haul the Defender off, but the latter would not budge an inch. Cables were run out, but these proved insufficient as well, and it was decided that it would be better to await the assistance of the tide. This proved equal to the occasion, and after being held fast for about three hours the Defender came off at 7:54. The boom had been run far out to starboard and half a dozen men were sent out to the end. This healed the yacht well over, and then the Hattie Palmer started in working the yacht off stern first. The big sticker was then towed by the tender safely to the anchorage which it had tried to make.

PURELY A LOVE AFFAIR.

Mrs. P. T. Barnum that Was Retains Control of Her Fortune.

New Haven, Aug. 10.—The fortune of the late P. T. Barnum will not go to the Greek, Debritrio Callai Bey, to whom Mrs. Barnum has been married. Just before the civil ceremony a contract was signed in New York office of attorney George P. Ingersoll, of this city. Ex-Governor Ingersoll was present as Mrs. Barnum's personal counsel. The contract specifies that neither party shall have any claim on the fortune of the other. This, by the friends of Mrs. Barnum, is advanced as a proof that the marriage is purely a love affair.

NO BLOOD WILL BE SHED.

The Proposed Bull Fights at Atlanta Will Be Tame Exhibitions.

Atlanta, Ga., Aug. 10.—In relation to the bull fights which are to be a feature of the exposition, President Collins made a statement last night in which he said: "In the first place the bull fight is not an exhibit, but a part of the midway. The performance will take place within an enclosure, and it will only be seen by those who care to pay for the privilege. I have received letters from persons exercised over this subject and in which the correspondents labored under the impression that the bulls were to be killed and horses disembowled. I wish to assure the public that not a drop of blood will be shed. Such a representation of a bull fight is not an experiment. The thing has been done before and is now being done successfully in Mexico. It was done in Paris during the last exposition there, and gentlemen in this and other cities are witnesses of the fact that the performance was harmless and devoid of cruelty."

NEGRO MUST DIE ANYWAY.

Although Dying He May Be Lynched To Kill Him More Quickly.

Washington, Aug. 10.—A suggestive indication of the promptness of one form of Virginia justice was furnished in a message delivered to Frank Tilford, a lumber dealer of this city, from Berryville. As Tilford was about to take the early train at that point for Washington Monday morning last a gang of negroes assailed him at the station and demanded his watch. Having a revolver in his hand in the right hand coat pocket, he fired through the coat at his foremost assailant. The whole gang ran, and one fell on the other side of a fence. The message received yesterday was that the fellow had been caught, and asking Mr Tilford to come up and identify him. "He is shot in the stomach," said the message, "and may die, but if you come up and identify him we think we can lynch him before he dies."

HOW HE KILLED THEM.

Chicago, Aug. 10.—The pick of a workman in the Holmes castle uncovered a construction which carries suggestions of the conspirator's work. In the room on the second floor where Holmes used to sleep a gas-pipe runs over the floor. Where the pipe meets the wall it turns down into the floor, and beneath the boards is a cut-off. The pipe runs directly to the windowless room where it is believed Mrs. O'Conner was murdered. The cut-off is believed to be one of Holmes' instruments of death. Sitting in his room, he could turn on with ease a flow of gas that would fill the dark sleeping apartment and asphyxiate the occupants.

There are 115 cases among the nearly 400 members of the party but so far no deaths have been reported. The marine hospital service is also supplying the medical attendants.

KILLED BY A SENATOR

Bloody Street Duel at Brandon, Miss.

E. T. Dinkins Murdered by Hon. T Dabney Marshall and Several Friends—Fifteen Shots Fired and the Victim Receives Six in His Body—Both Highly Connected.

Jackson, Miss., Aug. 10—Hon. T. Dabney Marshall, senator-elect from Warren and Hinds counties, shot and killed E. T. Dinkins, of Jackson, at Brandon yesterday. Marshall and three friends, H. H. Coleman, H. P. Fox and W. P. Vollens, drove to Brandon in a hack and met Dinkins at the depot. As he turned a corner of the building they opened fire on him, fifteen shots being fired. Dinkins was unarmed, but grabbed Marshall's pistol from him as he fired the first shot. The shooting was caused by a sensasional report circulated by Dinkins. Marshall denounced the report as a lie, but Dinkins stuck to it and everybody looked for a killing sooner or later.

Story of an Eye Witness.

An eye witness thus describes the shooting: Marshall walked up to Dinkins, saying: "This is Mr. Dinkins?" and placing a pistol at the man's stomach, discharged the weapon. Dinkins grabbed the weapon just as it was fired and possibly the first shot did not take effect. As Dinkins backed away from Marshall there was a fusilade of shot from Marshall's companions. It is thought Dinkins fired Marshall's pistol at the latter, as it was found in his hand when dead. Marshall, Coleman, Fox and Marshall's law partner, Mr. Vallens, met in the waiting room of the depot as soon as the bloody work had been completed and announced they were ready to surrender, and Sheriff Dobson was called for.

Six Shots in His Body.

Sheriff Dobson says Dinkins was shot six times: Marshall claimed to have done the shooting, but all the men, Marshall, Coleman, Fox and Vallors, are in jail. Eye witnesses say all of them shot at Dinkins except Vallors, who claimed he was there in "the capacity of attorney."

Both Men Stood High.

Marshall is a little fellow and weighs about seventy-five pounds. He is highly educated, a lawyer and man of letters, and his family is one of the most prominent in the state. He has a host of friends at home and elsewhere. He has served a term in the legisture, and was the nominee for floater senator of Warren and Hinds counties. Dinkins' family is equall as good. He is a brother to W. L. Dinkins of Madison, President Cleveland's United States marshal during his first term, and is closely related to many prominent men in the state, being a cousin to Bishop Charles B. Galloway of this city.

It is queer how some of these barbers do like to work.

What has become of ex-Chief of Police Thomas Byrnes? Is he in Wall street, or where is he?

Henry D. Purroy is said to be the coming Boss of Tammany. But who is doing that work now? That is the most interesting question.

It looks like Mc Gill. Remember, though, it only looks that way. Many changes can transpire between now and the time for the convention.

The partisan political papers are busy telling people of the men who are politically dead. But some how or other they seem to be awfully live subjects.

This is the time of year when people remark that "it is too hot to go to church." It is a poor excuse. Churches, as a rule, are cool places in an atmospheric way.

A Trenton dog catcher has made $300 from his official duties in one month this summer. Under these conditions the dog catcher is quite an individual after all.

The Trenton Times, changed in form, with a new dress of type, and reduced in price to one cent, made its appearance yesterday. It looks well and ought to prosper well.

Editor Rollinson, of the Rahway Advocote, is real mean when he attempts to jolly the Courier-News editor by telling people that he presides with "such ability, dignity and grace."

The question propounded by a correspondent in another column as to just where or what the Courier-News editor is, opens up an interesting field of discussion. It is very much doubted whether or not the Courier-News editor himself knows where he is at, much less other people.

The Rahway Advocate calls on the Courier-News editor to open up the columns of his "fearless, independent" paper for the "sentiment that animates the hearts of the rank and file of Plainfield's sturdy Republicans," which Editor Rollinson says is for Foster Voorhees for the Gubernatorial nomination. Will the "fearless, independent" editor, who presides "with such ability, dignity and grace," (oh what taffy) do it? Not while John Kean is in the field.

Politics in the far west are rapidly becoming permeated with feminity. The Occident has evidently made up its mind to tackle the woman officeholder, and, as a consequence, the woman officeholder is humming. If the east doesn't make up its mind to follow suit before long the nation's two parties will represent gender rather than principle. This conclusion is drawn from present western indications. Kansas, perhaps, boast the most women officeholders. The political appointment oftenest open to the women of that State is county superintendent of public schools. There has not been a time during the past fifteen years when there were not from ten to twenty women filling this position in various counties in the State. At present nineteen women are incumbents of the place. The latest political office thrown open to women is that of register of deeds in Dickinson county. Colorado is not far behind Kansas. An important office held by a woman in that State is the commissioner of dairy inspection. The secretary of Colorado's board of horticulture is also a woman. There are seven women upon Denver's school board, and a woman holds the office of superintendent of public instruction. Wyoming and North Dakota each have women in prominent public office. Miss Estelle Reel, superintendent of public instruction for the former State, is one of the three women in the United States who have been honored by an election to State office.—Evening Sun.

It is the intention of several of the residents in the vicinity of where the band concert is to be held this evening to decorate their grounds with Chinese lanterns. It would be a good idea and a progressive spirit if all would decorate.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer one hundred dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

CYCLING COMMENT.

G. W. Scribner and E. Boice expect to ride to Asbury Park tomorrow.

Walter Williams went on an all-day cycling trip yesterday through Staten Island.

Frank Manchester and Walter Kreitling expect to go to Asbury Park tomorrow, weather permitting.

Riding a bicycle develops the instinct of thrift. It teaches you how to keep your balance.—Exchange.

The Select Few Wheelmen, of New York, will have a Century run on Sunday and will pass through this city.

J. A. Haynes and T. J. Carey will start next week with their wheels for New Hampshire to spend their vacation.

Mr. Price, of the Eldridge Cycle Co., punctured the rear tire on his wheel ast evening as he was passing through Park avenue.

Road racing is doomed. The sound said doom is still reverberating throughout the land, and only recently one of the small towns in Massachusetts has passed an ordinance prohibiting the use of the public thoroughfare for racing surposes.—American Wheelman.

While the dangers of bicycling are being discussed in every portion of the country it should be borne in mind that there are few dangers in bicyling itself. The exercise is healthful and invigorating. It is only the recklessness, carelessness or injudiciousness of the riders which is dangerous or fatal.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

The great question that is agitating the minds of the racing men is whether class B will be completely abolished next year or not? Many think that it will. If that be true, then what will become of the present members of that class? Some will undoubtedly embrace professionalism, but there are still some of the stars who will refuse to accept it as the salvation of racing.—American Wheelman.

Marvelous Results.

From a letter written by Rev. J. Gunderman, of Dimondale, Mich., we are permitted to make this extract: "I have no hesitation in recommending Dr. King's New Discovery, as the results were almost marvelous in the case of my wife. While I was pastor of the Baptist Church at Rives Junction she was brought down with pneumonia succeeding la grippe. Terrible paroxysms of coughing would last hours with little interruption and it seemed as if she could not survive them. It will surely do all that can be safely done to clear the skin. And try it in the pleasant form of REYNOLD'S LEMON JUICE AND GLYCERINE. The results will please you. TIME BRINGS ROSES.

When from my mountain top of years I gaze
Backward upon the scenes that I have passed,
How pleasant is the view! and yet how vast
The deserts where I thirsted many days!
There, where now hangs that blue and shimmering haze,
And there, and there, my lot with pain was cast,
Hopeless and dark; but always at the last
Deliverance came, from unexpected ways.
And now all past grief is as but a dream;
Yet even now there loom before my path
Shadows whose gloomy portent checks my breath.
But shadows are not always what they seem—
God's love sometimes appears to be his wrath,
And His best gift is the white rose of death.

ROMANCE IN HIGH LIFE.

The Daughter of the Late Col. Elliott F. Shepard Weds Secretly.

In striking comparison with the brilliant wedding of Miss Adele Sloane to James Abercrombie Burden, Jr., at Lenox, Mass., on June 6, was the unexpected marriage of Mrs. Burden's cousin, Miss Alice Vanderbilt Shepard, to Dave Hennen Morris, son of the late John A. Morris, of Westchester, the noted turfman and lottery king. Mrs. Burden is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William D. Sloane. Mrs. Morris is the daughter of the late Elliott F. Shepard, former owner of the New York Mail and Express, and both young women are granddaughters of William H. Vanderbilt and nieces of Cornelius, Frederick W., George and William K. Vanderbilt.

Three special trains carried up several hundred wedding guests to the Burden-Sloane wedding at Lenox. Every member of the Vanderbilt family in this country was present at the wedding, and Miss Alice Vanderbilt Shepard was conspicuous among the guests.

None of the family connections of Miss Shepard but her mother knew of the impending Morris-Shepard wedding, and only a few persons were aware that Miss Shepard and Mr. Morris were engaged.

The romance which culminated in the wedding of Miss Alice Vanderbilt Shepard and Dave Hennen Morris dates back a year to a social courtesy paid by ex-Secretary William C. Whitney to the young people during an ocean voyage. In July of last year ex-Secretary Whitney, Miss Davidge, Miss Pauline Whitney and Miss Alice Vanderbilt Shepard went abroad on the steamer Majestic. Mr. Morris was a passenger on the same steamer, and, during the trip, ex-Secretary Whitney introduced Mr. Morris to Miss Shepard. They had never met before. During the stay abroad of ex-Secretary Whitney's party Miss Shepard and Mr. Morris saw each other frequently. Observers noticed during the summer trip that a strong attachment was springing up between Miss Shepard and Mr. Morris.

During the winter the attentions of Mr. Morris were not sufficiently constant to attract attention, but recently it had been rumored among the intimate acquaintances of both that Mr. Morris never called upon Miss Shepard at her home during his brief visits from Harvard, of whose junior class he was a member. Ten days ago Mr. Morris came home from Harvard on his summer vacation. Mrs. Elliot F. Shepard had transferred her household to her country place at Scarboro.

Mrs. Elliot F. Shepard went to New York the morning of the wedding with Miss Alice Vanderbilt Shepard. They went to the Shepard residence, at Fifth avenue and Fifty-second street. At 5.30 o'clock Miss Shepard was married to Mr. Morris in the Church of the Transfiguration. Mrs. Shepard was not present at the wedding.

The secrecy of the wedding led the acquaintances of the bride and bridegroom to believe that there was not perfect harmony between the two families over the marriage.

Mrs. Shepard was very fond of Mr. Morris until she found out how the large fortune he had inherited had been made, and then she changed completely. Mrs. Shepard is a very religious woman, and she would not allow her daughter to receive attention from a turfman's son.

It is the intention of Mr. Morris to finish his course at Harvard, and during his concluding studies next year Mrs. Morris will probably live in Boston. Mr. Morris intends to take up surgery as a profession. He has taken a two-year course under Dr. William Todd Helmuth, and he will follow a post-graduate course of surgical study and practice. Mr. Morris has long cherished the hobby of founding a free surgical hospital in this city where the poorest can receive the very best medical and surgical attention. The young man's large wealth will allow him to realize this idea.

The fortune of the late John T. Morris was estimated at his death to be $30,000. Of this Dave Hennen Morris inherits a large share. The share of the Vanderbilt estate, which Mrs. Morris will eventually receive, will make her many times a millionaire in her own name.

Adventure With a Shark.

W. H. Muller wrote from Aransas Pass, Tex., to Forest and Stream as follows:

"On June 14, last, while out fishing for tarpon, a shark got on my hook and the boom of the boat struck me in the back of the neck, knocking me head first into the channel, and the shark got me in the calf of the left leg, taking me twenty feet down the channel. However, I managed to pull myself up on the line which I had in my hand and tied to the boat, and when I pulled myself up to the boat I kicked the shark in the jaw at least twelve times, tearing a large gash in my limb, and the boatman then dumped me in the boat and I landed the shark, killing him, and we sailed for shore. It laid me up for seven weeks. However, I am going out this evening and presume you will hear from me again before leaving here."

CASTORIA

for Infants and Children.

MOTHERS, Do You Know that Paregoric, Bateman's Drops, Godfrey's Cordial, many so-called Soothing Syrups, and most remedies for children are composed of opium or morphine?

Do You Know that opium and morphine are stupefying narcotic poisons?

Do You Know that in most countries druggists are not permitted to sell narcotics without labeling them poisons?

Do You Know that you should not permit any medicine to be given your child unless you or your physician know of what it is composed?

Do You Know that Castoria is a purely vegetable preparation, and that a list of its ingredients is published with every bottle?

Do You Know that Castoria is the prescription of the famous Dr. Samuel Pitcher. That it has been in use for nearly thirty years, and that more Castoria is now sold than of all other remedies for children combined?

Do You Know that the Patent Office Department of the United States, and of other countries, have issued exclusive right to Dr. Pitcher and his assigns to use the word "Castoria" and its formula, and that to imitate them is a state prison offense?

Do You Know that one of the reasons for granting this government protection was because Castoria had been proven to be absolutely harmless?

Do You Know that 35 average doses of Castoria are furnished for 35 cents, or one cent a dose?

Do You Know that when possessed of this perfect preparation, your children may be kept well, and that you may have unbroken rest?

Well, these things are worth knowing. They are facts.

MISSING FROM THE 6:54 EXPRESS.

A RAILWAY INSPECTOR'S STORY.

BY JOHN T. PARTINGTON.

It is to me always an interesting occupation to look through my old note-books, for there I find memoranda of a number of very remarkable occurrences and mysterious incidents, in the clearing up of which my duties as a district inspector in the traffic department of the London and Northwestern Railway have caused me to take a not unimportant part. And my experience has not been by any means peculiar or exceptional, for many of my colleagues in various departments of the service could tell of equally extraordinary events with which, at one time or another, they have been called upon to deal while performing the duties assigned to them by the company. I have often thought how much surprised some of our passengers would be if they only knew of the romances and strange life-stories of which they have, as it were, unconsciously touched the fringe now and again as they have perambulated our stations or traveled by our trains.

A case of much interest to me at the time of its occurrence, and of which I still have in my house a highly prized memento, was that of the disappearance of Mrs. Fairholme's little boy, a few years ago, as he was traveling from Rhyl to Connah's Quay by the 6:54 express one evening in midwinter. The case began, so far as I was concerned, with a summons on the telephone. I was sitting in my office at Chester Station one morning, writing a report upon the preprevious day's working, when the telephone communicating with the superintendent's clerk's office gave the call for attention.

I responded, and then received the message: "Mr. Waters wants to see Inspector Barnes at once."

Mr. Waters was the superintendent of the North Wales district, and a summons from him always called for immediate attention.

"Coming," I replied.

I hurried along the platform, ascended the stairs leading to the district offices, and after the usual preliminary knock at the door of the superintendent's private room, opened it and entered.

A lady, apparently young, and with a graceful figure and strikingly handsome face, was sitting by Mr. Waters' desk; and a glance was sufficient to show me that she was in great distress of mind.

"Barnes," said Mr. Waters, "this lady's name is Mrs. Fairholme. She sent her little boy from Rhyl to Connah's Quay last night by the 6:54 express, but he has not arrived at his destination, and she can get no tidings of him. You had better leave any other work you have in hand, and find the boy. Mrs. Fairholme will give you all particulars. I have explained to her that I am due at a meeting now, and cannot stay to go into the case further myself. Let me know the result of your inquiries as soon as possible."

Mr. Waters shook hands with Mrs. Fairholme, at the same time uttering a few reassuring words, and left the office; and I then turned to the lady and said: "Will you be good enough to tell me, madam, all the circumstances in connection with the disappearance of your son?"

"They are briefly these," she began. "I live at Walsall, but have been staying for a few days with my sister at Rhyl, and have had with me my two children—a boy of nearly 6 years of age, and a girl of 3. For a day or two my little girl has been somewhat unwell, and yesterday I thought I detected symptoms of scarlet fever.

"The doctor was uncertain about it, but said he would be able to tell what the ailment was during to-day. I was terribly upset, and was anxious to get my boy away from the risk of infection. I have no friends at Rhyl except my sister, and at first did not know what to do. I then remembered that a faithful old nurse of my mother's, who married a Welshman named Edwards some years ago, lived at Connah's Quay, and I telegraphed to her, asking if she would take charge of my boy for a few days. She replied at once, readily agreeing to do so, and I had then to decide how to get him there. I went down to the station about 3 o'clock, and on looking at the time-bills, found that there was a train to Connah's Quay at 4:25 p. m., stopping at all stations, and another at 6:54 p. m., which did not stop till it got to Connah's Quay. I did not like to leave my little girl while she was so unwell, and for several reasons my sister could not go; and I therefore decided to send Frank (that is my boy's name) by himself by the 6:54 express. I thought that by choosing that train he would be quite safe, as I would see him away from Rhyl. There would be no stoppages on the way, and therefore no chance of his mistaking the station he was to get out at, or of his being molested by passengers entering the compartment at other stations; and Mrs. Edwards would meet him on arrival of the train at Connah's Quay Station.

"To make quite sure that all was right I saw the station-master, and he confirmed my reading of the bills, and said that my boy was sure to be all right if I sent him by that train. I telegraphed Mrs. Edwards again, telling her the train Frank would come by, and asking her to meet him; and she was kind enough to wire back saying she would do so.

"I took Frank down in good time for the train, which arrived punctually; and having taken a second-class ticket for him, looked for a compartment of that class, but I could only find two. One was full of passengers, and the other was labeled 'Smoking,' and some noisy men were in it. I noticed a third-class compartment with two women in it, seated opposite each other close to the door; and as I was afraid the train would be going if I took up any more time by looking elsewhere, I thought I would place Frank in that compartment, and at once opened the door and lifted him in. I then noticed for the first time that there was a disreputable-looking man at the farther end of the compartment, and I was sorry that I had put Frank there; but it was too late to make any change, for the train was just starting. The porter closed the door, and I walked along by the side of the compartment as far as I could, throwing kisses to my boy, which he smilingly returned; and that is the last I have seen or heard of him. I should have said that as I lifted Frank into the compartment I asked one of the women to see that he got out at the next stopping station, and she promised to do so.

"After the train had gone I went home and waited for the telegram which I had asked Mrs. Edwards to send me, announcing Frank's safe arrival; and soon after 8 o'clock a telegram was brought to me, but oh! I cannot tell you what my feelings were when I read it; for, as you will see, it stated that Frank had not arrived, and I felt sure at once that some misfortune had happened to him."

As Mrs. Fairholme spoke, she handed me the telegram, which read as follows:

"MRS. FAIRHOLME,
"2, Colwyn Villas,
"Rhyl.

"Met train, but Frank not arrived by it; will meet next.

"MARY EDWARDS."

"I don't remember anything very clearly for some time after reading the telegram," Mrs. Fairholme continued. "My sister tells me that I fainted and remained unconscious for a while, and when I came to myself the last train for Connah's Quay had gone. I could not rest, however, without making personal inquiries about my boy, and I therefore arranged with my sister that she should nurse my little girl; and I came to Chester by the 10 o'clock mail, and took a conveyance back from Chester to Connah's Quay, arriving at Mrs. Edwards' house about midnight, and finding our old nurse almost as much distressed as I was myself.

"Before leaving Rhyl I had communicated with the local police, and I did the same at Connah's Quay in the early hours of this morning, and no doubt they are doing all they can; but it was suggested to me that as my boy disappeared while traveling by train, I had better come to Chester and see Mr. Waters as soon as his office opened this morning, and ask his assistance in the matter, and that is what I have just done."

It was necessary for me to ask Mrs. Fairholme several questions before I could feel that I was in possession of all the necessary particulars. From her replies to my queries I gleaned the following further information:

Mrs. Edwards had seen the boy once or twice before, and would have no difficulty in recognizing him, although the boy might not so readily know her. The station-master at Connah's Quay had confirmed Mrs. Edwards' statement that the boy did not alight there. He had delayed the train a minute or so to look for the boy in some of the compartments, but could not say whether inquiry had been made in the particular compartment in which the boy had been placed. The carriage in which the boy traveled was in the front part of the train, about the second or third from the engine. She was sure she could identify the man who was at the farther end of the compartment. His face bore a coarse, brutal look, and was disfigured by an ugly scar which extended right across his left cheek. He was very dark, and had a bushy beard, but no mustache. One of the women in the compartment was stout, and had a ruddy face and red hands, and the other was quite young, and wore a shade over one eye. Frank was considered a pretty child. He had golden hair, and was dressed in a Little Lord Fauntleroy suit, covered by an overcoat of rough black cloth with brass buttons, and he wore a sailor cap. She had sent his luggage by the previous train, and it had been received by Mrs. Edwards in due course. She had given him a shilling to spend, and he also carried a small gold watch and silver chain, which had been given to him a short time previously. The watch was old and not of great value; but Frank liked to wear it whenever he could, and she had, perhaps rather foolishly, consented to his taking it to Connah's Quay. Frank was rather proud of the watch, and might, in his childish way, have taken it out of his pocket to look at while in the train. It was the elder woman whom she spoke to about seeing that the boy got out at the next stopping station. She did not think she gave the name of the station. She had told the boy that he was to get out at the first station at which the train stopped, and look out for Mrs. Edwards, whom he was to call "nurse." She could not say whether the man and the woman were friends traveling together, or strangers to one another.

I had little doubt that I should find that the train had stopped out of course at some station between Rhyl and Connah's

"I'LL RELIEVE YOU OF YOUR CHARGE."

Quay, and that the boy had alighted there in the belief that he had arrived at his destination.

I got a time-book and made notes of the timing of the train by which the boy had traveled. The train started from Bangor at 5:30 p. m., called at nearly all stations to Rhyl, and was timed from Rhyl to Chester as under:

		p. m.
Rhyl	depart	6:54
Prestatyn	pass	—
Mostyn	pass	—
Holywell	pass	—
Bagillt	pass	—
Flint	pass	—
Connah's Quay	depart	7:25
Queensferry	depart	7:30
Sandycroft	depart	7:38
Chester	arrive	7:50

Going to the trains office, I asked to see the guard's journal of the train for the previous day, and on examining it my conjectures as to a special stop were at once confirmed, for, clearly enough, there was a note on the journal stating that the train had "stopped at Mostyn, by special instructions, to set down Sir Philip Sandford and party. The rest of the working had been exactly in accordance with the time-table.

There was no passenger train to Mostyn till 11:45 a. m., but a fast goods train left at 10:20 a. m., and I decided to travel by that, and arranged for it to slacken at Mostyn to set me down.

"Now, Hughes," I said to the station-master, as soon as I arrived at Mostyn, "I shall be glad to relieve you of your little charge. I hope you haven't found him over-troublesome."

The station-master looked at me with some surprise. "I'm afraid you are trying to have a joke at my expense, Mr. Barnes," he said.

"Not at all," I replied. "I refer to the boy who got out of the 5:30 p. m. from Bangor here last night by mistake. He ought to have gone on to Connah's Quay."

The station-master shook his head. "There's a blunder somewhere," he said; "there was no boy got out here by mistake."

My spirits sank to zero. I was bitterly disappointed. I had felt absolutely certain of finding the boy at Mostyn, but it was evident that I was on the wrong scent.

"But the express did stop here last night, I suppose?" I said to the station-master after a short pause.

"Yes, sure," was the reply. "I got a telegram to say that it would stop to set down Sir Philip Sandford and party. Sir Philip lives, as perhaps you know, at Rhydowen Hall, a good eight miles in the country. He and all his family, except his eldest son and daughter, went over to Sir Philip's brother's place near Beaumaris on a visit; but during yesterday Mr. Reginald—that's the son left at home—got thrown from his horse and very badly hurt, and they telegraphed to Sir Philip and he came home, with his lady and the children, by the Bangor train and drove off at once."

"And you are quite sure that no little boy got out of the same train and was left on the platform?"

"Quite sure, Mr. Barnes. I couldn't have missed seeing him if he'd been there. There was only Sir Philip's own party."

"But if the boy didn't come to you or to your porter may you not have missed him and gone into the office, leaving him standing on the platform?"

"It's impossible, Mr. Barnes," and the old man shook his head decidedly.

"Were you in attendance on the train yourself?" I asked. "Just tell me everything that passed."

"Well, the porter and myself were both at the train. There was a goodish bit of luggage. It was in the cupboard of the carriage in which they had traveled, near the front of the train, and I helped the porter to get it out. Sir Philip and his lady and the children stood watching us, and then the porter put the luggage on the four-wheeled truck, and took it across the line to the down side, and out through the gate to the carriage which was waiting for them, and the party came across at the same time and got into the carriage."

"Sir Philip's own carriage, I suppose?" I said.

"Yes, sure. While the luggage was being loaded the party were getting into the carriage, but it was a rather tight squeeze, and one of the boys had to ride with the coachman. I lifted him on the seat myself and told the coachman there wasn't room for him inside, and I told Sir Philip what I had done, and he said 'All right,' and then they drove away."

"And you are absolutely certain that only the members of Sir Philip's own family alighted, and that there was no boy left standing about?"

"Quite certain, Mr. Barnes; yes, sure."

I next questioned the porter, who corroborated the station-master's story in every particular. He was quite certain that the boy I was seeking had not alighted at Mostyn.

SURGERY BY A BLIND MAN

Delicate and Dangerous Operations Done With Nerve and Skill.

When Dr. James R. Cocke, of 138 Huntington avenue, Boston, was two months old both of his eyes were ruined by a blundering doctor, who administered a wrong medicine.

Since then he has been totally blind. He is now 32 years of age, and he is consulted in difficult cases by the most eminent of the regular physicians of Boston.

He has performed recently two very delicate and difficult surgical operations, and in both cases the patients are doing well. He locates a disease by his sensitive touch, and he tells the color of goods in the same way, singular as it may appear. A lady who had eight or ten samples of dress goods, each about three inches square, and of different colors and shades of colors, handed them to Dr. Cocke the other day, and he at once told accurately the color, and even the shade of color, of each, and selected the samples of best quality. When handed several national bank and government currency bills he at once told the denomination of each, and the color, whether green or black. He tells the complexion of a person by touching the skin.

It is difficult to believe that a blind man could do this, but he is seen to do it, and accurately, too.

Dr. Cocke went among Buffalo Bill's Indians the other day, and designated their character by their voices, spoken in the Indian dialect. He has three diplomas from colleges in this and foreign countries, and four certificates of commendation from institutions where he has taken special courses of study. He went through a course of study under the famous Weir Mitchell. Before Dr. Cocke was 21 years of age he was employed by a large tobacco house to select the raw material for them. He never failed in getting the best quality and the most desirable color—all by the touch.

From this source he earned over $3,000, which paid his expenses at a university in Tennessee, where he stood at the head of his class. From Tennessee University he entered a medical school, where he was "to the fore" all through the class. He has taken special studies in five other institutions, a part of them in Europe. To attain all that this remarkable man has accomplished in the higher classics and professional studies of the colleges requires a large and firmly knit brain, perseverance and self-reliance to an unusual degree.

The two women patients that he operated upon last week are both doing well. In one case a large tumor was removed; the other was a still more difficult and delicate case. In lifting out the tumor Dr. Cocke found that he had twenty-four forceps holding veins and arteries. He tied blood vessels quickly and removed the forceps. He takes up and ties severed arteries in difficult cases more rapidly than any of the clear-seeing surgeons.

He has no idea of the appearance of the moon and the planets and stars, nor the sun; and night and day are all the same to him, except that the stillness of the night does not escape his attention. He is a hard worker and unflagging student. He has a typewriter, to whom he dictates. His wife writes medical prescriptions in Latin.—Hartford Times.

AN IDEAL FIELD FOR THE FLAG.

The forty-four stars now in the field of the American flag present a very jagged appearance. There does not seem to be any way to arrange them in equal rows; all sorts of forms and arrangements have been adopted by flagmakers. Perhaps some uniform plan of placing the stars would be settled if it were not that every one expects that the number will be shortly increased.

No change can be made, however, until 1896, as the law requires that additional stars shall be added only on the Fourth of July succeeding the admission of new States. In all probability Utah and New Mexico will be admitted next winter, which will increase the stars in the field to forty-six. But even then there will be almost the same irregularity, though the field will be more nearly filled up and will appear less jagged than now.

Forty-eight stars could be arranged so as to present a perfectly regular appearance, and it is not improbable that the number may be reached before long. Oklahoma, a booming Territory, is asking admission, and Arizona has long had pretentions to Statehood.

With the admission of those four organized Territories the national domain will be exhausted unless the Indian country is to be absorbed or admitted as an Indian State. There is, of course, Alaska, but that region can hardly be considered as a possible State. It might be added to our extreme Northwestern State, or even to California, as there is no constitutional objection to this.

An ideal number of stars for arrangement in the field of the flag would be forty-nine. Up, down, and diagonally there would be rows of seven, the mystic number.

It is quite possible that there may be forty-nine States before the end of the century. The civilized Indians in the Indian Territory may ask and obtain admission, or the American colonists in the Hawaiian Islands may come in. It is true that they now maintain an independent republic, but they constantly avow their purpose to ask admission to the Union.—San Francisco Chronicle.

A WASHINGTON ROMANCE.

With Verbatim Reports of Some Conversational Episodes.

CHAPTER I.

"Is it hauteur or is it a maiden's coyness that causes you to turn away your head, love?"

George Lindsey stood with his arm about the willowy form of Imogene St. Lawrence. The scene was the ancestral halls of the St. Lawrence family, in the northwest quarter of the city. George Lindsey had asked Imogene St. Lawrence to be his bride. That was just prior to the remark which opens our story. And the dear girl had softly promised; and the lovers stood there in the gloaming drinking that sweet intoxication that never comes but once.

"It is not hauteur, George," replied Imogene St. Lawrence, in tones like far off church bells. "But, George—don't spurn me—I have eaten of the common onion of commerce, and my breath, it is so freighted with its trenchant bouquet it would take the nap from your coat collar like a lawn mower. It is to spare the man she loves, George, which causes your Imogene to bury her nose in your vest."

"Look up, darling," and George Lindsey's tone had a glad note of sympathy. "I, too, have battened upon onions."

The lovers clung to each other like bats.

"But we'll have to put toe weights on pa, George! He'll step high and lively when he hears of this."

The lovers were seated on a sofa now; the prudent Imogene was taking a look ahead.

"Does not your father love me, pet?"

"I don't think he does," replied the fair girl, tenderly. "I bade him to ask you to dinner once, George. That was on your last trip up. He said he would sooner sleep with a wet dog, George, and refused. From that I infer his opposition to our union."

"We'll make a monkey of him," and George Lindsey hissed the words through his set teeth.

"And my brother?"

"As for him," said George Lindsey, and at this he began pacing the room like a lion, "as for your brother, if he so much as looks squint-eyed at our happiness he goes into the soup. From your father I would bear much, but when the balance of your family get in on the game they will pay for their chips in advance."

"Can we not leave them, George; leave them and fly together?"

"Your father is rich, Imogene; that is a sufficient answer." There was a touch of sternness in George Lindsey's tone, and the subject of flying was dropped right there.

CHAPTER II.

George Lindsey lived in the far off hamlet of Cumberland. He returned to his home. In three months he was to wed Imogene St. Lawrence. Benton St. Lawrence had a fit when it was first mentioned. At last he gave his consent.

"I had planned a title for you, Imogene." That was all he said.

CHAPTER III.

Three months are supposed to elapse.

CHAPTER IV.

It was dark when the train came to a panting pause in the Baltimore and Ohio depot. George Lindsey picked his way through the crowd with quick, nervous steps. It was to be his wedding night. He wondered if Imogene would meet him at the train. All at once he beheld the dear form walking just ahead.

"To-night, dearest, you are mine forever," whispered George Lindsey, tenderly seizing the sweet young creature by her larboard pinion.

The shrieks which emanated from that young woman could have given the best efforts of a wronged panther cards and spades. It was not Imogene St. Lawrence.

CHAPTER V.

The police bore away George Lindsey. They turned a deaf ear to his explanations.

"You make me weary," remarked the brutal turnkey to whom George Lindsey told his tale.

The cell door clanged, the lock clanked, the cruel key grated as it turned. George Lindsey was a prisoner. The charge the blotter bore against the prisoner was:

"Insulting women on the street."

When George Lindsey was once more alone he cursed as if his heart would break. At last he was calm.

CHAPTER VI.

Oh, woman, in our hours of ease,
Uncertain, coy, and hard to please;
But seen too oft, familiar with her face,
We first endure, then pity, then embrace.

CHAPTER VII.

The palace St. Lawrence was a flare and glare of lights. The rooms were jungles of palms and tropical plants. Flowers were everywhere, while the air tottered and fainted under the burden of their perfume.

Imogene St. Lawrence never looked more beautiful. Hour followed hour into the past. The guest moved from room to room. The preacher notified Benton St. Lawrence to pay or play. And still George Lindsey did not come.

"The sucker has laid down on us, my child," whispered Benton St. Lawrence to the weeping Imogene. "but may my hopes of heaven die if I have not my revenge. No man shall insult the proud house of St. Lawrence and get away with it; not on your cuff buttons."

The guests cheerfully dispersed, talking the most scandalous things in whispers.

CHAPTER VIII.

Imogene St. Lawrence's dream was over. The next night George Lindsey stood on the St. Lawrence porch and rang the bell. His eye and his pocket and his stomach were wild and vacant.

"Sic him, Bull!" said Benton St. Lawrence, bitterly. Bull bore several specimens from the quivering frame of George Lindsey, who vanished in the darkness with a hoarse cry.—Washington Post.

Great Guns, What Is This.

The New York Evening Post last night published the following introductory to their report of the Catholic Abstinence Union proceedings:

"A fraternal greeting from five hundred gold-cured delegates assembled in convention in the name of Keely at Plainfield, New Jersey, was received today at the opening of the third day's session of the twenty-fifth annual convention of the Catholic Total Abstinence Union of America, held in Columbus Hall next to the Church of the Paulist Fathers at Sixtieth street and Ninth avenue."

There is a mistake somewhere. Plainfield has got Keely cure graduates, but great guns it hasn't got five hundred of them assembled in convention. This is a base libel upon Plainfield and her Roosevelted saloons and barbers.

THE DAILY PRESS

ESTABLISHED MAY 10, 1887. PLAINFIELD, N. J., MONDAY, AUGUST 12, 1895. TWO CENTS A COPY—$5 A YEAR

VOORHEES AND PLAINFIELD.

The Senator's Chances are Said to be Fairly Bright in the City.

Senator Voorhees, who is a prominent candidate for the Republican nomination for Governor, is not taking any vacation this summer, but is hard at work in his law business trying to make up for the time he lost while chairman of the Senate Investigating Committee. The Senator is hopeful of making a good showing at the convention, and says if the rank and file of the party attend the primaries he is confident of having a majority of the Union county delegation. His chances are very bright for carrying Rahway, and fairly bright in Plainfield. The big struggle, however, will be in Elizabeth, which is the home of Kean and Voorhees. The latter has the powerful backing of Mayor Rankin and Congressman Fowler, but John Kean has many strong adherents, and the contests at the primaries will be of an exciting character. It is quietly rumored, however, among those who claim to know what is going on in the inner political circles, that the Kean-Voorhees forces will be united on the eve of the convention, and that Senator Voorhees will withdraw in favor of the ex-Congressman, and, as he did three years ago, he John Kean's campaign manager, if the latter as he confidently expects, receives the nomination.

Funny Way of Rahway Laws.

The dozen Rahway saloon-keepers who are charged with violating the Sunday law Friday afternoon filed their bonds with the City Attorney, agreeing to pay $20 fine each, with $8.40 costs added, in case the test case of Saloon-keeper Lambert is decided adversely by the Supreme Court. Should the decision be in Lambert's favor then the bonds will be void.

Sprained Her Ankle.

While Mrs. Havens, of Watchung avenue, was stepping from the sidewalk to the street in front of White's dry goods store Saturday night, she sprained her ankle. She was about to get into the carriage at the time and suffered severely from the injury.

Mr. Havens and Clarence Johnson, a clerk in White's, assisted her into the carriage.

Hop at The Netherwood.

The usual Saturday night hop at the Netherwood was thoroughly enjoyed. There were thirty-five couple present from Netherwood and Plainfield.

Prof. Gioscia and his orchestra furnished delightful music. This orchestra is Governor Morton's favorite one and plays for him at his home during the winter months.

The Sunday Barber Business.

A reporter of The Daily Press noted the various barber shop in the city yesterday morning and discovered that almost everyone was doing an exceptionally light business. Nearly all thought that their shops might as well be closed.

Front Street Improvements.

Schwed Bros., the Front street clothers, will build an extension on the rear of their building. John P. Emmons has the contract for the masonwork and Connelly, Sheppard, & Goodfellow for the carpentering. Harry C. Runyon drew the contracts.

Powerful Sermon.

Rev. Ashley Jones, of Kentucky, preached two powerful and interesting sermons in the First Baptist Baptist church yesterday and large congregations were present at each service. Mr. Jones will occupy the same pulpit next Sunday.

Prompt Payment.

Fred W. Bird received a check of $75 today from the Travelers Accident Insurance Company, through their agent, Wm. V. Munday, for a fall from his bicycle at Asbury Park, three weeks ago.

Real Estate Transfers.

The following transfers of Plainfield property has been recorded in the County Clerk's office from August 1st to 7th inclusive:

Isaac W. Rushmore et ux to Maria Louise Rushmore, lots on Eighth street, $1,800.

The Mutual Life Insurauce Company, of New York, to the inhabitants of Plainfield, lots, Rock avenue, $15,500.

To Be a Fine Avenue.

The work of laying out and grading Martine avenue was completed Saturday night by Michael Udahl. It is now one of the finest avenues in the city.

In order to introduce Chamberlain's Cough Remedy here we sold several dozen bottles on strict guarantee and have found every bottle did good service. We have used it ourselves and think it superior to any other. W. I. Mowrey, Jarvisville, W. Va. For sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves; T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

ON THE GREAT CONVENTION.

DR. C. R. BARNES TALKS ABOUT THE CATHOLIC MOVEMENT.

Their Meeting in New York at This Time Was a Significant—Bound to be a Great Power for Temperance.

Rev. Dr. C. R. Barnes, of the First M.E.church, last night preached from the subject, "The Late Catholic Total Abstinence Convention," and said in part:

A remarkable event occurred in New York, last week, which deserves more than a passing notice. Indeed, I am persuaded that had it taken place at any other time than midsummer, it would have been today the theme of many a sermon. That to which I refer is the twenty-fifth annual convention of the Catholic Total Abstinence Union of America.

This convention and its deliverances must be taken as, at least, semi-official; being held in the Cathedral under the sanction of the Archbishop, with the Pontifical Mass solemnized by Monsignor Satolli, the Apostolic delegate.

What makes it more significant, was its coming while the city was in a ferment because some of its officials are making earnest efforts to enforce the laws, and that against the powerful rum power. To see the Church, more largely represented among the saloon keepers than any other, stamping the traffic with its deserved infamy, is certainly very refreshing.

Three vital subjects were discussed, and most positive declarations made respecting them, either by the officers of the Union or by its invited speakers: "The Saloon," "The Enforcement of the Law," and "The Observance of the Sabbath." In addition, those who favor a compromise with the degraded notions of freedom and immorality brought to our shores from other lands, were roundly scored.

I propose to give you some of these declarations, and ask you to carefully consider them, and see if in them there are not indications of a great advance promised in the fight for our better principles.

THE SALOON DENOUNCED.

Rev. J. M. Cleary, President of the Union spoke as follows:

Our Church has again and again voiced its convictions in no uncertain terms. There can be no affiliation between the Church and the saloon. The Church will not, and cannot, permit the drinking den to flourish beneath the shadow of the consecrated house of prayer. A man cannot be a good Catholic, a faithful and docile child of the Church, and continue in the "unbecoming business" of conducting a liquor saloon.

The saloon is the great and unrivalled barrier that impedes the poor man's progress to independence and plenty. Into the coffers of the American saloon the wage-earners of the country generously pour a billion of dollars a year. American opportunities are wasted because of the maddening curse of drink. Destitution and want in this country, in the vast majority of instances, are the result of profligate patronage of the saloon-keeper's business. If so many of the toilers of the land simply camp in the wilderness of great tenement structures and drag out their lives in hopeless poverty, the lamentable fact is, to an alarming extent, the result of paying a too generous tribute to the liquor seller's trade.

CHILDHOOD BLIGHTED BY THE SALOON.

With our ever-increasing advantages of education and mental culture, with the schoolhouse within sight of every man's door, anxiously inviting all the children of men to come and drink at the fountains of knowledge, there would not be a poor man's child in all this fair land cursed with the darkness of ignorance were it not for the beastliness of intemperance that brutalizes the lives of the poor.

Public and private munificence has embellished every city in the land with well-stocked public libraries, placed at the disposal of every lover of knowledge. The saloon and the debasing traffic upon which it thrives prevent a love for learning from being planted in the hearts of the children of toil. How blessed it would be if the feet of the laborer's child were trained to the way that leads to the free public library, instead of treading the desolate path that leads from the liquor den to the uninviting abode into which generosity toward the saloon forces the unfortunate man to shelter his wretched family.

Remember that these are not the words of some fanatical ignoramus, who is led away by a hobby, nor the hired lecturer, but a priest of the Church, whose life is devoted to the service of his fellow-men; and who, doubtless, has had many opportunities of proving all and even more than he stated.

ENFORCEMENT OF LAW.

Mr. Roosevelt, President of the Police Board said:

The Board of which I have the honor of being a member stand squarely on the platform of the enforcement of the laws of the land. We hold that our duty is to enforce the law impartially and without fear or favor. We have not revived any obsolete law. We have merely taken a law which was always alive against the man who had not wealth or political influence, and we have enforced it with rigid impartiality against all law-breakers, rich and poor, great and small.

You all know the clamor that our action caused. At first we were met on every hand with the statement that we could not enforce the law. The answer is this—that so far, at least, we have enforced it. Never in the memory of any man now living have the saloons been closed as we have closed them.

TURN VEREINS CELEBRATE.

Prizes and Winners of the Anniversary Events.

The fifteenth anniversary of the Gesang and Turn Verein society was appropriately celebrated yesterday. The society, with their friends met at the hall on Somerset street in the morning at ten o'clock, when the prize turning exhibition was given. About thirty-four members of the society took part. They were divided into three classes according to size and ability. The exhibitions on the horse, rings, and in climbing resulted as follows:

At the completion of the above all adjourned to the dining hall, where dinner was served.

At three o'clock in the afternoon they met on the hill, where the jumping contests were held. They resulted as follows:

High jump—prize, silver medal, J. Meissner; running broad jump, prize, silver medal medal, Bert Hanson. For best all-round work Fred Bimble secured first prize and honorable mention. The following also received honorable mention: H. Meyer, Gus Feiring, A. Sutterlin and Wm. Pierson.

The prize judges were John Metzcher, teacher of the National Turn Verein, of Newark, and Fred Hosp, champion amatuer turner of the United States, of Newark.

After the prize contests the Pyramid Section of the Turn Verein, of Newark, gave a fancy exhibition, which was most creditable.

GREEN IN MORE TROUBLE.

Breaks Windows and Shoots off Guns—Held for Grand Jury.

Again Joseph Green is in trouble and this time it is likely to go hard with him. His wife has been stopping for a few days at the boarding house of David Robinson in Washingtonville. Joseph heard of it and he became angered. Saturday night he and two friends were at Hipp's saloon drinking rather heavily.

Green decided to go to Robinson's house and take his wife away. The two friends went with him. It was about two o'clock Sunday morning when they reached the place and approaching the house broke in a window and tore the sash out. At the same time a revolver was dischaged several times. The inmates were much frightened, but succeeded in chasing the midnight trespassers away.

As soon as possible, Constable G. N. Stewart, of the township, secured a warrant on complaint of Robinson and captured Green. He was brought to the borough lock-up.

This morning Justice Crosley gave a hearing and placed him under $200 bail to await the action of the Grand Jury. The other two men are known and will be arrested today. It is not likely that Green will secure bail. He was placed in the cell after the hearing.

Frank W. Morse to Talk.

Frank W. Morse, father of the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor of Trinity Reformed Church, will address the young people tonight at 8 o'clock, and tell them about the rescue work in Chinatown and the slums of New York city. Mr. Morse is a member of one of the rescue bands and his address will therefore be full of personal observations of that very excellent cause.

Attention, Knights.

The members of Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, are requested to meet at the lodge rooms at 1:30 o'clock on Tuesday afternoon to attend the funeral of their late brother, William Blimm. All other Knights of Pythias are cordially invited to attend. Crescen Division, U. R. K. of P., are requested to meet at same place.

By order of the committee.

Nail in His Foot.

Matthew Coon, of East Front street, is kept at home with a very sore foot which was caused by running a nail in it. The foot is badly swollen, and causes much pain.

My boy was taken sick with a disease resembling bloody flux. The first thing I thought of was Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. Two doses of it settled the matter and cured him sound and well. I heartily recommend this remedy to all persons suffering from a like complaint. I will answer any inquiries regarding it when stamp is inclosed. I refer to any county official as to my reliability. Wm. Roach, J. P., Primroy, Campbell Co., Tenn. For sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves; T. S. Armstrong, manager.

WILLIAM PETERSON'S FUNERAL.

Beautiful Tributes of Flowers Show the Esteem in Which He Was Held.

The funeral services over the remains of the late William Peterson were held at 2:30 o'clock Saturday afternoon from the residence of his parents on Watchung avenue. Rev. Dr. E. M. Rodman, of Grace P. E. church, officiating, using the Episcopal service. Members of Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, K. of P., and the Swedish Lodge of which decedent was a member attended in a body.

The floral tributes were beautiful and consisted of a standing cross, with an anchor on one side and a heart on the other. In the centre were the words "Willie at Rest." Another tribute was a pillow with the words, K. of P., No. 74, F. C. B. The Swedish Lodge gave a choice wreath tied with blue and yellow ribbon. Miss Lincoln, of Park avenue, sent an exquisite bouquet of white roses, and there were several other pieces from friends.

Interment was in North Plainfield cemetery. The pallbearers were:

R. V. Saums, William Young, T. Colleen, W. J. Ackens, J. Armstrong and G. Clark.

Charles McGinley acted as marshal of the day.

THE MILL OF JUSTICE.

The Usual Monday Morning Batch of Offenders Appear.

Judge Coddington had his usual Monday morning batch of offenders to deal with this morning, but the bicycle riders appear to have taken warning at last Monday's events and kept off the sidewalk. There were two cyclists who came up and they were arrested for riding without a light on East Second street Friday evening. Their names were Wallace McKenna and Joseph Cartright and were given their choice between paying $5 or taking ten days at the county jail.

Henry E. Boutron pleaded guilty to the charge of being disorderly on Somerset street Saturday, and refusing to obey the officer. He paid a fine of $5 in preference to twenty days free board at Elizabeth.

Drunk at Netherwood on Saturday evening was the charge brought against Thomas Hamilton, by Officer Myers, and after finding him guilty of the charge Judge Coddington decided he should pay a fine of $3 or take ten days at the Elizabeth jail.

A little extra liquor came near costing John Hickey $5, but the Judge suspended sentence on the charge of being drunk and disorderly at the depot, Friday evening.

The long postponed case of the City vs. Dennis Kane, for trespassing on coal cars, came up and he was found guilty, but sentence was suspended. George W. DeMeza acted as his counsel.

CAME TOGETHER.

A Separation by Earthly Law and Another by Heavenly Law.

Two letters came to the office of Lawyer Harry C. Runyon on Friday evening. One stated that the divorce case brought by his client, Mrs. J. B. Heath, had been granted by the Court of Chancery, and the other told of the death of the defendant, James B., formerly of this city, at the Bellevue hospital, where he had been removed from the City hospital on Blackwell's Island, a week before his death.

Mrs. Heath lives in this city with her four-year-old little boy.

Nothing But Sand.

The three cyclists, Arthur B. Crane, S. Clinton Crane, and Walter Probasco, who are touring through southern New Jersey, have been heard from. They spent Sunday at Cape May according to their plan. Up to Tuckerton, 132 miles from home, they found very good roads, but after that A. B. Crane writes that they have seen nothing but sand.

The Dog Was Blind.

A blind dog was the cause of a painful fall for Ed. Sowden, Friday evening. He was riding his wheel through Scotch Plains when the blind creature ran right in his path and brought him to the ground rather suddenly. Sowden escaped with a few painful bruises but the wheel was badly twisted and generally disabled.

Electric Bitters.

Electric Bitters is a medicine suited for any season, but perhaps more generally needed in the spring, when the languid exhausted feeling prevails, when the liver is torpid and sluggish and the need of a tonic and alterative is felt. A prompt use of this medicine has often averted long and perhaps fatal bilious fevers. No medicine will act more surely in counteracting and freeing the system from the malarial poison. Headache, indigestion, constipation, dizziness yield to Electric Bitters. Only 50c per bottle at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

ALL WERE AT THE CONCERT.

A COSMOPOLITAN CROWD CONGREGATE TO HEAR MUSIC.

The First of the Series of Recitals Prove a Popular Success.—Nearby Houses Were Prettily Decorated.

"It's warm, do you know it?" remarked the Tired Young Man, as he wiped the perspiration from the inside of his straw hat, and leaned up against the iron fence at the corner of La Grande avenue and Franklin place on Saturday evening. Just then the band struck up the inspiring Honeymoon March, and the Lively Young Lady, who stood beside him, unconsciously kept time to it. "I know it" she replied, "but I love to listen to music out of doors at night, and it's much nicer than staying at home. Who did you say furnished this open air concert?"

"Councilman Frost," drawled out her companion. "He had those extra electric lights put up in the square, and got Guttman's band to supply the music." Just then a party of cyclists rode up and dismounted in front of the couple. The Lively Young Lady recognized her brother among them, and called to him.

"Come on over her, you can't stay in the middle of the road, the policeman there won't let you. Put your wheel against the curb like all the rest." And then the party of riders joined the rest of their fellow-cyclists who were stretched all along the sides of the adjoining streets.

"You poor boy," exclaimed the sister, "what's the matter?" as the wheelman put his handkerchief about his neck. "I wanted to go calling" he answered, "but my collar is all melted down, and look, here comes the Rapid Young Man wearing a stand-up collar on this hot night."

The last strains of the Honeymoon March had died away, and the musicians mopped their heads preparatory to starting the next selection. The five corners were all crowded, and the number kept rapidly increasing. Just then the Timid Young Lady and her father, the Cross Old Man, appeared on the scene.

"I'm not coming out with you again on a night like this," he growled, "There is nothing left of my shirt-front, and the little boys in the crowd keep running into me all the time; they should not be allowed to attend these concerts."

"Oh, papa," exclaimed the Timid Young Lady, "don't get angry. Let's walk up here out of the crowd and see the decorations. Whose houses are they?" she asked of the cycling brother who stood nearby.

"Why, let's see," he said, as he tried not to be upset by a crowd of boys who kept chasing around through the throng of listeners, "Mrs. Depew lives on the corner, and has those Japanese lanterns hung from the trees and piazza. That large house next door, with the brilliantly lighted piazza, is where Mr. Marsh lives, and the next one, with the lanterns hung over the front lawn and the large party on the piazza, is the residence of Mr. Morse."

"That pale light on the houses makes them look like immense hotels," said the Lively Young Lady. "I hope some of the rest of the people living around here will decorate next time, for the effect is certainly very beautiful."

And still the assemblage grew in numbers with those who came to listen to the music, and swelter in the heat of one of the warmest evenings in August. The police kept the streets and lawns clear, but Franklin square was otherwise completely surrounded by the listening throng, while the streets leading to it were lined for some distance.

"Just look at the people on the piazza of that empty house," said the Cross Old man, indignantly. "That's the house of George Wharton Edwards, the great artist," explained the obliging young cyclist. "He's away for the summer."

But there were others at this open air concert besides this party. There was the factory girl, in her holiday dress, who sat along the edge of the streets with her beau, and where they murmured sweet nothings to each other, as the band alternately played and thought how warm it was. Then the boys and girls were out in full force and flirted to their heart's content.

When the concert was about half concluded, some one asked that the Honeymoon March be played again. The request was granted, and afterwards that popular air was played for the third time, and every time it called forth loud applause, more than could be expected on such a night.

All of the selections were well rendered, while several of them were so heartily applauded that the band courteously repeated them.

The concert was a success from every point of view, except that in the direction of the thermometer. And everybody, including the Cross Old Man, gave Councilman Frost a hearty vote of thanks in their minds, as they took their various ways toward home or the nearest soda-water fountain.

It did not take long for the crowd to disperse, and as the Lively Young Lady and the Tired Young Man sat drinking ice cream soda, the young man raised up energy enough to say, "Let's go next Saturday, if it don't rain?" and his fair companion murmured, as she finished her ice cream, "I shall be pleased to go if you will take me."

And he is going to take her.

HONAN TALKED TOO MUCH.

Chief Grant Has a Little Spat With the Sewer Man.

W. Arthur, a contractor and builder, with his horse and wagon attempted to drive through Washington street to Front this morning. When he reached Front street he found that thoroughfare closed. He got out of the wagon and let down the board that was resting on some pipe.

Harry Honan saw the affair and at once objected to the man driving through. Arthur was in such a position that he could not go back with his horse and wagon, but Honan would not let him pass. He then sought Chief Grant who went to the place and told Arthur and the man to go through. The Chief and Honan had some words, whereupon the former told the latter to appear before Judge Coddington at nine o'clock which he did.

The matter was then settled satisfactorily.

Dogs Have Friends in Elizabeth.

The people of Elizabeth do not approve of the action of the police in trying to enforce the dog ordinance, which the Court of Common Pleas declared to be null and void. An appeal has been taken by the City Attorney to the Supreme Court on a writ of certiorari granted by Judge Van-Syckel, and meanwhile the police say this acts as a stay, and that the slaughtering and asphyxiation of unlicensed and unmuzzled dogs can be resumed. The dog catcher started on Thursday on his rounds. Physicians here denounce the muzzling of dogs as absurd, and declare that the practice, instead of acting as a preventive against hydrophobia, effects just the reverse, as it irritates and annoys the canines.

About Mr. Lounsbury.

In speaking of the Hastings Card Co., the Copy Hook has this to say about Fred C. Lounsbury, of this city, who is its president:

The president and Treasurer of the Hastings Card Company, Ltd., has long been identified with the cardboard business, and his ability as executive officer and tact in advertising has kept his company well in the lead in the lines they handle.

In March, 1892, Mr. Lounsbury was compelled, on account of ill health, caused by overwork, to retire from business; but after an absence of two years returned to his post in the spring of 1894, and has since been making his presence felt in a most practical manner—increase of business and a general betterment of facilities for handling the same.

There Are None Left.

Charles W. Burton and Charles R. Norman, both of Watchung avenue, returned yesterday from their fishing trip out on the ocean. They brought with them some of the results of their prowess which were greatly enjoyed by all who received them. Their catch of bluefish was unusually large.

Carriers Come and Go.

Letter-carrier William Demarest resumed his duties today after enjoying his annual vacation. Carrier James T. Mullen starts today on his fifteen-day leave of absence. He and his bride will spend the time in various parts of Pennsylvania.

Too Hot To Work.

The surveyors on the sewer work stopped work today at noon on account of the excessive heat.

INDIAN DEPREDATIONS

Women and Girls Brutally Maltreated.

A Band of Fiends Captured After a Desperate Struggle—Well Supplied With Ammunition and Stolen Property — Attempts Made To Lynch Them Unsuccessful.

Wagoner, I. T., Aug. 12.—With the exception of one, the gang of Indians who have committed a series of diabolical crimes since July 30 in the territory were captured near Okmulgee last Thursday after a desperate fight and started for the Fort Smith, Ark., jail, to avoid being lynched. News has been received here that a number of Muscogee citizens have gone across country to Fort Gibson to intercept the Missouri Pacific train carrying the fiends and their captors for the purpose of dealing out summary justice. The gang which began its heinous operations by murdering Deputy United States Marshal John Garrett at Okmulgee and escaping to the hills of the Creek nation was led by Rufus Buck, a Ucke Indian. His followers were Samuel Sampson, Meorna July, Bud Lucky, alias Lucky Davis; Albert Stake and Levy Davis.

Terrible Sufferings of Women.

The day after murdering Garrett the gang met a white man and his daughter in a wagon. Covering the man with their guns the Indians took the girl from the wagon and each assaulted her within sight of her father. Their next victims were Ben Callahan and a negro boy, whom the gang met on the road. They murdered the boy and beat Callahan so that they believed him to be dead when they left the scene after robbing the man of money, boots and saddle. At the country stores of West and J. Nerrburg, at Oiket, the murderers and robbers held up the owners and took away everything they could carry. Next in their path of crime they met two white women and a girl fourteen years old. All were repeatedly assaulted by the fiends, who added another murder to their list. The girl's feet and hands were tied and the unfortunate creature was assaulted until life was extinct.

The Fiends Captured.

By this time the country in the vicinity of these crimes had become aroused. Federal and Indian posses, including the Creek light horse guards, in command of Capt. Edward Barry, and Deputy Marshals Jesse Jones, M. D. Irwin, Samuel Hayes and other determined officers, started at first to capture or kill the murderers of Garrett, that being the first crime heard of. Thursday afternoon the pursuers came up with the gang twelve miles from Okmulgee and divided, one half going to a place of ambush, into which the other party drove the gang from the summit of a hill. A fight with rifles and revolvers followed, in which Capt. Barry fell from his horse, a bullet grazing his head, and three horses were killed. Five of the gang were captured alive, but the sixth, Lucky Davis, escaped.

Narrowly Escaped Lynching.

In the possession of the murderers were 1,000 rounds of ammunition and a great quantity of stolen property. They were taken to Okmulgee, where a mob of citizens, bent on lynching them, surrounded the officers, but the latter escaped to Muskogee with their prisoners. Another mob with ropes and rifles awaited their arrival, but again the posse cheated the mob of its prey by getting sufficient warning to land the gang in jail. This was Saturday night, and the town was kept in an uproar all night by the attempts to lynch the Indians and the efforts of the business men to prevent mob violence. The mob was finally quieted long enough to allow of a third escape of the posse and prisoners on a train for Fort Worth.

DEPREDATIONS BY YAQUIS.

A Prominent Mexican Killed and Federal Soldiers Attacked.

Tucson, Ariz., Aug. 12.—Word was received her to-day that at sunrise, Aug. 4, a gang of nearly 100 Yaqui Indians attacked the Santa Rosa hacienda of Don Juan de Bojorquez, thirty miles from Guaymas, Mexico. They killed him and robbed the place of everything available. A few days previously another band surprised a troop of federal soldiers and Captain Lopez, who was in command. For ten years these Indians have been a menace to the peace of Sonora, and an effort will be made on the part of the Federal government to suppress the depredations. Besides filling the country with widows and orphans they have destroyed property aggregating in value $7,000,000. Bojorquez was one of those who survived the dangers incident upon the fateful July 13, 1853, but he was badly wounded in the engagement. He was connected by blood and marriage to one of the most prominent families in Sonora.

Student Porter Badly Burned.

Chicago, Aug. 12.—Louis Porter, who was struck by lightning sometime ago in Arizona when on a hunting expedition, is at the Auditorium hotel. He is on his way home to Stamford, Conn., in company with Dr. H. P. Gieb, who was sent from Stamford to take the young man east. Porter's brother was killed at the time he was knocked down by the bolt. Dr. Gieb says his patient is badly burned on his right shoulder and side, but he believes he will get well.

Thrown Under a Train.

Lynn., Mass., Aug. 12.—While Martin O'Day and his wife were walking alongside of the Boston and Maine railroad tracks Saturday night the woman's dress was caught by the steps of a car on a passenger train. Her husband tried to save her, but both were thrown under a train. O'Day died from his injuries, and his wife is in a precarious condition.

Imprisoned for Wanting To Duel.

London, Aug. 12.—A dispatch from Cologne to the Central News says that Freioerr Stumm-Halberg, a member of the German Reichstag, has been sentenced to a fortnight's imprisonment in a fortress for having issued a challenge to a duel.

Will Manage Harvard Athletics.

Cambridge, Mass., Aug. 12.—Fred W. Moore has again accepted the position of manager of the business end of Harvard athletics for the next year.

WRECK OF A COAL TRAIN.

Engineer, Fireman and Brakeman Killed.

Springfield, O., Aug. 12.—A fatal wreck occurred on the Ohio Southern railroad yesterday afternoon at Paint river, forty miles south of here. At this point there is a two-span bridge over the river. A westbound coal train of thirty-five cars struck the bridge, which had been considered perfectly safe. The structure gave way in both spans and the engine dropped twenty-five feet into the water, which at that point is thirty feet deep. The coal cars followed the engine until twenty had piled up in the river. The remainder of the train had by this time become checked and stopped on the track. Engineer Clint Radcliffe, Fireman Martin Houser and Brakeman William Hincox, who were all in the cab at the time the bridge collapsed, went down without a moment's warning and were drowned. They are at present buried in the river under 400 tons of coal. They all lived here. The remainder of the train's crew escaped. In connection with the accident it is reported that four tramps who were stealing a ride went to death with the train. This cannot be substantiated until the debris in the river is examined, but seems to be true. A wrecking train from here is now on the scene doing what it can. Late his evening it was learned that the cause of the wreck was that the bridge caught fire and had half burned in two at the time the engine struck it. Work was begun at once on the wreck when a crew and train arrived. The debris was removed so that the body of the engineer could be seen pinned in the cab, but cannot be released. The engineer and fireman were single. The brakeman was married and leaves a widow and two children.

A HANDSOME CATHEDRAL.

St. James' at Red Bank, N. J., Dedicated Yesterday.

Red Bank, N. J., Aug. 12.—A great crowd attended the dedication services of the new St. James Roman Chtholic cathedral here yesterday morning. The services were conducted by Mgr. Satolli, assisted by the Rt. Rev. Mgr. Thomas R. Moran, V. G., assistant priest of the church; Rev. J. A. McFaul, D. D., bishop of Trenton, and many other clergymen were present. Pontifical vespers were celebrated last night by Mgr. Satolli, and Bishop McFaul preached the sermon. The corner stone of the church was laid July 17, 1894. The church is of Romanesque design, built of rock face stone, with limestone trimmings. The church will seat 800 people, and it is all completed except the tower, which will be 90 feet high. The edifice when finished will cost $50,000. The furniture and statues are very expensive. Numberless arc and gas lamps light the building, many being studded in the ceiling. It is claimed to be the handsomest church in the state.

BIG BLAZE AT NEWARK.

About 500 Hands Thrown Out of Work—Loss, $500,000.

Newark, N. J., Aug. 12.—The fire which visited this city yesterday afternoon was very destructive. The blaze occurred in the extensive works of the Central Stamping company. The total loss is estimated at $500,000. The fire originated in the main building, gained great headway and soon the whole building was a mass of flames. The fire swept through the extensions and adjoining buildings belonging to the works and completely ruined the whole plant. Several frame buildings near the works were crushed in by falling walls. Several firemen were badly burned. The works have been running on full time, and the buildings were full of valuable patented machinery. The insurance will probably foot up $250,000. The cause of the fire is unknown. About 480 hands are thrown out of employment.

MILLIONS IN SMOKE

Large Forests Destroyed by Fire.

Settlers Ruined and Suffering in Washington — Many Narrow Escapes, But No Loss of Life Yet Reported — Fighting the Flames with Steam—Fires Spreading.

Whatcom, Wash., Aug. 12.—Throughout the past week forest fires have raged in the timbered sections of the northern part of the state. In the counties of Whatcom and Skagit hundreds of acres of valuable timber and many ranches have been laid waste. No cases of loss of life have been reported, but there have been many narrow escapes. The actual loss of property is large, approximating a million dollars in the two counties, but the suffering of the ruined settlers exceeds the loss in money.

Steam in Place of Water.

The town of Mount Vernon, Skagit county, was visited. The shingle mill of Ladge & Mitchell and four residences were burned. At Montborne, near by, the dry house, warehouse and a million and a half of shingles were burned. Mount Vernon has been enveloped in smoke for a week. Shingle mills in this vicinity have been turning steam on the flames in place of water. The fires on Fidalgo island have been extensive. Five barns and farm houses were burned. Hamilton, Skagit county; Prairie, Whatcom county; Daurence, Whatcom county, and other places all suffered loss by the forest fires.

Praying for Rain.

The fire is now spreading in the direction of Laconnor, Skagit county. Every one is praying for rain, but no sign of it appears. Reports from Anacortes, Wash., say as a result of the protracted dry weather, the most extensive forest fires in years are prevailing on Whidby and Camano islands and many farms have been ruined. Roche Harbor suffered a slight loss. From Aberdeen, Wash., comes word that the fires which have raged for a week in the counties of Mason, Thurston.

No Lives Lost.

Montanezano, Wash., Aug. 12.—A destructive fire is sweeping over the eastern part of Chehalis county. Fences, buildings and growing crops have been destroyed. The damage cannot yet be estimated, but will be large. The loss falls on many small farmers who have lost practically all they possessed. The fire is not yet under control and threatens several large shingle mills. So far no lives have been lost, but one man lost eyesight from fighting the flames.

FLOOD AT DANSVILLE.

Streets Turned Into Torrents—Landslide on the Lackawanna.

Dansville, N. Y., Aug. 12.—A terrific rain and wind storm, accompadied by heavy thunder and sharp lightning, passed over this section yesterday, lasting nearly two hours. The rain fell in torrents, flooding the streets with rushing streams of water from the head of the valley above. The wind blew a gale and many trees were twisted off and blown down. Lightning struck in several places in the outskirts of the town, and many trees were shattered. A cloudburst on the Lackawanna caused a bad landslide, and the road along the hillside was washed out and cut badly in many places. The storm is remarkable for the large volume of water that fell in the short space of time, nearly four inches being registered.

STORM IN BALTIMORE.

Catholic Church Destoyed and Much Other Damage Done.

Baltimore, Aug. 12.—A wind storm of cyclonic proportions accompanied by a heavy downpour of rain and nail visited this city yesterday afternoon. Houses were unroofed, trees uprooted, windows smashed, telegraph, telephone and trolley wires broken and other damage done within a few minutes that will require weeks to repair. The most serious damage was the demolition of St. Elizabeth's Catholic church, in course of erection on east Baltimore street opposite Patterson park. All parts of the city suffered. The storm came from the northwest. It continued at intervals for three hours but most of the damage was done shortly after the storm appeared.

She was charged with stealing jewelry to the value of £2,000 from Mrs. Gibbons, of London, whose guest she was during July under the name of Milly Millett. The jewelry was recovered.

Parkersburg, W. Va., Aug. 12.—The intense heat was severe on the state militia during the review by Governor McCorkle Saturday. The thermometer reached 103. A MOTHER'S DUTY

TOWARDS HER DAUGHTERS.

Suggestions Which Bear Repeating, as Their Importance is Immeasurable.

[SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.]

Only a few years ago even the medical profession scouted the idea that young girls could suffer from the misery of uterus troubles.

That form of disease, it was claimed, came only to married women.

When Lydia E. Pinkham first sent out the news of her great discovery, there was no lack of harsh speech from those whose practice and opinions she set at defiance.

But when young girls by the hundreds were absolutely cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, then the tongues of the traducers were stilled, and faith was allowed to live in the hearts of the people.

Young girls are subject to this trouble. It robs them of the buoyancy of youth. It makes all effort distasteful.

It causes retention and suppression of menses, leucorrhœa, severe headache, waxy complexion, depression, weakness, loss of appetite and interest.

Certainly mothers ought to know that these are all symptoms of the one cause of nearly all the suffering that comes to women; and to save their daughters ought to begin treatment at once.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the surest and most natural remedy for women ever compounded. It will accomplish its work with certainty.

THE GERMAN FETES

Celebrations of War Victories Continue.

Criticisms of Emperor William's Woerth Speech—The Object of the Demonstrations Is To Celebrate the Founding of the Unity of the Empire and Not To Offend France.

Berlin, Aug. 12.—The war celebrations continue. The Third Brandenburg artillery regiment celebrated Saturday the anniversary of its going into field service. The veterans of the regiment took part in the celebration. Wreaths were placed on the graves of those members of the regiment who had been killed in battle, after which the regiment paraded. Later there were fetes at the Stadt Park casino, where a banquet was given in the evening. During the banquet Col. Humann announced that Emperor William had appointed Col. Stumpf a general in memory of the battle of Spicheren.

Celebrations at the Niederwald.

At Rudesheim, the site of the Niederwald monument, where the celebrations have been of daily occurrence, Secretary Zander of the Imperial bank made a patriotic speech. The Eighteenth Hessian fusileer regiment arrived at Rudesheim on three special Rhine steamers. After landing they formed in line and marched up to the monument, on which they deposited a wreath. The colonel of the regiment made a patriotic speech, winding up by calling for cheers for the emperor and the empire, which were given with deafening enthusiasm. The whole regiment then joined in singing "The Watch on the Rhine." The Seventy-third Hanoverian fusileer regiment celebrated beforehand the battle of Colombey, the coming manoeuvres in which the regiment will take part preventing it from celebrating on the actual anniversary of the battle.

German Press Indignant.

None of Emperor William's doings in England has attracted greater interest here than his speech on the anniversary of the battle of Woerth, the first decisive encounter that took place between the German and French armies on August 6, 1870. The speech was regarded by German as a happy thought well carried out, and consequently the irritation of the German press on reading the adverse criticism of the London Daily News on the speech was proportionate to the previous enthusiasm. The Daily News described the speech as a spontaneous indiscretion that was not calculated to allay the suspicions of England and Germany's French neighbors. Emperors, the paper added, ought to be strong enough to resist the temptation to make speeches. This, coming on top of an offensive article published by the London Standard, filled the cup of German indignation to overflowing.

The Idea of the Fetes.

The idea that the fetes in celebration of the German victories are intended to reopen French wounds is repudiated. The main object of the demonstrations is to celebrate the founding of the unity of the empire and not to remind France that she is a conquered nation. Germans hold that without taking the feelings of any nation into consideration they have the right to celebrate the events that placed Germany in the forefront of the nations of the world, and it is held in many quarters that the British adverse criticism has its basis in jealousy.

Emperor William I. Memorial.

The ceremonies that will attend the dedication of the Emperor William I. memorial on Aug. 18 are anticipated with interest. It will be a brilliant function, though the interest is somewhat lessened by the inability of Prince Bismarck to be present. This ceremony will be followed about a fortnight later by the consecration of the Emperor William Memorial church near the Zoological gardens on September 1. The emperor, empress and the imperial princes will attend the consecration. On the same day there will be a parade of the German-American veterans, who will be reviewed by the emperor, and a great military musical tatoo will be given in front of the royal castle on the eve of the Sedan day, September 1.

STOLE GOLD ORE.

Mine Manager Attacked by Masked Robbers.

Leadville, Col., Aug. 12.—A sensational robbery occurred at the Gordon mine, twenty miles from here, last evening. The Gordon is the second richest gold mine in the state, and it appears manager S. P. Brown had taken out some rich ore preparatory to bringing it to Leadville. He took it in a sack to his house, but had not been at home an hour before two masked men entered and knocking him down with a gun took the ore. Mrs. Brown and two women visitors were relieved of diamonds to the amount of $500. The gold ore stolen was almost pure, and is said to amount to many thousand dollars. After the robbery the two men started toward Leadville.

Italians Incensed.

Niagara Falls, N. Y., Aug. 12.—An Italian laborer on the Niagara Falls and Lewiston railroad was run over and killed by the construction train yesterday. A number of his countrymen became incensed and threatened to kill the engineer and fireman. Trouble was prevented by the timely arrival of the police, who placed the engineer and fireman under arrest. Subsequently they were released.

To Show Him Loyalty.

Sofia, Aug 12.—It is announced here that Prince Ferdinand, who has been sojourning at Carlsbad, will arrive to-day. The government has invited the residents to show him loyalty by giving their ruler a hearty reception.

Bond Investment Companies.

Washington, Aug. 12.—The question whether or not the business conducted by the bond investment companies throughout the United States is a violation of the anti-lottery law will be decided probably to-day.

Rumor Denied.

London, Aug. 12.—The report that the pope's health was failing rapidly has been officially denied here.

ATTACHED TO AMERICA.

The British Ambassador Does Not Want To Leave Us.

London, Aug. 12.—Sir Julian Pauncefote, British ambassador at Washington, who has for some time past been in Europe on leave of absence, has just returned to London from Dresden. In an interview Sir Julian said he had been deeply affected by the remarks of the American press regarding his reported transfer from Washington to Berlin as Sir Edward Malet's successor as Great Britain's representative at the German capital, adding that it would be hardly possible for him to refuse the post at Berlin should it be offered to him, but that he intended to return to Washington in September at the expiration of his leave, his family following him in November Sir Julian expressed himself as being warmly attached to America, and said that he and his family felt as much at home in Washington as in London. He now regards it as fortunate that he has escaped being appointed to fill any of the diplomatic vacancies which have occurred in Europe in recent years, and hopes to remain in Washington for some time to come. When questioned as to whom he thought likely to succeed him at Washington, in the event of his transfer to Berlin, he showed a disinclination to discuss the matter, but intimated that, in his opinion, it would be unwise to appoint a novice to the post.

New York, Aug. 12.—Miss Alice Jewett, the daughter of Broker Charles H. Jewett, committed suicide yesterday by jumping from a third story window into the inner court yard at the Windsor hotel, Fifth avenue and Forty-seventh street, where her family has been stopping temporarily. Miss Jewett was insane at the time and was in the room with her mother. The latter saw her as she was about to jump and tried to stop her, but was unable to do so. Death was instant, and when the body was examined there was a hemorrhage from the right ear, an indication that the young woman was also injured internally. The body was removed to the family residence at New Brighton, Staten Island.

NAVY SHORT OF MEN.

Difficulty in Enlisting Them Causes Embarrassment.

Washington, Aug. 12.—The navy department is finding considerable difficulty in enlisting men to fill existing vacancies and to man the new ships that will soon be ready to go into commission. It is authoritatively stated at the department that neither the second class battle ship Texas nor the armored cruiser Maine will be enabled to participate in the drill off Newport. Aside from the delay in procuring crews for the two ships there are other embarrassments which will render it impossible for even the Texas which is in the more advanced condition to be in commission for several weeks.

MISSIONARY MASSACRE

Foreign Residents Distrust Platonic Remedies.

Believed Worse Scenes Will Follow the Recent Outrages Unless the Foreign Powers Deal Strongly with China—A Minister's Child Succumbs to Injuries Received.

London, Aug. 12.—The Times will today print a despatch from its Tien-Tsin correspondent saying that the recent massacre of foreign missionaries is regarded there as a sympton of incipient anarchy, and that the belief is expressed that it will be followed by worse scenes unless the foreign powers deal strongly with China. The despatch will also say that at a meeting of the foreign residents of Tien-Tsin the declaration was made that the massacre was the natural outcome of the leniency shown towards the Chinese upon the occasion of outrages committed by them in the past thirty years. The meeting also expressed distrust in platonic remedies. The British government was urged to make local reprisals in every case of outrage, and it was demanded that the provincial authorities be made answerable for all officials under whose jurisdiction foreigners are attacked, and be dismissed. This, it is asserted, would certainly be effectual, and is in accordance with Chinese principles of government

Another Victim of the Chinese.

London, Aug. 12.—A dispatch from Foo-Chow says that the infant child of the Rev. R. W. and Mrs. Stewart, both of whom were among the victims who lost their lives in the massacre near Kucheng, has died from the effects of the injuries inflicted by the murderers of its parents and been buried at Foo-Chow.

PELTED WITH STONES.

The Treatment a Young Missionary in China Received.

Minneapolis, Aug 12.—A letter has been received here from Miss Segrid Helgeson, a Norwegian girl, who went as a medical missiongry to China a year ago. The letter is dated June 14 at Han Kow, a place in central China on the Yang-tse-Kiang. She writes: "Riots and unlawful acts occur daily. Six provinces not far from here have of late been devastated—that is, property belonging to foreigners destroyed by fire and other means. Many lives have been lost and innumerable arrests follow. We are apprehensive just now even here. Telegraph wires are down, and we have not had any communication with other settlements for some time. Possibly this is my last as well as first letter home. But you must not think that I am weakening or fear death. God is with me, if I live or die. Yesterday I visited one of my patients, and when on my way home was attacked by a mob throwing stones and mud. I was struck on the head. It made me feel pretty badly for a while, but to-day I am all right. One of my former patients happened to come along, and by telling them that I was a harmless doctor saved my life, which I must surely otherwise have lost."

A WHARF GIVES WAY.

Twenty five Persons Thrown Into the Water—All Saved.

Concord, N. H., Aug. 12.—The steam boat wharf used by Edmund Burk, Blodget's Landing, Sunapee lake, gave way yesterday afternoon. There was a large number of persons on the dock at the time awaiting a steamer's return. As the boat came near the wharf suddenly gave way and about twenty-five men, women, and children were precipitated into the water, which at that point is is nearly ten feet deep. Others saved themselves by seizing the posts and other supports of the wharf. All were rescued from the water with much difficulty, and many narrow escapes from drowning occurred. Several persons were injured by a falling plank.

The estimated cost of construction is $3,000,000.

The sentiment of the Democratic party, so far as manifested, favors the nomination of Chancellor McGill for Governor, and as between him and John Kean the certainty of which Republicans have been so boastful will disappear. There are hundreds of Republicans in Newark who would not hestitate a moment to decide in favor of the Chancellor, while the independent Democratic vote would be unanimous in its favor. The Republican party has played ducks and drakes with its opportunities, and it will not require much more to reduce its tremendous majorities to nothing. —Newark Call.

ON THE GREAT CONVENTION.

We are Americans, all of us; we glory in the name; we challenge as our own the spirit of Americanism; and we recognize as the first and most vital element of that spirit the love of orderly liberty. No greater harm can be done any community than to teach it the spirit of defiance of law; and no greater wrong can be perpetrated by any legislative body than by putting on the statute book laws which are not intended to be executed in good faith.

These sturdy sentiments were loudly applauded, giving a great contrast to the hisses which followed the sentiments expressed by Senator O'Sullivan, who attacked the Puritan Sabbath and the efforts of the police to enforce the Sabbath laws.

We have come to a trying period in the history of our country when lawmakers will unblushingly lecture public officers for enforcing the laws which they have made. The sublimity of impudence is reached when legislators will plead for tolerance of lawlessness. And it is a very encouraging factor in the problem to hear men in office speak as he did, and to have him applauded by the representatives of one of the greatest churches of the land. When Rome shall insist upon the due observance of all righteous laws, she does credit to herself, and brightens the hopes of victory.

All over the land, in family, in communities, in the churches, schools, business, in politics and trade, we need to insist upon the law-abiding spirit. All who have the ear of the public should reiterate the declaration of Mr. Roosevelt, "No greater harm can be done any community than to teach it the spirit of defiance of law."

Every loyal heart must gladly respond to the sentiment expressed by Father Cleary:

We Catholic Americans have special public duties to perform. We owe it to ouselves, as loyal lovers of our country, that the vile and degrading customs brought to us from other lands shall not be permitted to flourish on this fair soil. We owe it to the Church of God, our spiritual mother, that her fair and honored name shall not be sullied by the vices of her unworthy children, without loud and earnest protest from indignant hearts, as valorous champions of the nursing mother of our enlightened civilization.

OBSERVANCE OF THE SABBATH.

On this point, the deliverances were as clear as on others. God in Revelation and Nature has told us to remember the Sabbath; and whether we agree or disagree as to keeping the First or Seventh day of the week, it should be our great effort to see that all men have opportunity to worship and rest.

President Murray of the Excise Board spoke as follows respecting the Sabbath:

It looks as if there would be a division of parties in this State, but upon a different issue. It will be: Shall the Sunday be observed as a holy day, or shall the laws be changed so as to make a holiday of Sunday? There is but one course for those who make claim to American principles, and that is, let the law remain as it is, so far as it relates to Sunday closing.

When the liquor dealers get control of the State and County Government we look for a reorganization of the Police and Excise departments on a very liberal basis, and not upon so-called Puritanical principles, as they say they are at present. And when they are engaged in the work of reorganizing the Legislature on more liberal principles they propose to amend one of the Ten Commandments that reads: "Keep Holy the Sabbath Day" so that it will read: "Keep Holy the Sabbath Day just a little bit, not enough to interfere with the poor man getting all the liquor he wants, providing he has got the cash."

After him Father Cleary delivered sledgehammer blows in favor of the Holy Day; saying:

We know from experience which no amount of sophistry can set aside that the saloon is the foulest and most dangerous foe of both our Church and country, and as Catholics and Americans we do not propose to submit to the degradation which we should suffer if the customs of abroad should take hold of our country. The best part of the American public has set its face against the American saloon and the violation of the sanctity of the American Sunday, and America will never submit to the degradation of being dominated over by liquor sellers. (Cheers.)

Bishop Kane, President of Washington University entered into an eloquent denunciation of the continental Sunday and the social customs which prevailed there, which, he said, were surely sapping the foundations of virtue and patriotism in the Old World. He concluded by hoping that the American people would forever keep from such contamination and uphold the sanctity of its Sabbath Day.

The ears of time-servers, who are ready to sacrifice Liberty and Morality for personal gain must have tingled when they heard these ringing words of Father Cleary:

People who had never known the meaning of human freedom until their feet touched American soil, who had never dared in this land of their birth to clamor for personal liberty, for they had not enjoyed the privilege of freely fleeing from the chains that fettered them, began to set up in this, their refuge from thraldom, new ideas of individual freedom, which proved to be as inconsistent as they were un-American, for they contemplated only the personal privilege of doing as pleased them best, regardless of the hallowed traditions and the cherished rights of the people who gave them shelter and a home.

We are not to be ruled by the customs of other lands; the sound judgment of the great American public is amply competent to regulate its own customs, in accordance with the best interests of our country.

Such is the gist of the principles and sentiments freely spoken at this convention. As a Methodist, every member of which Church is a pledged total abstainer from all alcoholic liquor as a beverage, I can but rejoice that in the Roman Catholic Church is a Total Abstinence Society numbering over 65,000; nor would I fail to wish them Godspeed.

Let us see to it that in our lot we are doing what we may to uphold Temperance, Law and the Sabbath.

In our own city today might have been seen those alone on pleasure bent, speeding their way through our streets, unmindful of the hour or act of worship.

It is very unfortunate that we do not lay aside our own inclinations, and unite in a determined, continuous effort to bring about the golden age of Temperance, Law and Religion.

I should greatly dislike in any way to be one of those who should contribute to any lax sentiment respecting the laws of Day of God.

FOUR SURVIVORS.

A Quartette Ride Out the Century and a Half Bicycle Run.

Hot weather and a hot pace made the century and a half run of Saturday quite small in numbers. There were nine starters who pulled out of Plainfield and four that managed to hold out to the end.

The first thirty miles were made in two hours and five minutes and throughout the run the little company kept ahead of the schedule. John Rickett and John Scott were the first to arrive in Plainfield at 7:30 p. m. Simon Sprinps showed up at 7:55 and Israel Jones at 8:15, just five minutes ahead of the schedule time.

There were no accidents although Jones fell off his wheel several times. The four survivors will all receive gold medals.

Marvelous Results.

From a letter written by Rev. J. Gunderman, of Dimondale, Mich., we are permitted to make this extract: "I have no hesitation in recommending Dr. King's New Discovery, as the results were almost marvelous in the case of my wife. While I was pastor of the Baptist Church at Rives Junction she was brought down with pneumonia succeeding la grippe. Terrible paroxysms of coughing would last hours with little interruption and it seemed as if she could not survive them. A friend recommended Dr. King's New Discovery; it was quick in its work and highly satisfactory in results." Trial bottles free at L. W. Randolph's drug store. Regular size 50c and $1.

Death of William Blimm.

The death of Wm. H. Blimm occurred yesterday afternoon about four at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Blimm, on Somerset street, of bronchial pneumonia. He was in the twenty-sixth year of his age, and well known and liked. His illness dates back for some time, but there was a gradual decline in health. About eight months ago his wife died and this was the cause of much worriment. Members of the above will attend his funeral in a body tomorrow afternoon at two o'clock from his parents home.

When moving into our present home I found a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm left by a former tenant. On the label I found the statement that it was good for cuts and burns. MISSING FROM THE 6:54 EXPRESS.

A RAILWAY INSPECTOR'S STORY.

BY JOHN T. PARTINGTON.

An up passenger train for Chester was now almost due, and I decided to go as far as might be necessary by it, and make inquiries on the way; I did not expect however, to be able to obtain information bearing on the case until I reached Connah's Quay, as the train by which the boy traveled had certainly not called anywhere between Mostyn and Connah's Quay. The guard's journal which I had examined afforded absolute proof of that. Of course there was just the possibility that the boy might have fallen from the train, but I did not consider that at all likely, as he would have had to tamper with the door and unfasten it on the outside before such a thing could have happened, and surely the other passengers in the compartment would have prevented him from doing anything of the kind; and even if such a mishap had taken place, the other passengers would have been certain to have reported the occurrence at Connah's Quay when the train arrived there, which, clearly, from Mrs. Fairholme's statement, they had not done.

I was not surprised, therefore, to find on inquiry that the station-masters at Holywell, Bagillt and Flint had neither seen nor heard anything of the boy. The station-master at Connah's Quay, in reply to my hurried inquiries while the train stood at his station, confirmed in substance all that Mrs. Fairholme had told me as to what happened there on the arrival of the train. The boy had certainly not alighted there, neither had any of the three other passengers who left Rhyl in the same compartment. He was now strongly of opinion that the boy was in the train while it stood at his station, but that he was prevented from alighting by the other passengers in the compartment.

I went on by the same train, and on arrival at Queensferry found that the station-master had been called away for an hour on urgent business, and I therefore went on to Sandycroft and alighted there. I was rather glad to be able to get to that station without delay, because the tickets of the 6:54 express were always collected there, it being the nearest station to Chester, and I thought it likely that the station-master or porter might be able to say whether or not the boy or the other three passengers were in the train on its arrival there. The station-master told me, on inquiry, that he had collected the tickets in the front part of the train, and that he was quite sure no persons of the description given were then in the train. Neither had the porter seen them. It seemed clear, therefore, that the passengers had alighted at Queensferry, and I proceeded to walk back to that station, a distance of about a mile and a half.

The station-master had returned by the time I got there, and I at once told him my errand. He had not seen anything of the boy, he said, but he distinctly remembered the other passengers alighting there. The man with a scar on his face he had seen once or twice before, but the women were strangers to him. The man's ticket was only to Flint, and he had to pay excess. He was hampered in finding the money by a sack which he carried on his back, and which he did not seem to want to put down on to the ground.

"Now I don't like suggesting such an idea," I said, "and I hope it will turn out to be a wrong one, but do you think it possible from the appearance of the sack that the boy was inside it?"

"That's a horrible thought," was the reply, "because if the lad was there he was quiet enough, and you know what that means. But it's quite possible. I wondered why the fellow was so mighty anxious to keep the sack in his own clutches."

"Of course," I said, "he may not have done the boy any serious harm, perhaps only rendered him unconscious in some way, so as to get him out of the train and away from the station. I expect the watch that the boy carried has been the temptation."

I arranged with the station-master that he should make inquiries for the boy in the neighborhood, while I went on to Connah's Quay to compare notes with the police, and secure their active co-operation in following up the clue I had found.

The inspector of police was in the office when I arrived, and I soon told him my story and made him acquainted with my suspicions in regard to the man with a scar across his cheek. The Inspector heard me patiently till I had finished, making meanwhile one or two notes, and then he said quietly: "And you badly want to get hold of that man, I suppose? But you'll have to whistle for him. He's gone."

"Gone! What do you mean?" I asked in some excitement.

"Oh, he's cleared out, bag and baggage. We ought to catch him, though. We know the man very well. He's an old acquaintance of ours known as 'Dusky Joe.' I'm only surprised at a man with a face like that taking to bad ways. He's too easily recognized. He lives at Flint, and is the biggest rascal in the district. He's already served one or two terms for various offenses, but if we can only catch him this time I fancy he'll be settled for a good long spell. My men have been after him all the morning. They've found traces of his having called at home during the night, but for the present, at any rate, he's got clear away."

"I'm awfully sorry for that," I said; "but what has become of the boy, I should like to know. Have you met with any trace of him, either living or—or dead?"

"No news at all of the boy till you came," was the reply; "and we want Dusky Joe for quite another matter. I may as well tell you all about it. During the night there's been a bad poaching affray on the Hawarden estate. Three poachers and two keepers met in the wood, and there was a hot fight, and the keepers got the worst of it, and they're both badly hurt. One of them isn't likely to get over it. From what the other keeper says, Dusky Joe was one of the poachers, and what you tell me as to his traveling to Queensferry last night confirms it. That's why we've been after him. And if he's done anything to the lad all the more reason why we should catch him as soon as we can. We can't do more than we are doing to get hold of him, but I'll send a man to Queensferry at once to make inquiries for the lad round there, and if I hear anything I'll let you know."

It occurred to me that before leaving Connah's Quay it might be an advantage to have a conversation with Mrs. Edwards, and I got the station-master, who was well acquainted with her, to go with me to her house and introduce me. I found her to be a very intelligent woman, apparently about 55 years of age, rather tall, and with a very pleasing face. An ideal nurse I thought she must have been.

"Have you found little Frank, Mr. Barnes?" she asked, eagerly, as soon as introductions were over, and the station-master had left us.

"HAVE YOU FOUND LITTLE FRANK, MR. BARNES?"

"I am sorry to say that I have not," I replied.

"I am so sorry. I don't know what his mother will do if any harm has befallen him. She was in a dreadfully agitated state when she arrived here last night. She simply lives for her children. Young as she is, she has had a great deal of trouble, Mr. Barnes, and I do hope she may not have the loss of her boy added to what she has already gone through."

"Do you know whether her little girl is better?" I asked.

"Yes; she wired me an hour or so ago to say that Nellie was much better, and that it was not a case of scarlet fever after all. But do you mind telling Mr. Barnes, what you have done to trace the boy, and whether you have found any clue at all?"

I told Mrs. Edwards briefly what inquiries I had made, and how everything now seemed to point to Dusky Joe being responsible for the boy's disappearance.

"Although at first," I added, "I did not attach as much importance to the fact of the boy being placed in that compartment as Mrs. Fairholme seemed to do. I felt sure I should find him at Mostyn, and his not being there was a great disappointment to me. It seems quite certain, however, that nobody alighted there except Sir Philip Sandford and his family."

"Sir Philip Sandford!" exclaimed Mrs. Edwards, springing to her feet as if she had been galvanized. "Mr. Barnes, are you sure of the name?"

"Quite sure," I replied; "but——"

"And does he—does Sir Philip live near there?"

"He lives at Rhydowen Hall, about eight miles inland. I remember his removing there a year or more ago. He bought an estate there, I have heard."

"Does his son—Mr. Reginald—live with him still?"

"Yes."

"Was he with the party?"

"No; he has met with an accident. He had stayed at home, and was out riding yesterday when he got thrown from his horse."

"He is not dead, Mr. Barnes, or—or injured fatally?"

"The only information I received was that he was badly hurt. I am sorry that the news distresses you. I had no idea that you knew Sir Philip or his family. But this does not help us find the boy. You can suggest nothing that will afford me a further clue, I suppose?"

"No, nothing. But before you go let me tell you why the mention of Sir Philip and his son upset me so much just now. Under the circumstances I am sure Mrs. Fairholme would not mind my doing so, for I have an impression that in some way which I cannot understand it will help towards the recovery of her little boy.

"Some years ago—it must be about nine—Mrs. Fairholme, who was then Miss Ethel Vaughan, became acquainted with Mr. Reginald Sandford, and, to make the story short, they got to be very fond of one another, and when he asked her to become his wife she consented, her mother agreeing to the engagement, although Miss Ethel was not then more than 19 years of age, for Mr. Reginald was as good and handsome a young man as ever lived, and they seemed to be just made for one another. At that time Miss Ethel's father was in Australia. His business used to take him to nearly all parts of the world, and he was often away for a long time, and it was when he was absent that everybody was happiest, for he was a hard, stern, cruel man. When he came home he objected to the engagement, partly, no doubt, because Mr. Reginald's father wasn't rich then as he has become since, and wasn't a baronet, but was plain Mr Sandford. But the main reason seemed to be that he had found another husband for Miss Ethel—a Mr. Stanley Fairholme, the son of a wealthy merchant, and from what transpired afterwards, it appears that he was under some obligation to this young man, and it was a bargain between them that Miss Ethel should become his wife. I needn't tell you all the details, but Miss Ethel and Mr. Reginald were both shamefully deceived, and Miss Ethel was ultimately led to believe that Mr. Reginald had been killed in a railway accident in America. The end of it all was that, almost wearied out of her life by a long continued daily persecution, and believing Mr. Reginald to be dead, Miss Ethel married Mr. Fairholme, and found out a fortnight afterwards, how basely she had been deceived. She was never the same bright girl again that she had been before the trouble began. Her husband, although not a good man, was not unkind to her. He loved her in his way, and she, having married him, tried to be a good wife to him. But they had no tastes in common, and gradually drifted farther apart, and about two years ago he fought a duel in Paris, and was killed. Two children have been born to them: Frank, who is now missing, and who bears a strong resemblance to his mother, and Nellie, whose illness was the cause of Frank's journey. Mrs. Fairholme has never seen Mr. Reginald since her marriage, and I am sure she has no more idea than I had that he is living in North Wales. And it is quite likely that he does not know that her husband is dead."

While Mrs. Edwards had been speaking an idea had entered my mind which decided me as to my next step. And in a very short time I was again on my way to Mostyn, as fast as a lumbering ballast train which had happened to be at the station, about to start for Bangor, could carry me.

"Hughes," I said to the station-master, on arriving at Mostyn, "how many little children has Sir Philip Sandford?"

"Three or four, I'm not sure which," was the reply. "He's been married twice, you see. Mr. Reginald and Miss Constance, who stayed at home, are the children of the first wife, and the others are the children of the present wife, who is much younger than Sir Philip, but a very nice lady. Yes, sure."

"And how many children were there in the party last night?"

"I think there were three inside the carriage and one outside."

"I'm going to drive up to the hall, Hughes; I suppose I can get a trap at the hotel?"

"Yes; but it's a long drive—eight miles, as I told you, at least."

I made my way to the hotel, and engaged a light two-wheeled dog-cart to take me to the hall, and a man to show me the way. While they were being got ready I partook of a hurried and rather late lunch. In a short time I was on my way to the hall at a brisk rate.

I enjoyed the drive immensely. The horse was a good one, the roads were hard and dry, the air was clear and bracing, and the scenery through which we passed was of an extremely interesting character. Added to all this, the excitement of the chase was upon me, and I felt my blood coursing through my veins more quickly than it was wont to do, as I told myself for the twentieth time that I should find the object of my search safe and sound at Rhydowen Hall.

The hall was visible for a full mile before I reached it. It was most delightfully situated on the slope of a wooded hill, and was approached from the highroad by a rather long carriage drive.

I left the conveyance at the lodge gates, walked up to the hall, and told the [illegible] I wished to speak to Sir [illegible] minutes on an important [illegible] I was shown [illegible] room, and there Sir Philip soon joined me. He was a man of splendid physique and with a kindly face—a fine specimen of a country gentleman. I had several times seen him before, when he had been traveling by train, and my face was evidently not unfamiliar to him.

"Good day to you, Inspector; sit down," he said, as he entered, and courteously beckoned me to a chair. "I think you want to see me on railway business."

"Yes, Sir Philip," I said; "a boy disappeared very mysteriously last night when traveling from Rhyl to Connah's Quay by the 6:54 express, which starts from Bangor at 5:30, and I have been instructed to trace him. I understand you traveled by the same train, which stopped specially at Mostyn to set you down. Will you kindly tell me whether by any means the boy got up to the hall in the carriage which met you at the station?"

"Yes, he did," replied Sir Philip, "and he is here now, safe and sound, and, apparently, quite happy."

I was immensely relieved. My quest was ended at last.

"I am very glad, indeed, to hear that," I said, "and the boy's mother will be more thankful than I can tell you. Can he return with me at once?"

SUICIDE OF A BUCK ELK.

The keeper of the elks lost the most essential portions of his trousers.

The elk lost his life in the melee by breaking his neck. Hence the keeper, who is a just man, feels that things are about even and holds no ill will toward the deceased animal.

It all came to pass one morning at Lincoln Park. The park commissioners having on hand a supply of buffalo and elks larger than was needful for the entertainment of visitors had made favorable terms with the proprietor of a wild beast show. The Wild West man, who wore his hair long and hinted that he had hunted buffalo on the plains with the Grand Duke Alexis, was to take two buffalo bulls of the Lincoln Park breed, paying therefore $400 each. The elks he was to get for $100 each. Keeper De Vry prepared to cage the animals for shipment to Philadelphia, where the Wild West show is getting wilder every day in anticipation of the summer's tour.

The buffalo bulls were quiet and docile. They walked into the traveling cages with no undue or unexpected manifestations with their hoofs or horns. The elk cow, too, showed a lady like and tractable spirit and entered her traveling cage with a certain dignity resulting from long residence on the North side.

But with the buck elk, which is a scientific term and implies many attributes, it was different. He pawed the air wildly after being lassoed, and when finally choked into submission displayed a sulkiness of disposition which cut the keeper to the heart. When the entrance of the "shifting cage" was reached the innate viciousness of the elk's nature, long dormant by the genial influences of North side culture, awoke in all its savagery.

Opening wide his mouth and displaying a double row of wicked teeth, he gathered the keeper by the slack of his trousers and shook him with a vigor worthy of a better cause. He slammed the tired German against either side of the cage, ate heartily of his trousers and rested only when he had removed the best portion of them. The keeper crawled out of the shifting cage, and told the elk that if the prospect of going to Philadelphia affected him that way he had better not go. The elk, moved to a greater frenzy by these remarks, continued to trash about the cage, and in a final paroxysm of rage and wounded vanity drove his head against the heavy timbers at the far end of the narrow compartment.

There the matter ended, for the elk, with a sharp agonized cry so very human like as to make the spectators shiver, sank to his knees, dead.

Keeper De Vry refused to believe that the elk committed suicide when it saw that it was doomed to go to Philadelphia.—Chicago Times-Herald.

THE TRINIDAD COOLIES.

A Species of Slavery Existing in a British Colony.

Notwithstanding British criticism of the manner in which the colored people of the South are treated by the whites, there are some things about the treatment of the free labor problem in the British island colony of Trinidad that seem curiously mediæval in principle.

Soon after the negroes of Trinidad were freed, now more than sixty years ago, the planters, upon the plea, doubtless just enough, that the freedmen would not work, obtained from the Government special legislation providing for the importation of East Indian coolie laborers. When the importations of coolies began negroes were demanding from 60 cents to $1.25 a day, according to the work they were employed to do. The law authorizing the importation of coolies provided that they should contract to remain with their employers for a term of years, working for 25 cents a day, and that they should meanwhile have medical attendance and be returned free of charge to their homes. A special export tax on the products of the plantations was laid to pay for the transportation of the coolies between India and Trinidad. The importation of the coolies has been going on ever since that time, until now from that source and from natural increase there are 60,000 coolies in a population of 200,000. The white population is small, so that by far the larger part of the inhabitants are negroes and coolies. The former, in competition with contract labor at 25 cents a day, earn from 45 to 60 cents a day. Negro mechanics earn as high as $1 a day. The negroes are a stronger race than the coolies, and the heavier work still falls upon them. They are the mechanics of the island.

Mistaken Identity.

"Have your hair cut?" asked the barber, as he worked away at the lather.

"Does it need cutting?" replied the man in the chair.

"Very much. When was it cut last?"

"Yesterday afternoon."

"I thought it hadn't been cut lately. Where was it cut?"

"Here in your shop."

"Yes, it does look like one of our cuts. What chair was it?"

"Yours."

"Ah! yes. I think I do remember you. Yes, I think I cut your hair about 3 o'clock in the afternoon. Excuse me, please. I took you for a man who had his hair cut in some other shop last fall!" —Detroit Free Press.

Realized Its Truth.

"Well," muttered the collector, as he sank wearily into a chair and turned to his employer, "there is one old saying that I can vouch for."

"What is it?"

"The one that says, 'You never find a man out till you trust him.'"

THE OLD HOME.

A Graceful Tribute by the Rev. Dr. Collyer.

In a series of articles upon "The Woman Who Influenced Me Most," published in the Ladies' Home Journal, Rev. Robert Collyer, the blacksmith preacher, in paying tribute to his mother, says:

"So she stands in the sunlight of the long ago, and she had also such a genius for doing well what she must take in hand that I think still if it had fallen to her lot and her training to govern a kingdom she would have made a noble queen and governed it well, while what she did govern well was the house full of eager and outbreaking children with a good deal of the old Berserker blood in them, as I have reason to suspect—keeping us all well in hand and clearing the way for us into the world's great life when our time came to go forth; seeing to it that we were well housed, well fed and well clad for weekday and Sunday, while the school wage was paid for us, so long as we could be spared to go there, out of the eighteen shillings a week my father earned in those days at his anvil, together with the pittance some of us could earn by and by in the factory."

Of his visit to the scenes of his childhood in England, Dr. Collyer writes:

"So I went about the valley, as they say, with my heart in my mouth, and seemed to be saying to the boy I saw through the mists of the many years:

"'Dear little fellow, you had a hard time then, but it was a good time also, wasn't it now? Have any flowers in the world beside ever seemed so sweet to you as the snowdrop, the primrose and the cowslip you knew so well where to find and bring home to mother, or have any singing birds ever matched your memory of the skylark and the throstle, or were there ever such Christmas-tides as those she made for us when her children and the world were all young together?'

"And there was the old home nest. It stood where the villa stands now, but I would not have exchanged the memory for the mansion. It was a cottage of two rooms and an attic fronting due south, and there was a green dooryard with a clump of roses set about with wallflowers, pinks and sweet williams. There was a plum tree also branching about the windows. Then I went within doors of the home which was, and is no more, to find the bright open fire that went out in 1839, but was still burning for me, and the walls of the living room were white as the driven snow. There was the famous bureau, also, shining like a dim mirror, and the tall clock which was always too fast at bedtime and too slow at meal times—it stands here in our dining room now. There was still the fine store of willow ware on the rack against the wall, but that was for Christmas and the summer feast; while all things were glorified by pictures Turner could not have done to save his soul.

REV. ROBERT COLLYER.

"There were six of us in the earlier years, also, to make good the old rune mother would croon over us now and then:

Four is good company, five is a charge,
Six is a family, seven's too large,

but I think she would have refitted the rhyme to the reason if there had been more.

"And now how did she raise us so that her son must fain write down this memory?

"There was fair white linen and calico first to wear and to sleep in. And until we could see to it ourselves, once a week there was the tub where we had a good sound scrubbing, who were big enough for the sad solemnity, with yellow soap and things that got into your eyes, and a stout 'harden' towel to dry off withal, so that now, when I think of our 'Cotter's Saturday night,' the words of the wise man are apt to come back to me, 'Who hath red eyes, who hath contention, who hath strife?' and I can answer, I know who had all these, say sixty-five years ago, when I was turned into that tub, while there was but scant comfort for me in the words she would say as a sort of benediction, 'There now, children, cleanliness is next to Godliness.'

"How did we fare, the six hearty children? There was oatmeal, and what we call mush who know no better, and skim milk in plenty, with oatcake, as mother would say, to fill in; also wheaten bread for more careful use, and sometimes a trace of butter. Not much meat, for meat was dear, but soup with dumplings, and what the old Yorkshire folk used to call 'sikelike,' a word with a wide meaning. And the tradition still remains of an early time of innocency when mother would say those who eat the most dumpling shall have the most meat. So we would peg away until we did not want any meat, and then mother would save it for the next day's dinner. There was fruit, also, when this was cheap, in the lovely guise of a pie, and then more oatmeal and skim milk for supper."

A writer in "Blackwood's" says that "priests cannot change their priestly countenance if they wished. For some mysterious reason the subcutaneous tissue over the cheekbones and under the jaws of the clerical face gets an extra supply of hoar of meat, [illegible] distinctive in [illegible] ness of a [illegible] in the Age [illegible] gives a [illegible]

A MAN WITH HOPES.

He Might Be Poor, but at Least He Was Not a Pessimist.

Near midnight the other night I sat down in City Hall Park a minute before traversing the long flight of steps to the Brooklyn Bridge, and I hadn't drawn half a dozen breaths before a chap came over from another bench and "struck" me for a dime. After I had given it to him I said:

"You must go hungry at least half the time?"

"Yes, sir."

"And you seldom sleep in a bed?"

"Very seldom."

"And your clothes are badly out at the elbows?"

"I need a new suit, sir."

"On the whole, you haven't much to live for, I take it?"

"Not very much, sir, and if it wasn't for my hopes I'd take a header into the river."

"What hopes have you?"

"Well, sir, I'll put your ten with forty cents more and play the races tomorrow, and if I win I'll sit down to a champagne supper, take in the theater and buy myself a box of clear Havana cigars. That's what I hope for, sir, and I thank you, and good night."

I yelled at him to come back with my dime, but he vanished in the gloom in the direction of Broadway, and a policeman came along and ordered me to shut up.—Detroit Free Press.

WANTS KEAN TO GET OUT.

Silas D. Drake Writes Bitterly Against the Ex-Congressman.

Silas D. Drake, of Elizabeth, in a letter published in yesterday morning's World waxes wroth about the Gubernatorial candidacy of John Kean, and so many startling statements and propositions are made that it is given below:

Permit me to use your valuable columns to lay before the Republicans of New Jersey a weighty question. The Republicans were successful at the polls in the last election, and they were encouraged with the idea that they can elect their candidate for Governor in November. There would be no question on that point if a proper man is nominated. John Kean is prominently mentioned as a candidate, and it is to him I seek to give a few pointers. He is anxious for the nomination because he wants to be Governor. Foster M. Voorhees is willing to be a candidate because the people—the rank and file—want him to be Governor. Kean was born with a silver spoon in his mouth, and Voorhees is brainy, self-made.

My advice to Mr. Kean is to withdraw his name and permit a united delegation from Union county to go to Trenton for Voorhees. If Kean persists in standing as a candidate it will jeopardize the prospects of the Republicans electing any candidate. In addition to many having asked Mr. Kean to withdraw his name before too late, I would suggest that a public meeting be held in the Drake opera house, and let me ask him a few questions, and let a vote be taken then and there, and then he will be satisfied that he is not wanted.

I would ask him did he recommend an old soldier as postmaster at Elizabeth when he had an opportunity? How many new industries has he paralyzed and scooped in; and being identified in business solely in corporations, how could he serve the people when corporations wanted anything? In conclusion, in case he sees some of the delegates and should get the nomination, I will wager $500 stock of the Drake Opera House against $500 of the Lyceum Theatre stock he holds that his own home—Union township, that gave a Republican majority last year—will give a Democratic majority; and $1,000 more of same stock against his that he will not be elected Governor even though he gets the nomination. Take my advice and withdraw, and do not imperil the Republican party at this election when a brainy, self-made man like Voorhees can be elected.

The Coming Games.

The members of the Y. M. L. of Hope chapel who are going to take part in the outdoor sports with the Y. M. A. of Monroe Avenue chapel, are practicing daily and the runners are running over the course every night, and some members are showing some remarkable speed. Captain Head of the tug-of-war-team is confident of his team winning. John Cose has been appointed field captain.

The games are going to take place Saturday afternoon, August 31st, at Maltby's driving park, if it can be secured, and a large crowd is expected to be present. The Hope chapel colors are blue and gold.

Old Friends Meet.

A pleasant coincident in connection with the visit of Rev. Isaac P. Brokaw, D. D., of Freehold, to Plainfield on Sunday, was the meeting of Mrs. Robert Clark and George L. VanEmburgh whose guest he was while here. When Mr. Brokaw was pastor of Trinity church in Newark several years ago Mrs. Clark was the organist and Mr. VanEmburgh was precentor. The meeting was a most enjoyable one, as they talked over bygone days. Mr. Brokaw preached in Trinity church on Sunday.

A Little Girl's Death.

After a short illness, Delia Perrine, the five-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Perrine, died last evening about six o'clock at her parents residence, 426 East Third street. The little daughter was very bright and the home ties so suddenly severed by her death bring to the parents the sympathy of all who know them.

When moving into our present home I found a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm left by a former tenant. On the label I found the statement that it was good for cuts and burns. I can testify to the truth of this. Nothing in all my experience has found its equal for treating blisters or burns. F. E. Barrett, manager Le Sueur Sentinel, Le Sueur, Minn. Pain Balm is also a sure cure for rheumatism. For sale at Reynolds Pharmacy, Park and North avenues; T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

WORK DOWN IN THE SLUMS.

REAL LIFE IN CHINATOWN AS FOUND BY THE RESCUE BAND.

Many Touching Incidents of How the Lower Classes are Saved From a Degrading and Miserable Death There.

Real life in the Chinatown of New York is a subject of much interest to everyone and when one can hear it described by a person thoroughly acquainted with it there is a fascination that is pleasant.

Such was the case last evening when Frank W. Morse, of East Sixth street, addressed the Christian Endeavor Society of Trinity Reformed church. Mr. Morse is Superintendent of the Garwood Land Improvement Company, but is also a member of the New York Rescue Band, a society that centres its efforts in Chinatown, and Mr. Morse finds time to do much in this field of labor. In part Mr. Morse spoke as follows:

It is true that "one half of the world doesn't know how the other half live." Those of us here who live in quite peaceful homes with pleasant surroundings probably don't know how others who have not these luxuries live. In Chinatown one can see every character in life. The dives, dens, Joss houses, all have their inmates and the Rescue Band, composed of people from New York, Brooklyn and New Jersey, who have quarters at 17 Doyer street, preach the Gospel of Christ faithfully every night. Then bands are formed who go into the men's lodging houses and reading rooms to sing Gospel songs, offer prayers and work with the unsaved.

Then there is a branch known as the street work, and a most important one it is, going in the streets to pursuade the unsaved to attend meetings.

They often go into slums, dives and holes of Chinatown, starting at nine o'clock in the evening and stopping anywhere between two and four o'clock in the morning. The members take turns in leading meetings. Mr. Morse during his talk related many touching incidents in regard to the conversion of the unsaved.

One very pathetic was the conversion of the man known as "Frenchy, No. 2." He told how this man came to the mission in a degraded low state under the influence of liquor, and how it was found necessary to eject him on account of the disturbance he made. But some of the testimonies he had heard, touched him and he was saved miracuously. Mr. Morse also told in an interesting manner of the conversion of fallen women, and how they lived in rooms, 8x12, in tenement houses. There is a home on Fourteenth street where the sick are cared for and if they die they are given a decent burial. His remarks came to a close by offering an impressive prayer.

Previous to Mr. Morse's talk a beautiful vocal duet, "Some other Mother's Child," was rendered by Mrs. Frank Woodruff, Miss Grace Berg and Miss Mary Berg was the accompanist, and at the close Mrs. Woodruff sang "Two Lifes."

The service closed with prayer by President F. E. Smith, the singing of "Jesus Saviour Pilot Me" and the Mizpah benediction.

TOO MUCH OF A GOOD THING.

A Long Tramp as a Climax to An Enjoyable Outing.

One of the four Plainfield young men who camped near Lake Hopatcong returned yesterday on the train. He was J. Vincent Rittenhouse. The other three, Walter B. Rittenhouse, Everett J. Peck and George F. Rose decided to walk home and started yesterday morning. They expect to arrive here tonight. The reason for this is that the three weeks of camp life were so delightful that the young men thought that some fitting climax should bring it to an end. The baggage of the party accompanied J. V. Rittenhouse home as he thought the tramp to Plainfield too much of a good thing.

Great Convention Coming.

The latter part of this month Plainfield will be the scene of one of the largest conventions ever held, that of the Seventh-Day Baptist denomination. There will be present delegates from all parts of the United States, including some of the most noted divines in the country.

The sessions will be of incalcuable interest to everyone connected in any way with religious work.

Verdict for Mr. Hand.

Justice Newcorn yesterday afternoon rendered a judgment for the plaintiff in the case of Hezekiah Hand against William H. Lee, on contract, for $22.75. William R. Coddington represented Mr. Hand.

ANNA INDULGES AGAIN.

A Netherwood Woman Makes a Spectacle of Herself Last Night.

Mrs. Anna Nolan, of Netherwood, who needs no introduction to a Plainfield audience, was very much in evidence at the North avenue railroad station last night between nine and ten o'clock.

As usual, Anna took an overdose of fire water which went to her head. Her screams attracted the attention of about 150 people.

When Policeman Flanagan reached the station he found her in one corner of the waiting room in the attitude of prayer. The appearence of an officer brought forth a volley of the vilest sort of language. Policeman Flanagan arrested her and with the assistance of night baggage master Joe Case took her to the rookery.

This morning President See, of the City Council, held court and sentenced her to sixty days in the county jail. She was taken to Elizabeth this afternoon.

A PLAINFIELD CANDIDATE.

Ex-Judge Coddington Would Like to be on the Union County Bench.

The Courier-News last night announced that ex-Judge William R. Coddington is a candidate for the Republican nomination of Judge of the Union County Court of Common Please. In espousing his candidacy the Courier-News says:

It is not necessary to tell Union county Republicans that Plainfield is entitled to this nomination. For years Plainfield has been rolling up big majorities to elect Republican candidates in Union county to office. During all these years Plainfield has asked but little. This year she will ask the Republicans of other places in the county to recognize her claim for this great gift, and to yield to her this nomination, a great one to be sure but one of which her record entities her to in every respect. Plainfield asks Elizabeth, Rahway, Westfield and other towns in Union to rally to the support of ex-Judge Coddington, a man in whose record she takes great pride; a man in whose future she has the utmost confidence.

Father Murphy's Mother Buried.

The funeral services over the remains of Margaret A. Murphy, the mother of Rev. Father Francis Murphy, of Plainfield, who died on Friday, took place in St. Theresa's church at Summit at eleven o'clock, a. m., and was largely attended. A solemn requiem mass was celebrated. The celebrant was Rev. Father Murphy, the son of the deceased. The deacon was Rev. J. Dunn, of Chatham; sub deacon, Rev. George L. Fitzpatrick, of Hoboken. The master of ceremonies was Rev. A. H. Stein, of South Orange. The following clergymen occupied seats within the altar railing: Rev. P. E. Smith, of Plainfield; Rev. J. Smith, of Cranford; Rev. J. P. McCormick, of Paterson; Rev. P. Electric Bitters.

Electric Bitters is a medicine suited for any season, but perhaps more generally needed in the spring, when the languid exhausted feeling prevails, when the liver is torpid and sluggish and the need of a tonic and alterative is felt. A prompt use of this medicine has often averted long and perhaps fatal bilious fevers. No medicine will act more surely in counteracting and freeing the system from the malarial poison. Headache, indigestion, constipation, dizziness yield to Electric Bitters. Only 50c per bottle at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

A BAD CUT.

James Flack Has a Three Inch Gash in His Thigh.

James Flack, clerk for G. H. Van Nest, the Park avenue butcher, sustained a severe injury this morning while at work in the shop.

He was chopping ice with a large butcher knife, when the latter slipped, cutting him in the right thigh to a depth of about three inches.

He went to Dr. Zeglio's office where the doctor gave him immediate treatment.

Mr. Flack came very near to severing an important artery in the leg, which probably would have been fatal. He is getting along very well, though he suffers much pain.

MUST PAY TAXES.

Elizabeth's Comptroller Arrests Delinquents at the Singer Works.

Comptroller Carlton, of Elizabeth, has decided to take vigorous measures to collect unpaid personal taxes. Yesterday his deputies raided the Singer Machine Works and arrested a large number there who owe one and two years' taxes. There are 300 delinquents in the Singer Works alone, and the raid will be kept up until all pay or go to jail.

Those arrested yesterday were released on the officials of the works agreeing to deduct the amount of the tax from the men's wages next Saturday night and pay the money over to the Comptroller's deputies. Other factories will also be visited.

Young Lady's Sad Death.

The large circle of friends of Miss Emma Ward, of West Third street, will be shocked to learn of her sudden death which occurred yesterday afternoon at her home.

Miss Ward went on the Hope Chapel excursion last Saturday feeling perfectly well. Death was caused by a sudden attack of stomach trouble.

She was a faithful member of Hope Chapel and a favorite with all who knew her.

The funeral will be held tomorrow afternoon at one o'clock from Hope Chapel.

An Unfortunate Traveler.

An unknown woman accompanied by her son arrived in Plainfield yesterday afternoon on the 5:10 train from Philadelphia. En route the woman had had a stroke of paralysis and when this city was reached she was unable to walk or even move.

The services of Mail Carrier Frisbie were secured and he carried the woman from the Philadelphia train to the west bound train. The two were going to German Valley, this State.

The Last Chance.

The baby parade is over at Asbury Park but there are plenty of other attractions at that great resort to interest and entertain the person who wants to leave Plainfield for a day of pleasure. The last chance to go to the Park at the excursion rate of $1.25 will be when Warren chapel leaves on Thursday, August 22d.

On Park Avenue Now.

Excavation for the sewers on Park avenue was commenced today at Sixth street, working towards Front street. On this street they will be laid in sections of a block each, with a flush tank at each corner. This is done to allow the pipe to be put as far under the surface as possible.

The Jolly Three.

The Jolly Three of Mount Bethel, will give a masquerade ball Thursday evening in the Mount Bethel hall. A large number of Plainfielders will go by stage to enjoy the evening's festivities.

One Half Finished.

Honan & Sons have about eight and a half miles of sewers completed. The contract calls for seventeen miles.

My boy was taken sick with a disease resembling bloody flux. The first thing I thought of was Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. Two doses of it settled the matter and cured him sound and well. I heartily recommend this remedy to all persons suffering from a like complaint. I will answer any inquiries regarding it when stamp is inclosed. I refer to any county official as to my reliability. Wm. Roach, J. P., Primroy, Campbell Co., Tenn. DIFFERENT SUITS, SAME MEN.

GALBRAITH AGAINST GILL AND VICE VERSA TRIED THIS MORNING.

One Put Under Bonds to Keep the Peace, While the Other Is Held for the Grand Jury—Sensational End is Expected.

Galbraith against Gill and Gill against Galbraith were the titles of actions tried before Plainfield justices this morning, in which spicy testimony was given by witnesses. The first case was brought up before Justice Newcorn at eight o'clock and the other before Justice Mosher at ten o'clock. The charge in both cases assault and battery.

Galbraith is a hackman. Gill formerly was, but is now employed by a Dog Corners lady. Galbraith worked for the same woman before Gill secured the position, and it was while discussing her affairs that the two men became involved in an altercation that resulted in fistcuffs playing a tattoo upon each other, and an airing of their grievances before the tribunal of justice.

It seems that Gill and his employer drove up to an out of of town road house one day last week to quench their thirst, and upon the former entering the place found Galbraith there. Since Gill secured the job which Galbraith formerly held the feeling between the two men has not been altogether friendly, but notwithstanding Gill asked the latter to step up and have something. At first he refused, but a little urging brought him before the bar and—well they got into an argument. Then they commenced to talk about betting. Gill went out to his employer and got $35, but when he returned Galbraith insisted on putting up a watch instead of the cash.

This led to more words and finally to blows. Both swore out warrants for each other, the result being that Gill was put under $100 bonds to keep to keep the peace, and Galbraith was held in $300 bail to await the action of the grand jury.

The arguments which brought about the fracas was a part of a discussion that was very sensational in the statements made by the two. It is said that when the matter is brought before the grand jury several well-known people will have to face music that will make them wiggle.

George W. Demeza represented Galbraith and J. P. Powers looked after the interests of Gill.

A Midnight Frolic."

The above title seemed to arouse the curiosity of the New York public, so much so that on the opening night the house was packed to the doors. The success of the play was instantaneous, and during the entire New York engagement the theatre was crowded. The play is an unqualified success; the company a powerful and evenly balanced one, and Miss Lillian Kennedy as the heroine, presents a characterization which for histrionic ability has never been surpassed on the American stage.

Kiely Gets a Good Clubbing.

Big Jim Kiely was nearly killed at a christening Sunday night at Elizabethport. The merry-makers, believing he was there to make trouble, pitched into Kiely and threw threw him out. He attempted to return, when they attacked him with fence pickets and clubbed him unmercifully. He might have been beaten to death had it not been for persons going to his rescue. He will be laid up some time.

Suits Against the Traction.

Three more suits were begun yesterday against the Consolidated Traction Company, of Newark, by persons who had been damaged while riding on, or in collision with, trolley cars. John Taylor asks for $15,000, Michael Kane for $5,000 and the Merchants' Express Company wants $1,500. Julius Sager has brought suit for $5,000 against the New Jersey Traction Company.

Plumbers to Talk.

The Master Plumbers Association adjourned their meeting last evening till tonight when it is expected that Prof. Wingate and James Muir, of New York, will be present. They will talk on expert sanitary matters. They will also tell why Plainfielders should have their house connections to the sewers made by home plumbers.

Robert Wood Dead.

Robert Wood, of 408 West Third street, died at his home yesterday, after a long illness. The funeral will be held tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 from the house.

Which?

There are only two ways to keep cool on these warm days, the first is to start for the North Pole and the other to eat Tier's ice cream. The moral of these remarks is very apparent.

BONNER'S POOR PLAYING.

He is Said to be Putting Up a Very Poor Game.

The Wilkesbarre correspondent of the Sporting Life has this to say about a former Plainfield ball player:

Owing to the criticism of the local press of Dorscher's course in the game of Thursday, August 1st, the gentleman felt himself so aggrieved that he would not umpire the game on August 2d. As a consequence Shannon allowed himself to be seduced into weakening the team by umpiring the game with Mat Kilroy. That necessitated the putting of Bonner at second base, where he gave a first-class exhibition of wretched ball playing. Bonner's poor work manifests itself in the utter demoralization of the team when he plays. Of course it is a nice thing for Bonner to have him located here where he is with his family, but that won't win games. And as the winning of games is the primary object of the club it is difficult to understand what they want with the ex-Leaguer. The argument is made that Bonner's poor work is due to lack of practice; that he does not participate in enough games to give him practice. He might, perhaps, get what practice he requires by having a small boy to throw grounder and popflies for him, as he has developed into a confirmed fumbler.

GREEN WON'T REFORM.

Is Now Sojourning in the Somerset County Jail for His Acts.

Joseph Green, who was arrested yesterday for creating a disturbance at Washingtonville Sunday morning, could not secure bail and in the afternoon was taken to Somerville to await the action of the Grand Jury. It now appears that before Green and his two companions went to Washingtonville they had a fight on Somerset street near Greenbrook road, in which several others were engaged. It is said that they were trying to do up a Swede for some reason or other, when some neighbors appeared and quelled the disturbance. The three then went to the mountains and caused the disturbance as reported in The Daily Press of yesterday. The two young men who were with Green have not been captured as yet.

In connection with the above it might be stated that Green was employed by H. J. Martin, the blacksmith, who did all in his power to assist and help him, but his efforts failed.

Want to Go Up the Hudson.

Justice Newcorn has been deputized by the joint committee from the A. O. U. W. Lodges to see H. P. Baldwin of the Central railroad company and the steamboat companies as to what rates and arrangements can be made for an excursion up the Hudson. He will report Friday night at the meeting.

Before Justice Newcorn.

The case of Shiff against Miller Bros., on contract, was tried before Justice Newcorn yesterday and judgment rendered for the plaintiff for $83.20 and costs.

Justice Newcorn also tried the case on contract of Hand against Lee, yesterday, and the plaintiff was awarded $52.25 and costs.

Festivities at Metuchen.

The Catholic Benevolent Legion, of Metuchen, will give a dance at that place Saturday afternoon and evening. O'Reilly will furnish music and William Hand will run a stage. The local branch of the Legion have been invited to attend in a body.

Criminal Slander.

On complaint of Antonio Karano, Justice Newcorn issued a warrant yesterday for the arrest of Josett Kasett, charging him with criminal slander. He was placed under $100 bail to await the action of the Grand Jury. Matthew Wade, of Elizabeth, furnished the bail.

Turner Leads All.

Turner, the hardhitting outfielder of the Philadelphia National League team, who is a graduate from Plainfield baseballdom, leads all other league players in batting averages, his being 416.

—A cottage prayer meeting was held at the home of Mr. Britton on East Fourth street last night.

We have used it ourselves and think it superior to any other. W. I. Mowrey, Jarvisville, W. Va. For sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves; T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

TO TALK FREE SILVER

Democrats Will Meet at the Capital To-morrow.

A Large Attendance Not Desirable. Prominent Men from Each State Requested To Attend—Important Results Expected—Senator Harris May Be Chairman.

Washington, Aug. 13.—The conference of free coinage democrats called by Senators Harris of Tennessee, Jones of Arkansas and Turpie of Indiana will be held in Washington to-morrow and may extend over that and the next day. Senator Harris will probably be chairman of the conference and Casey Young of Memphis will be its secretary. Several of those who will be present are in Washington and are hopeful that thirty states will be represented. Senator Harris, who reached Washington Saturday, said to-day that a large attendance was not desirable. On the contrary it had been expressly requested that a few prominent men from each state should come. These men, said the Senator, would be democrats of weight and influence and acceptable to members of the party as the possible composition of an executive committee. The senator said he expected important results from the conference, which would be more in the nature of a business meeting than of a convention. He could not tell at this time, however, what scope the meeting would take beyond the objects outlined in the call signed by Messrs. Jones, Turpie and himself.

MICHIGAN MINING TROUBLES.

The Strikers at a Disadvantage in Ishpeming District.

Ishpeming, Mich., Aug. 13.—The mining company yesterday advertised for men and will start the steam shovels at once. The striking miners are caught at a disadvantage, as they thought the mine-owners would attempt no move. It is hard to say whether there will be trouble or not, but at the first signs of an outbreak the militia will be called out. A battalion can be moved here within a few hours, and a full regiment placed on the grounds at a day's notice. The majority of the men are tired of the strike. The ringleaders in the ejection of Britton, the newspaper reporter, from Ishpeming have been arrested.

ROBBED OF DIAMONDS.

$10,000 Worth Stolen from Mrs. Zeigler in Kansas City.

Kansas City, Mo., Aug. 13.—Mrs. George H. Zeigler of Philadelphia, who, with her husband and child, is stopping at the Washington hotel here, was robbed of diamonds valued at $10,000 yesterday. The family were absent from their rooms, when a man to whom they had been introduced called, and, going to their rooms quietly, walked away with the jewels, which had been left upon the table. Supt. Conkling of the Pinkerton agency said that one of the most astute confidence men in the country was in the vicinity and this dodge was just about appropriate to his calibre.

The dying man's appeals for assistance are said to have met with no response.

MURDERED FOR INSURANCE.

A Case Which Resembles the Holmes Atrocities.

Washington, Aug. 13.—The police of this city have under investigation a case which resembles in a small way the celebrated Holmes atrocities. Charles Hammond, 27 years old, and Rose Hammond, aged 28, both colored, were arrested on suspicion of having murdered Campbell Hall, a 10-year-old stepbrother of Hammond's. He was insured in the Metropolitan Insurance company for $50 and was listed in two other insurance associations for small sums. An autopsy made of the body of the boy this evening developed the fact that death was not due to natural causes. Scars to the number of fifteen were discovered on the boy's back and breast and some of them were an inch and a half in length. The examination also showed that no food had been eaten by the deceased for sometime. An inquest was held this morning and several persons have already stated that they have seen the boy brutally whipped by the Hammonds. It is said by the police that some months since another boy who lived with the couple died suddenly and under mysterious circumstances. It is believed his life was insured for $260.

Property valued at nearly half a million dollars was laid in ruins, a hundred people were rendered homeless and a dozen firemen and policemen were overcome by the awful heat and smoke. The fire is supposed to have been caused by spontaneous combustion. The heaviest losers are as follows: Brow & Bailey, $90,000; fully insured. W. J. Buck, Sons & Co., $60,000; fully insured. Buck & Co.'s building, owned by Mrs. Mary Keeley of Spring City, Pa., $100,000; insurance, $50,000.

Fletcher Dean says his children were chased by a man some days ago, and to-day, when a man was seen in the woods acting strangely Dean placed himself at the head of a gang of men to investigate. Soon after entering the woods they were suddenly fired on by the maniac, and Dean, who was in the lead, just escaped with his life. The man, who followed him some distance, firing at him several times as he ran, is described as of great stature and with a long beard.

LIGHTNING'S CARNIVAL

Lives Lost and Property Destroyed.

Many Cities and Towns Storm Swept Yesterday Morning—Several Narrow Escapes from Death Reported. Pranks of Electric Fluid—Damage Great.

New York, Aug. 13.—A thunder storm which in electrical energy has not been surpassed this year swept over Long Island, part of New Jersey and lower New England about 2 o'clock Sunday morning, spreading apprehension and terror and in many places inflicting severe damage and loss of life. At Hicksville, L. I., trees were struck, and a large barn on the premises of Mr. Rohe, two and a half miles south of here, was set on fire and burned to the ground. A horse and a cow, besides a quantity of hay and straw, and some farming implements were destroyed. At Riverhead the net results of the storm are one church badly wrecked, eight horses killed and two barns burned. The Swedenborgian, a new church, was struck and shattered.

In New Jersey.

In Jersey City lightning struck the barn belonging to Woodstock Lumber company, at the foot of James street, at West End. The barn caught fire. Edward Heslin, the company's watchman turned an alarm at box 156 and then set about rescuing the horses. There were fourteen horses in the barn. They plunged and kicked so it was dangerous to go near them. Heslin and men who asserted got three of the horses out of the barn. The others perished. Their cries of agony were heard above the tumult of the storm, the crackling of the burning barn and the shouts of firemen. The loss was $5,000 on the horses and barn which was burned down. At New Brunswick a barn on Ernest place near Old Bridge was struck and set on fire. It was burned to the ground with everything it contained. A volunteer brigade of bucket passers saved two other barns and the farm house which were in danger. At Baptisttown the barn of R. L. Brewer was struck and burned. At Annadale that of D. C. Crammers suffered the same fate.

Damage in Connecticut.

Wm. Tiley, of Granville, was struck by lightning and instantly killed. Lightning entered the bedroom in which Mr. and Mrs. Tiley were sleeping. The wife was badly burned. During the storm at Bridgeport lightning killed a young and valuable horse in the barn of J. T. Quinlan. In Milford a barn belonging to E. H. Smith was struck and destroyed, together with three horses and a cow. Newton Bradford's house at West Haven was wrecked by a stroke of lightning during the storm. Mrs. Bradford was alone with her children when the storm broke. Impelled by some strange premonition of coming evil, she took the children from the bed and laid them on the floor, and as she did so the lightning struck the chimney, passed into the bedroom and, striking the bed, set it afire. Both Mrs. Bradley and her children are somewhat shocked, but no serious results will follow. Nearly every article of furniture in the house was either broken or badly damaged.

PRANKS OF LIGHTNING.

A Woman Dies from Fright—Trolley Car Hit by a Bolt.

Westchester Village, N. Y., Aug. 13.—During the heavy storm early yesterday lightning struck the residence of Charles M. Booth at Unionport, badly damaging the house. The bolt struck the roof and passed down through two floors into the cellar. No one was injured. Living next to Mr. Booth is the family of James Meehan, a section boss on the railroad. Mr. and Mrs. Meehan were asleep when the bolt struck Booth's house. Mrs. Meehan was awaked by the shock and she became so badly frightened that she fell over and expired from fright. The lightning also struck the Woodbine hotel at Unionport, doing little damage but scaring the inmates almost to death. Just as the 1 a. m. car was leaving Westchester for West Farms a bolt of lightning struck the car throwing the car off the track. The motorman and conductor and six passengers were more or less stunned.

DON'T WANT TO GO TO CUBA.

Gendarmes Had To Fire To Hurry Some of the Spanish Reserves.

Madrid, Aug. 13.—The members of the reserve who have been called out for service in Cuba continue to mobilize. Many of the men at Gerona and Taffalla object to going to Cuba, and have protested against being sent on this service. Their protests, however, have not led to serious incidents. At Mataro, about fifteen miles northeast of Barcelona, the reserves refused to march and the gendarmes fired a volley from their carbines into the air to enforce discipline.

Heavy Run of Salmon.

New Westminster, B. C., Aug. 13. The run of salmon in the Fraser river Sunday night was the heaviest on record. More fish were taken from the river than ever before in the same period. A conservative estimate places the total catch at 700,000 fish, an average of 350 each for 2,090 boats. This represents 70,090 cases of canned salmon. The estimated pack so far has been 270,000 cases.

NEW PARLIAMENT OPEN

Speaker Gully Still Holds the Gavel.

The Scene in the Commons Chamber a Brilliant One—Many Distinguished People Were Present—Ambassador Bayard and Ex-Speaker Crisp in the Galleries.

London, Aug. 13.—The preparations for the opening of the house of commons began at a very early hour yesterday morning. One member arrived at 5 o'clock in the morning and waited outside until 6 o'clock when the doors were opened in order to have the distinction of being the first member to enter. The other members came in later until 10 a. m. Thirty places were secured on the government side of the house, while only six seats had been taken on the opposition. William C. Gully, member of parliament for Carlisle, was re-elected speaker of the house of commons without opposition.

Distinguished Visitors Present.

Mr. Gully thanked the house and was then conducted to the chair amid loud cheers On taking the chair he again thanked the house for the honor done him. Mr. Balfour congratulated Mr. Gully upon his re-election, in a few words expressing confidence in his impartiality. Sir William Vernon Harcourt, on behalf of the liberals, also congratulated Mr. Gully. The house then adjourned until Saturday. The scene in the commons chamber was a brilliant one. The sun streamed through the windows of the house, changing its usual dull aspect into one of light and warmth. The diplomats', ladies' and strangers' galleries were crowded with distinguished visitors who watched the proceedings with close attention. Among those noticed in the galleries of the house were Charles Crisp, ex-speaker of the American house of representatives; Thomas F. Bayard, American ambassador to Great Britain, and the Hon. Edwin F. Uhl, American assistant secretary of state.

It Has Bleached Among the Rocks of the Hudson for Three Years.

London, Aug. 13.—The Daily News will print to-day a dispatch from Vienna saying that M. Uurukoff, chief of police of Sofia, was taken into custody at the railway station suspected of having been concerned in the murder of Ex-Premier Stambuloff. Prince Ferdinand arrived here yesterday and was given a most hearty reception. In reply to an address by the mayor of Sofia, Prince Ferdinand declared that he was consoled for all that had occurred recently by the loyal enthusiam displayed by the people. The absence from those gathered to welcome the Prince on his arrival of Monsignor Clement, the Metropolitan of Tirnova, who was chairman of the deputation recently sent by Prince Ferdinand to St. Petersburg, was generally remarked.

Four Persons Dying and Others Saved by Emetics.

Shamokin, Pa., Aug. 13.—Mrs. Peter Koch, Mrs. Morris Zimmerman and two children of Shipman's Mills, near Shamokin, are dying from the effects of being poisoned by eating ice cream. The Koch and Zimmerman families held a social gathering on Saturday night and a freezer of cream was prepared. All persons present ate freely of the cream and shortly afterward became dangerously ill. A physician was called and emetics saved the lives of all the party except Mrs. Koch and Mrs. Zimmerman and a child of each, who have been lying in a precarious condition ever since. An examination proved that the poison had been put in the extract which flavored the cream.

NATIONAL TREASURY

Gold Reserve Reduced $6,000,000 in a Day.

A Drain Seems To Have Begun—Speculation as to What the Administration Will Do To Maintain the Reserve—Heavy Exports of Gold Likely To Occur.

Washington, Aug. 13.—The drain upon the gold reserve of the treasury of the United States, foreshadowed in these dispatches for some time past, seems to have begun in earnest yesterday, when the officials were advised of the withdrawal of $1,650,000 from the sub-treasury at New York for export. This condition of affairs has occasioned much speculation as to the means that the administration will employ to maintain the gold reserve or replenish it should the probable withdrawals reduce it below the amount which it is deemed necessary for the government to hold. It may be stated almost authoritatively that as between another issue of bonds and the calling of an extra session of congress that the former will be resorted to.

Large Withdrawals.

Yesterday's withdrawals were the largest on any one day since the contract with the Belmont-Morgan syndicate went into effect last February. They reduced the gold in the United States treasury to $101,302,363, or a loss of more than $6,000,000 from the highest point it reached after the syndicate had made its final payments last month. On July 9 the gold reserve reached $107,541,375, being higher than on any day, according to the treasury's official "ten days'" statement since February 20, 1893. Between the two dates named $162,400,600 United States bonds were sold for gold a prices aggregating $183,000,000 and the gold reserve, which was something over $65,000,000 in January, 1893, replenished as it has been by these bond sales amounted yesterday to a little more than $101,000,000, or a net loss of $146,000,000.

High Rate of Exchange.

Department officials are loth to discuss the effect on the treasury of renewed gold shipments or to express an opinion as to their probable extent, or when the shipments will cease, or whether the bond syndicate will feel itself bound to replace the gold, as it did the first large withdrawals after its purchase of bonds. With exchange at $4.90 1-2—an exceedingly high figure—the opinion is generally expressed that gold exports to the extent of $20,000,000 or $30,000,000 are likely to occur before Oct. 1. The only thing that is likely to reduce the rate of exchange is heavy shipments of American cereals. Aside from the decline in the gold reserve the treasury situation is regarded as encouraging, as the receipts are gradually approximating to the expenditures. The excess of expenditures over receipts for the past two years amounted to $107,000,000 and for the month and a third which has elapsed of the current fiscal year, $15,000,000. But the receipts are increasing, and officials express the hope that by Jan. 1 next they will equal the expenditures or nearly so.

ATTACKED BY STRIKERS.

An Italian Mob Carrying a Red Flag Dispersed by the Police.

Pittsburg, Aug. 13.—One hundred Italian laborers formerly employed by Booth and Flinn on street improvements, but who are now on a strike for an advance of twenty-five cents a day, attacked a party of workmen on Squirrel Hill yesterday. The workmen made a strong resistance, and several were injured in both crowds, but none fatally. The police charged the mob and captured twenty-one of the rioters, who had marched into the affray under a red flag. Work is now carried on under police guard.

Drowned in the Hudson.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Aug. 11.—A body was picked up in the Hudson river at Marlboro yesterday afternoon. It is supposed to be that of a man who fell from a canal boat. He was 5 feet 6 inches in height, weighed about 160 pounds and is thought to be John McCoy of Albany, who was drowned from the river boat Cooley opposite New Hamburgh, Aug. 9.

The Charleston News declares that it is in favor of keeping the suffrage question out of the South Carolina constitutional convention altogether, remanding the whole subject to the Legislature, and leaving it free to make such provisions as it sees fit, and to change them whenever occasion may require.

The "good road" movement throughout the country has attracted general attention to the subject of wide tires, and recent scientific tests have been made which show great economical advantage in the use of such tires. Several tests have been made on the New Jersey roads, and in every instance they have proved satisfactory.—The Camden Telegram.

A statement of the Post-office Department showing receipts of the twenty largest post-offices in the United States for the quarter ending July 31, 1895, gives the total receipts as $6,794,000, an increase over those of the same quarter in 1894 of $449,000, or 7½ per cent. The receipts of the New York office were $1,526,000, an increase of $116,000.

Chairman Thomas H. Proctor, of the New Jersey State Committee of the People's party, has issued a call for a State convention, to be held at Trenton, Labor Day, Sept. 2d, at ten a. m. The call outlines the work of the convention as follows: To formulate a State platform, to nominate a candidate for Governor, to fill vacancies in the committee, to perfect the State organization, to arrange for an aggressive campaign, and to reaffirm allegiance to the Omaha platform.

A story was recently told of how a preacher tested the effect of the hard times upon his congregation. At the conclusion of one of his sermons he said: "Let everybody in the house who pay their debts stand up." Instantly every man woman and child, with one exception arose to their feet. He seated the crowd, and then said: "Let every man who is not paying his debts stand up." The exception noted, a care-worn, hungry-looking individual, clothed in his last summer suit, slowly assumed a perpendicular position, and leaned upon the back of the seat in front of him. "How is it, my friend," inquired the minister, "that you are the only man in this large congregation, who is unable to meet his obligations?" "I publish a newspaper," he meekly replied, "and my brethren here, who have just stood up, are my subscribers, and—" "Let us pray," exclaimed the minister.—Independent Herald.

MR. LAINE'S SENSIBLE POINTS.

It Is Only Custom That Makes the Barber Work Like a Slave.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—I read the report of the canvass made by your reporter in Saturday evening's Press. I am not at all surprised that there is a difference of opinion as expressed by the barbers of this city on the subject of Sunday closing. All movements have advocates and opponents. Still there is no good reason why barbers should not be released on Sunday for the purpose of following their religious duties or enjoying recreation from the cares of business the same as most other people.

All other business people might open up on Sunday with equal propriety and hypnotize themselves into the belief that it was really necessary for the comfort of humanity that they should do so.

The hours in most shops run from seven a. m., until nine p. m., and on Saturday until twelve, midnight. Then on Sunday from seven a. m. until one p. m., making the aggregate number of working hours in a week ninety-three. To this can be added an hour each day coming to and going from work, making fourteen hours more.

As an industrious barber devotes 107 hours each week out of a possible 168 hours for the privilege of existence.

The legal working hours of labor average nine hours a day. Yet the man who enjoys this great boon waits until all the other pleasures and duties are all over, and then he remembers that he hasn't been shaved. He goes to the barber shop late on Saturday night and a few waiting customers make him decide that he will "wait till morning." That same evening he will chase himself around to the butcher, grocer and baker and get his provisions and other necessities because these tradesmen won't give up their day of rest for his comfort, but the barber invites it by long custom that only needs a little more stiffening in the backbones of some of the craft.

I think if the people who oppose this movement would only look over the facts pointed out to them that would say to their customers "We close on Sunday" and thus remove this relic of barberism.

FEW KNOW ABOUT THE SHAKERS.

An Interesting, God-Fearing People Who Have Given the World Many Important Discoveries.

We may not accept their peculiar religious beliefs nor can we enter into the spirit of their sacrifices. It is not necessary to believe as they do, but we can and do respect their sincerity of purpose and the honor and uprightness which marks all their business dealings.

The Shakers have always been successful inventors and some of the greatest of the conveniences of the present day found origin in their settlements.

In one particular they excel all other men or classes of men, and that is in the cultivation of medical herbs and plants and their preparation for use. They have made it a study for more than a hundred years. It is one of their peculiar industries. Their lives have been devoted to it.

Their latest and greatest achievement is the Shaker Digestive Cordial. It is not offered as a cure for all diseases. It does not pretend to be, but one disease it will cure and that is indigestion.

It is so effective in curing those who use the remedy that they are loud in their praises of it and in consequence a large demand for the cordial has been created.

Sufferers who resort to its use have not long to wait to see the result. The effect is almost immediate. The first dose usually gives relief and if continued a permanent cure will follow.

It not only contains already digested food, but it digests food as well, thus toning up the general system. An interesting pamphlet is now being issued by the Shakers and can be had for the asking at almost any drug store.

Kenneth Bazemore had the good fortune to receive a small bottle of Chamberlaim's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy when three members of his family were sick with dysentery. This one small bottle cured them all and he had some left which he gave to Geo. W. Baker, a prominent merchant of the place, Lewiston, N. C., and it cured him of of the same complaint. When troubled with dysentery, diarrhœa, colic or cholera morbus, give this remedy a trial and you will be more than pleased with the result. The praise that naturally follow its introduction and use has made it very popular. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale at Reynolds's Pharmacy, Park and North avenues; T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

MR. HONAN'S SIDE.

He Says That The Courier-News Story Was Entirely Wrong.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—

Seeing in yesterday's Courier-News a statement of a little difficulty between myself and Chief of Police Grant, and as they only printed one side of the argument, I take this means of setting myself right before the public.

The driver of the team in question instead of coming up Washington street, came down Front street, and taking down the barricade drove through and was stopped at Washington street with my orders, and he became abusive and was not allowed to pass through. He then went after the police, and brought Chief Grant. The chief, without consulting me or any one else as to the cause of the trouble, took down the barricade and ordered the man to go through, and I refused to let him pass as he had been very abusive to myself and foreman. The chief, seeing that he was in the wrong, and not knowing how to hide his chagrin, began to upbraid me and used language unbecoming an officer of your city, for which there are several witnesses as proof, and as a last resort threatened me with arrest. I asked him what time I would appear, and he told me nine o'clock. I then ordered him off the street where he was interfering with me and my workmen. When I went to the hearing, and threatened to enter complaint against him, he said he did want any sentence imposed, and if I had been guilty of any offense, I do not think the law would have been so easily satisfied.

Hoping that I have not taken too much of your valuable space, and wishing to stand right in the minds of the people of the city of Plainfield.

I am yours respectfully,

Harry W. Honan,
308 West Third street.

Was a Mistake.

Big Deals for '95 and '96.

There is no business which admits of so many wonderful innovations as the theatrical business. The present age might appropriately be styled "The Realistic." Men with vast capital have entered the field, and their rivalry and spirited competition have called forth the most astounding results. The public crave amusement as one of the most essential necessities of life, and are so thoroughly educated as to the merits of what is good or bad that it pays best to cater to them by presenting only what is certain to be stamped as "O. K."

One of the theatrical enterprises which will open in New York City is the comedy drama, "A Midnight Frolic," for which extensive preparations have been carried on, is sure to make an instantaneous and unqualified success. After its New York opening it will be sent across the continent to San Francisco with the entire New York caste, and it is unanimously conceded by newspapers and theatrical critics that among the big deals for '95 and '96 will be found "A Midnight Frolic."

Resolutions of Condolence.

At a regular meeting of Zephyr Hook and Ladder Company No. 1, the following resolution was unanimously adopted:

Plainfield, N. J., Aug. 12th, 1895.

A New Jersey Railroad.

A railroad from Morristown to Whippany is being built by Superintendent J. E. Melick, who, it is understood, has several influential men of Hanover at his back. The road will be about four miles long and will probably be used largely for freight traffic. The freight comes to Morristown at present and is hauled by teams to Whippany.

The loads are heavy, and as the traffic amounts to something over one hundred tons a day, it is almost impossible to keep the roads in a passable condition. Well-informed railroad officials say that the road, for which the right of way practically costs nothing, can pay for itself in ten years solely from the freight transportation, to say nothing of the passenger traffic.

Contractor Marsden is fulfilling his contract, notwithstanding the item published in last night's Courier-News in regard to the complaint made that he is not using water to settle the dirt. DANCED WITH ANOTHER GIRL.

Miss Haslam Became Hystetical—Crowd Trampled Its Members.

Richard Lilly took Miss Kate Haslam and her mother on the Order of Foresters' exuursion yesterday at Elizabeth. Returning Lilly danced with another girl. Miss Haslam scratched him, pulled the other girl's hair, removed a large portion of her own clothing, and said she would jump overboard.

The boat reached the landing about the time one policeman was exhausted by the young woman, and three others had all they could do to restrain her.

Persons on the wharf rushed to see what was the matter and several women and girls were knocked down and trampled. Miss Haslam, who is still hysterical, was locked up.

No Blood Was Spilled.

"It happened in Leadville, just about the time that the camp was at its best, which means when every man that has sunk a shaft was a prospective millionaire, and gambling was a legitimate business," said Peyton R. Hull.

"On New Year's day a big crowd was assembled in a popular saloon and gambling establishment known as the Board of Trade, it being located on Harrison avenue, the principal street in the town. The bar was in the front room and the faro tables in the back one.

"Suddenly there was a loud smack as if some one had struck another a terrific blow in the face, and in an instant everything was in confusion. Two men had engaged in an alteration and both were reaching for their pistols. It was a signal for everybody else to get out of the way of flying lead, and the way the boys slid under the tables, myself among the number, to get out of harm's way, was a sight.

"In two seconds not a man in the crowd but the two principals was on his feet. Every one was hugging the floor, and hugging it hard, with his stomach.

"Then there was an ominous pause. Every instant we expected to hear the rattle of small artillery and two men dropping on the floor, spending their life blood. But there was no sound.

"When we mustered courage enough to look up, those two men were standing face to face in the middle of the floor, each holding an enormous weapon in his right hand pointed at the other's face. When we looked again we saw that we had been rudely imposed upon.

"The weapons were big Bologna sausages and the whole encounter had been purposely arranged between these two people for a huge joke on the rest of the boys.

"It was the cheapest crowd you ever saw that crept out from under the tables. Drinks were free for the rest of the day."—Washington Post.

Lovers Again.

'Tis always pleasant to see true love run along in smooth channels. A month or so ago a Cape Elizabeth woman came into a Portland oculist's store and purchased a glass eye. She confidently informed the oculist that her husband had been arrested, and that she was glad of it, for he hadn't used her well at all. She hoped that a term in jail would help him, and she proposed to go up and see him sentenced, and so she got a glass eye in order to make a proper appearance in court.

This week the woman came in again. With her was a man whom she introduced as her husband. The glass eye had been accidentally broken and the man was preparing to buy another "and darn the expense. I want her to have just as good an eye as you've got in the store, for there ain't no better woman on the face of the earth."

The wife winked the sound eye blissfully at the oculist and whispered:

"That jail done him a sight of good."

A WILD BERRY.

When the man whom we had elected sheriff came in and officially informed us that we need not get out another number of our newspaper, we sadly shook hands with one another, grabbed at our individual belongings and bade farewell to the dingy old room wherein many a bright and extravagant hope had been hung to gather dust amid the cobwebs. And soon we were scattered over adversity's landscape, no two of us having the courage to pursue the same direction. I cared not whither I went; it was my aim to be aimless. And so I strolled. One afternoon, in the western part of Tennessee, I came upon a log bridge that appeared to have been carelessly tumbled across a small stream. The road was grass-grown; the bridge was covered with morning-glory vines.

The scene was too romantic to be pastoral. There was not a house, not a field, not a meadow in sight. But down the stream where the wire grass was thick and where the water oaks cast a broad shade was a Gypsy camp. Hunger, the keenest of suggesters, advised me to visit the camp. I did so, and as I drew near I saw several men and women standing about a large box, which served as a table; and bending over in a position of agonizing anxiety was a man striving to write on a piece of paper bag. They did not see me until I was close to them—they had paid no attention to the whimsical yelping of a dog.

But when they saw me there was a scattering about, and the writer grabbed his paper and stood looking at me almost fiercely.

"How far is it to Bolivar?" I asked, to apologize for my intrusion.

"I don't know," the writer answered.

"How far is it to the Hatchie River?"

"Don't know."

"How far is it to the railroad?"

He shook his head.

"How far is it to any place?"

He looked at me sharply and answered:

"It's only a short distance to any place away from here."

But I was not to be bluffed. I had been harangued.

"What are you trying to do?" I asked.

"Trying to write a letter to friends in England."

"And can't you write it?"

"I'm afraid that it's a little more than I can do. The only one of us that could write died not long ago."

"Let me write for you."

Again he looked at me sharply; not resentfully, however, but with an anxious questioning.

"Can you write?" he asked.

"Yes, for unfortunately I have tried to make writing my business."

"Then you will charge us too much for writing a letter."

"I will not charge you anything. It will be a pleasure."

I took from my pocket a large notebook and a pencil. They made way for me, and I sat down at the box. I asked not another question, but began to describe the scene of their camp. As vividly as I could I pictured the lazy stream, the vine-covered bridge, the rugged bluff not far away. I read this to them, and then asked what they wanted to say to their friends. The writing was unquestionably rude, but they saw the picture and gleefully they clapped their hands. How generous an audience; how charming a literary circle—hungry imagination, throbbing fancy.

"Read it again," they cried, and when I had done so they told me what to say to their friends. When the letter was completed they mounted a boy on their fleetest horse and sent him to the post-office. I suggested that it might be well for me to go with him, that it would set me quite a distance on my way, but hereupon spoke up the man who had striven to write.

"No, you stay with us till to-morrow. We will want you to write another letter then—exactly like the other one."

The man with whom I had transacted my literary business was Ham Tish, the ruler of the tribe. He was a powerful old fellow and it occurred to me that he might be a pretty tough customer in a rough and tumble fight.

Sitting just across the fire from me was a girl. Out of the darkness she had come like an illuminated shadow. Her black hair was tangled and her face, warm and rich, was like a wild berry. She laughed, and I sat there with an ear of corn growing cold in my hand. She was stronger than conscience—she had taken my appetite. She looked at me shyly and I wondered if she had heard the reading of the letter. Ham Tish spoke to her, and called her Lees, and she called him father.

I don't think that I slept very much that night. I lay on a blanket under a bush looking at the stars, her eyes. Once during the night I thought that I heard her laugh, but it must have been the rippling of the creek.

Early at morning I saw her go down to the stream to bathe her face. Instinct suggested caution, and I peeped out to see if Ham Tish was within sight. He was not, and I went down to the stream. She was wiping her face with a handful of oak leaves.

"Won't you take my handkerchief?" I asked.

And then I remembered I had none, that I had tied it about the wounded finger of a railway section hand. She wasn't frightened. She laughed.

"I would rather have leaves," she said. And then she added, "Where did you come from?"

"From nearly all directions."

"But don't you live in a house?"

"Not now. Once I did, but now I live as you do, under the trees."

"But isn't it nice to live in a house and not have to go away? I have seen places where I would like to live all the time and have chickens and ducks, and not have to steal them. Did you ever live that way?"

"Yes, until I was sick of it."

"But you didn't get sick of not having to steal chickens and ducks, did you?"

"I lived that way until to have stolen anything would have been a relief."

"And do you like to steal?" she asked, shooting a glance at me that almost made me dance a jig.

"I shouldn't care to steal a chicken," I answered, "but I know of a wild berry that I should like to steal."

"But you don't have to steal anything that's wild," she replied. She was silent for a moment and then she asked, "Are you going with us?"

A thrill shot through me and made my fingers tingle.

"Why do you ask?" was all I could trust myself to say.

"Because father said he wanted you to write more letters. Will you?"

"I will write 10,000 letters for your father. I would even take off my shirt and cover it with messages for his friends."

I wrote another letter and Lees clapped her hands with delight.

The same boy was sent to the post-office, and this time I did not ask if it might not be well for me to go with him. Along toward noon, while I was poking about to catch a sight of the girl, Ham Tish came up and asked me if I knew anything about horses. I was forced to acknowledge that I did not, whereupon he remarked:

"Then I don't suppose you care to go with us. We are going over here to trade."

He had thought to favor me with an entertainment. There may be drearier recitals than the lies told during a horse swap, but I have never heard them. But even had he promised the keenest excitement I should have declined to go. There was but one thing for me, and that was to gorge my gaze on that wild berry.

And where was she? I saw her standing under a tree a short distance from the stream. A number of children and smaller girls were playing about her. They had pulled a grape vine from a tree and were jumping it. As I approached Lees turned from the group and began slowly to walk toward the creek. I overtook her.

"How long will they let me stay?" I asked.

"Until you write enough letters," she answered, laughing.

"But do you know how many they want written?"

"I don't know; but ever so many, I should think."

"Don't you want me to write some for you?"

"No," she said, after a short pause. "I don't know anybody."

"But you have friends in England, haven't you?"

"No, not now. I had one."

"And did he die?" I asked.

"She died," was the reply.

Down the stream we strolled. In the delight of her marvelous beauty I forgot that there had ever been a civilization. In the shade on a bank of moss we sat. I told her stories, of giants and of beautiful women. She was leaning back with her eyes half closed, and through her lashes I saw the playing of a fire like the lightning that flashes behind a summer's fringy cloud.

"Tell me more," she said when I had stopped to gaze in rapturous silence upon her.

I would have told her more, but suddenly glancing at the sun, she exclaimed:

"We must go. The men will be back soon."

I understood her; she was afraid that her father might see her alone with me. And I wondered that she had not a similar fear with regard to her mother. She must have read my thoughts, for she said:

"Mother never scolds me. Father does sometimes. One time on the roadside I stopped and talked to a man: I didn't want to stop, but he asked me to wait a moment, and I did, for he was a kind man. But father scolded me."

"You didn't fall in love with the man, did you?" I eagerly asked.

She laughed at me.

"I wouldn't know how to do that," she said.

"But you could be easily taught. I could teach you."

She pouted at me and ran back to the camp. That night she sat across the fire from me. Her father stood near her and talked horse with a young fellow who hung mysteriously about in the shadow. Several times I spoke to the girl, but she simply nodded and smiled at me.

Ham Tish began to walk up and down, still talking to the man in the shadow. I leaned over at the fire to rake a coal upon my pipe, and when I looked up I saw Ham Tish pointing toward a tent.

The girl got up and slowly walked away, and Ham Tish ceased talking to the man in the shadow. I lay under the bush, but I saw no stars, for the sky was black. But I heard the rippling of the creek. It was just daylight, for the newly kindled fires were still red against the shadow that lay along the woods when Ham Tish called me

"I want you to eat with me this morning," he said as I approached. "Sit down over there," he added, pointing to a log.

I sat down and he continued:

"Would you like to live with us?"

"I should be delighted!" I exclaimed.

"But wouldn't you get tired roaming around?"

"Never. I should always find it a pleasure."

"But would you be willing to come under my authority?"

"Yes; I would be willing to sign any sort of an agreement."

He looked hard at me.

"Then you haven't many ties to hold you to the house."

"If I had I would break them."

He grunted and was silent. While we were eating a boy led two horses forward.

"I want you to take a ride with me," said Ham Tish. "With your eye for the beautiful I want you to help me select a place for a new camp. I am afraid of malaria here. Will you go with me?"

"Most gladly."

"There's your horse."

I mounted one horse and Ham Tish the other. Just as we were turning away I heard a voice, and, looking back, I saw Lees standing on the steps of a wagon. She stood drawing back a red curtain and the sun, just rising, threw his first rays over her.

"Will you be gone long?" she asked.

And without waiting for Ham Tish to answer, I made bold to say:

"No, not long."

Along the grass grown road we pursued our way in silence. We turned to the left into the thick woods. An hour passed.

"Here is a beautiful place," I said.

"Yes," Ham Tish answered, "but it is malarious."

The woods became thicker, wild as an unexplored forest. "Here's where we stop. Get down," said Ham Tish.

I dismounted and Ham Tish, reaching over, took hold of the stirrup straps and crossed them over the saddle. He did not get down.

"Here's where we part company," he said, pulling the bridle over my horse's head preparing to lead him.

"What!" I exclaimed.

"Here is where I leave you." The flap of his coat blew aside and I saw the brass handle of a pistol.

"But won't you let me go back to camp and tell the people goodby?" I pleaded.

"There is no camp," he replied. "It is gone. Goodby." And so he left me alone in the forest.—Opie Read, in Chicago Times-Herald.

A Texas Ranger.

The Texas Rangers are few in number, but, individually, very capable. They are divided into companies of from ten to twenty men, and each company has its Captain and Lieutenant.

Billy McDonald, Captain of the squad at Amarillo, was at Fort Worth recently, and a Republic correspondent had a little talk with him. Capt. McDonald belongs to that class of men that has rid Texas of its "killers." In personal appearance he is a surprise. About five feet ten inches tall, he weighs probably 130 pounds. His hair, closely cropped, is gray. His mustache is of the same color. His eyes are gray, clear and keen, but of a kindly expression. He wears blue clothes and a white slouch hat.

He had his ribs shot away, two bullets put into his left arm, one in his right shoulder, and had his face and ear badly powder burned in a fight in Quanah, Tex. Three men did the shooting with McDonald in the middle of the street. Noticing the powder burns on his face, I said:

"That fellow must have been pretty close to you. I don't see how he missed you."

"He didn't miss me."

"Didn't you get a shot at him?"

"Oh yes; I got a shot at him. I did the best I could."

"That man isn't living in this country now," said a gentleman standing close by.

McDonald smiled. "No, he isn't living," he said.

"Doesn't it rather take a man's nerve from him to have three men shooting at him at once, all from different directions?" I queried.

"Well, not when you get used to it. I've been in the business so long that I don't mind knocking about with these fellows occasionally."

There was a short pause, and then the old Ranger said, reflectively:

"Most of this killing is all nonsense. Too many men are shot without cause. All you want is good management. I believe that with my lieutenant and six men I can take Satan and all his aides and lock 'em up."—St. Louis Republic.

A Remarkable Juvenile.

At the age of 90, George W. Goff, who lives near Puntagordtha, has grown young again. Up to a year ago Goff was blind, partially deaf and bald, and has been so for many years. About that time, however, he suddenly recovered his eyesight and hearing and his hair began to grow.

Now Goff hears and sees as good as he ever did and his head is covered with a growth of black hair. As his eyesight strengthened and his hair grew a marked change occurred in his physical condition, and from being a decrepit man, hardly able to walk, he became as strong and active as a youth of twenty years.

The wrinkles on his skin disappeared and he now looks fresh and youthful. The case has puzzled the physicians. They say the man is entirely rejuvenated and may live ninety years longer. They assert that the old tissues have been replaced by new and that physically Mr. Goff is not more than 20 years old. So youthful did he feel that last week he married a handsome young girl.

To look at the couple one would never suspect that was any difference in their ages, although the groom is seventy years older than his bride.

Mr. Goff was born in Georgia in 1805. He fought in the Indian war under Andrew Jackson and remembered Old Hickory well. He was also in the Mexican and Civil wars and was wounded in the battle of Buena Vista.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

The Farmer's Complaint.

"The complaint of the farmer is proverbial," said a gentleman recently, "and a season in which he would find no cause for it, would be extremely rare. I have just come from the West where I have had occasion to visit a great many of farming districts, and I must say I have never seen such crops as they are having there this year.

"One farmer was showing me the result of fine growing weather and superior skill in cultivating, when I said to him:

" 'Well, you ought to be satisfied with such crops as these. There is certainly nothing lacking. You have no cause for complaint this year.'

"The old farmer scratched his head and stood in a meditative mood for a moment, then hesitatingly replied:

" 'Well, you know, such crops as these is pesky hard on the soil.' "—Pittsburg Dispatch.

MISSING FROM THE 6:54 EXPRESS.

A RAILWAY INSPECTOR'S STORY.

BY JOHN T. PARTINGTON.

"Well, I'm not sure that he can," replied the baronet. "You may see him, of course, but I don't want you to take him away at present. I'll tell you why. My eldest son was thrown from his horse yesterday, and, strange as it may seem to you, I believe the little fellow is doing him more good than the doctor. His Christian name he tells us is Frank, but he does not speak some words very distinctly, and we cannot quite make out his surname, although you are no doubt aware of it. He was not at all disconcerted to find himself in a strange house last night. He seemed to think it was the place he was intended to come to. He roamed about the house quite freely; a bit too freely we thought at first, for he got into my son's room, walked up to the bed, and placed his hand on my son's. We were all surprised at the effect. My son, who was in a state of semi-consciousness, looked at him fixedly for a moment or two, and then, with a strength we had not thought he still possessed, raised himself on his right elbow, leaned forward in bed, and smothered the boy's face with kisses. Then he sank back exhausted. It was all so sudden and unexpected that we were fairly startled. And ever since then he has seemed not to be able to bear the boy away from him. If he only feels the little fellow's hand in his, or touching his face or head, he is calm and content, but if the hand is withdrawn he becomes agitated and restless. You will readily understand, therefore, that I am very unwilling to part with the boy just at present. But you can see him, and telegraph to his mother that you have done so, and that he is all right. And now, just one question—can you tell me who is the boy's mother?"

"YES HE DID," REPLIED SIR PHILIP.

"Yes, Sir Philip," I replied, "her name is Fairholme. Her name before marriage was Vaughan—Ethel Vaughan; and I have heard to-day, although she has not told me herself, that she was at one time engaged to your son."

"I thought as much—I thought as much," said Sir Philip, pacing the room excitedly; "and is her—her husband with her?"

"Her husband died two years ago," I said; and, rightly or wrongly, I felt considerable pleasure in giving the information.

I could see that the baronet was considerably relieved by this announcement. He looked into the fire meditatively for a moment or two, and then said: "May I ask you to convey a message from me to Mrs. Fairholme? Tell her I am most anxious her boy should not leave here at present. No doubt, however, she is equally anxious to see him and satisfy herself that he is really safe and sound. As the boy cannot go to her, ask her to come here to him. Ask it as a favor to myself, and for the welfare of my son."

"Very well, Sir Philip," I replied, "I will convey your message with all possible speed. But I am anxious to know how the boy happened to get up to the hall. Do you mind telling me how you account for it?"

"Well, in view of what you have told me since you came here, I don't mind saying that I believe it was a providential arrangement. At first none of us could understand it. We were simply dumfounded when the little fellow walked into the house among us last night, and quietly proceeded to take off his overcoat, and make himself at home. In our anxiety about my son, however, he was left unquestioned for some little time, except by the children, who soon became quite friendly with him. Later on, we questioned him, but he could tell us nothing except that my wife was 'nurse,' and that his mother had sent him to live with her until Nellie was better, and Nellie we understood to be his sister.

"We knew the boy had not been in the carriage with us, so we questioned Williams, the coachman, and he said the boy rode on the box with him. The stationmaster placed him there, Williams says. Williams knew that the boy was not one of ours, but thought that as we had been visiting some relatives, we had brought one of their children back with us, and therefore he raised no question, and on arrival here lifted the boy down, and he passed into the house with the rest of the children."

"I think it is all quite clear now, Sir Philip," I said, "and the explanation of what seemed a very mysterious disappearance is, after all, a simple one."

"I feel that I have failed in one thing," said the baronet; "I ought to have sent word to the station in anticipation of inquiries being made for the boy. But last night we were all upset in consequence of the accident to my son, and it was very late before we could fully realize the position of affairs. And then, as you know, the distance to the station is rather considerable. So the duty was left until this morning, and this morning there have been difficulties of various kinds which have prevented me from sending a messenger to the station until about an hour ago, when a man started. You would probably meet him on the way. And now you must have some refreshment, and then the sooner you get the news and my message to Mrs. Fairholme the better for all concerned."

In a very short time I was driving back to the station, feeling, I need hardly say, considerable satisfaction at the success which had at last attended my efforts to recover the lost boy. I was just in time to catch a train to Rhyl, and at the end of another half-hour I was turning into the little garden-path leading to the front door of No. 2 Colwyn-villas.

The door was thrown open before I reached it, and Mrs. Fairholme, flushed and eager, stood before me, and glanced anxiously for one moment into my face.

"You have found my boy!" she cried; "I see it in your face! Oh! I am so thankful. Come in and tell me all about it."

"YOU HAVE FOUND MY BOY!" SHE CRIED.

* * * * * * * *

One of my most precious possessions is a large photograph of a bright, handsome, fearless-looking boy, dressed in a Little Lord Fauntleroy suit, and carrying a London and Northwestern Railway Company's time-table in his hand. The photograph is most handsomely framed, and hangs in my best room at home. In the drawer of a small cabinet in the same room is a letter, also very highly valued, which reads as follows:

"Dear Mr. Barnes:—I want you to be good enough to accept from me the accompanying photograph of my boy, as a memento of your successful search for him on the occasion which you, no doubt, so well remember. My husband and I shall always feel that we owe you a debt of gratitude for the interest you took in his recovery. I need hardly tell you that we are thankful, also, for the indirect results of what I regarded at the time as a most unfortunate occurrence. We often say that we believe it was God's way of bringing us together again. I may at least say this to you, for you know something of the romance of our lives. And be assured that in my husband and myself you will always have friends who will be glad to do all that they can to promote your welfare. Believe me, very gratefully yours,

"ETHEL SANDFORD."

Personally Misconducted Themselves.

They tell a good story on a party of excursionists who went on a personally misconducted tour to Mexico last winter. The party was in charge of Charles Gates, of Toledo. They traveled in a special train, which stopped at all the interesting places en route long enough to give the excursionists ample time to see the sights, and sometimes they saw some not down on the bills. This story concerns one of them.

They stopped at a small town near the Mexican frontier—name omitted, lest after this tale is printed excursionists should swarm to see it. While strolling along a little stream half a dozen of the male members of the party came across an inclosure with the legend:

"Bathing for ladies. Do not look."

The fence was not too high to climb, and when a Greaser policeman happened along that way he found six staid and supposedly respectable heads of families hanging over that fence, gazing with all the strength of their dozen eyes.

Accordingly, he gathered them in and escorted them down to the little adobe jail, where they were locked up to await bail. As the time for the train to depart approached the wives of the six prisoners began to look about for their worser halves.

Then a Mexican official came to the train and notified them of the trouble. Mr. Gates, who had luckily stayed with the train, at once went to the rescue.

First he interviewed the prisoners, and then he went before the local alcade to plead for them. Luckily that official spoke English and also enjoyed a good joke.

"These are all American gentlemen," urged Mr. Gates. "Highly respected citizens of some of our largest communities."

"Well, they should not have looked over the fence; they saw the sign."

"I am convinced that they did not see the sign," insisted Gates.

"Why?" inquired the alcalde.

"Because there was half a dozen more in the party, and if they had seen that sign all would have been there."

"Release the prisoners," said the alcalde, while his sides shook with laughter.—Washington Post.

Sensitive Chicago.

A New York merchant recently, while joking with a Chicago friend about the great departure made by the Western metropolis from the code of etiquette, such as the fashion of eating pie and beer for breakfast, bet $10 that a letter mailed in New York, addressed, "Windy City" would reach its destination and be delivered. The bet was taken by the Chicago man with an expression of regret that the amount was not $10,000 instead of $10.

The letter was mailed. It bore the following address:

"Mr. ——, Mondanock Block, 'Windy City.'"

When the letter reached the hands of the clerk in the New York Post Office he without hesitation placed it with other mail matter for Chicago, and it started on its westward journey.

At the other end of the line, however, the letter met with a different reception, which thoroughly illustrates the alacrity of Chicago people to resent a slur upon the fair name of their city. The postal clerk refused absolutely to permit the delivery of the letter, and forwarded it back to New York for a more complete address, pretending, of course, that the well deserved title, "Windy City," was unknown in Chicago.

The clerks in New York, upon the receipt of the letter, wrote "Chicago, Ill.," in red ink under the typewritten words, "Windy City, which they did not erase, and then stamped on the envelope, "Deficiency in address supplied by N. Y. P. O."

The letter made a second trip to Chicago. This time it was delivered, but the Post Office employes of Chicago refused to stamp the envelope.

The merchant now exhibits the envelope as a curiosity. He believes it to be the first letter delivered in the country by mail that was purposely not stamped by the Post Office receiving it.

The Last Straw.

There is an epidemic of cats on upper Wooster street. Less than a year ago there were only two or three cats in the neighborhood, and they were of the upstreck bob tailed variety, but now there are cats and cats to spare.

One resident of the street counted six cats sitting around on the walk near his back door one morning recently, and the cat that claims him as an owner was not in evidence at that.

There was the big tiger that no one owns, the small black cat that all of the neighbors have tried to give away, the yellow cat that has stolen everything she could lay her claws on and still is as thin as a rail; the black and white Tom cat that has ruled the region up to date, the Maltese cat that has strayed from half a mile away and distributes his residence all over, and the half grown, ordinary striped cat that is trying to make a place for itself. All of these six cats were sitting about with greedy eyes looking toward the door, apparently waiting for a chance to eat.

Looking over the feline assemblage and noting that the cat that lives with him was not one of the number, the proprietor of that particular back door threw an old hat at the cats and it went away beyond them into a flower bed, and when he stepped across the yard to pick it up, he discovered his own cat quietly snugged in a corner under a chrysanthemum shrub with four brand new kittens by her side.

"Great scat!" he remarked. "Eleven cats in one small yard!"—Hartford Courant.

As Far as She Would Go.

"I wish you would be frank with me, Miss Hilltop," said young Mr. Birmingham, who was urging his suit.

"Couldn't, really," replied the girl. "That would be too familiar. You may call me Frances, though."—Pittsburg Chronicle Telegraph.

LAWYERS' PICKINGS.

FABULOUS SUMS SOME CLIENTS ARE FORCED TO PAY.

What Kind of a Code Is It Which Permits a Fee of $800,000 for the Misinterpretation of Its Provisions. Estates are Considered Pie.

"Howard," in the Philadelphia Press, thus entertainingly writes of a matter that is legally permitted and is practiced and connived at by those who, first of all, are supposed to uphold law and equity and prevent robbery in any form:

The fees which lawyers receive are of interest usually only to the brethren of their profession and those who pay them. Sometimes when men gain fame, as Conkling did in politics and Charles O'Connor did at the bar, there is popular interest in these earnings, and is also the case when a fee of unusual size is paid. When the Fayerweather will was offered for probate, and announcement was made of a contest, the impression was that the opportunity for the earning of fees which because of their size would become traditional would be sure to be taken speedy advantage of.

Some of the most distinguished lawyers of New York and a few from other cities appeared in the court room at the time of the first hearing, that one in which Frederic Coudert denounced the will as a fraud upon its face, and thereby, inferentially at least, making accusations against one of the members of the bar, Gen. Woodford's partner, Thomas D. Ritch.

Not far from six millions of dollars was the appraised value of Mr. Fayerweather's estate. He left no children, and his widow was an invalid whose days, according to her physician, were numbered. There were no collateral heirs and some twenty colleges which had suddenly became enriched by this will of a man who was not estimated before his death to be even a millionaire, excepting by a few of his closest friends.

The litigations have extended now over a period of four years, and distinguished counsel have continued in the case. The executors have disposed of some millions, and they have some millions in their hands, and a short while ago in proceedings in court information of some of the counsel fees was made public.

For instance, John E. Parsons, whose friends say that he is fond of the repute which he has of having "the finest practice at the English speaking bar," received $15,000, and ex-Judge Arnoux the same amount for services as counsel to the executors.

This does not represent all of their earnings, for before the last accounting Judge Arnoux had received $50,000 upon one occasion for services and Mr. Parsons $30,000, and then again a second time these two counsels divided $41,000 between them for a later service. So far, then, it appears that both have received $120,000.

Other lawyers of less conspicuous relations to the case have received proportionately less sums, but it is understood by members of the bar here that not far from $400,000 has been the reward of the lawyers up to this time for their fortunate association with this single case.

When the Havemeyers, desiring to imitate the Rockefellers, sought to establish a sugar trust, they retained Mr. Parsons for that difficult and delicate work. The precise amount of the retainer and fees he and they of course alone know, but it has always been the belief of the members of the bar here that Parsons was paid the largest sum ever received by a lawyer in New York city for a single service.

Reports have differed as to the precise amount. Some lawyers have said that Mr. Parsons in all earned not far from $800,000. Others say that his fee was $400,000, and that he earned considerably more by the appreciation of the securities of the Sugar Trust.

The bricks with which he constructed the Sugar Trust were made without straw, for the Attorney-General of this State, by one short, swift litigation, destroyed that structure and the Sugar Trust was no more than a name.

The largest fee ever awarded by our courts was to William Nelson Cromwell a few years ago for his services as receiver and reconstructor of a financial institution which was hit very hard at the time of the 'Barings' collapse. Mr. Cromwell gave but a few months' time to this work, and for that reasen his fee seemed to be unduly great. It was in the neighborhood of $250,000.

A veteran judge, who is now retired from the bench, while speaking of these great fees in connection with the Fayerweather litigation, told an interesting anecdote of the late Charles O'Connor. He said that Mr. O'Connor had so managed a case involving a large sum of money as to give the highest satisfaction to his clients, saving for them a great property which was in danger. It was an estate and his clients were the executors. After the termination of the litigation the executors asked Mr. O'Connor for his bill, and, not getting it, they were compelled to the very unusual course of dunning the great lawyer for the bill. At last they got it, and were surprised to find that it was for only $1,000, and a check was sent to Mr. O'Connor for that amount.

What He Bet On.

"William," she said, severely. "I am surprised that you should so far forget yourself as to bet on a horse race."

"I haven't been betting on any horse race," was the reply. "You wrong me, when that I bet on was the probable intention of the horse owners."—Washington Star.

SEWERS WILL SOON BE READY.

MR. FROST SAYS THEY WILL BE IN OPERATION BY NOVEMBER.

Work Being Pushed by the Contractors—Every Householder Will be Compelled to Use Them Where They Run.

Chairman George H. Frost, of Councilmanic Committee on Sewers, has furnished the following for publication:

The time for the completion of the outfall sewer by Contractor Marsden is November first, and there is every reason to believe that the work will be finished promptly as called for in the contract; the sewage disposal farm is being cleared of brushwood; the engineering work prelimary to the preparation of plans and specifications is being pushed as energetically as possible, and the filtration beds will be ready for the reception of sewage by the time that the outfall sewer is completed. Contractor Siddall is well through Fifth street with the curb connections and will work next from Netherwood along the entire line of main sewers as far as Grant avenue and Front street, after which he will begin on the lines on the Honan contract now being laid. Unless some unforseen cause should occur the Plainfield sewer system will be in full operation by the middle of November at latest.

The question is frequently asked if connection with the sewer is compulsory. Unless Plainfield expects to become an exception to the general rule there will be no option in the matter—every house on the lines of sewers must be connected with the sewer and within reasonable time; not a single cesspool or privy vault in the sewered district will be allowed to make a pipe connection with the public sewers, but these disagreeable features of the Plainfield of today will be abolished as speedily as possible until not a single one remains.

Concerning the details of house connections some information will be given out later on.

THE RACE QUESTION.

A Saloon Keeper to Be Sued for Abusive Language.

The race question has caused more than one quarrel, and now promises to involve a Plainfield saloon keeper in a suit. The story is that a man went to a saloon to drink on Saturday evening, and was invited by a friend to drink in the side room. The proprietor would not allow him to enter, and, so the offended individual claims, used very abusive language.

He says he intends to sue the saloon keeper under a civil rights law.

Free Street Fight.

A free street fight took place yesterday afternoon on the boulevard. The combatants were William Maley, colored, and Patrick Lyons. There only three rounds, and at the end of the battle, by the looks of Maley's face, it was plainly seen that he had received some severe punishment at the hands of his opponent. Both men had been drinking heavily all day, and at first it was a wordy battle which finally led to blows.

Bad Little Boys.

The large number of small boys that congregate on East Fourth street in the rear of the Crescent flats every evening, making a disturbance and using indecent language is becoming a nuisance to the neighbors. Monday night they found it necessary to complain to Policeman Totten.

Surprise for Her Father.

Miss Lizzie Gunn, of Berkley avenue, arranged a pleasant surprise for her father, John Gunn, last night. There were about thirty couple present who enjoyed dancing till two o'clock this morning, after which excellent refreshments were served.

"A Midnight Frolic."

Manager Stillman says that he is negotiating with the manager of "A Midnight Frolic" for one night.

A Double Front.

A handsome feature of Powelson & Jones' new building will be the double front with elegant display windows on the first and second floors.

When moving into our present home I found a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm left by a former tenant. On the label I found the statement that it was good for cuts and burns. I can testify to the truth of this. Nothing in all my experience has found its equal for treating blisters or burns. F. E. Barrett, manager Le Sueur Sentinel, Le Sueur, Minn. HER HAPPY FIFTH.

A Bright Little Miss Gives a Delightful Birthday Event.

The anniversaries of birthdays in early life are most always pleasant occasions and little folks take great pleasure in celebrating them as the years roll by. Such a pleasant event happened yesterday afternoon from three to five o'clock at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George E. Rogers, at 201 Watchung avenue, when their bright little daughter, Beulah, celebrated the fifth anniversary of her birthday. Her parents gave her a most delightful lawn party and invited her young friends to make the event one of merriment. A large table was placed on the handsome lawn, and no pains was spared in making it one of artistic beauty by the use of choice flowers.

Here the little ones romped and played to their hearts content. When they became tired they all took seats around the table where they were given a collation. This part was made enjoyable because of the presence of Burney Rogers who kept them in the best of humor.

The music for the occasion was furnished by Conde and Rogers, which is sufficient evidence of the success of this part of the programme.

A feature of the occasion was the presence of Beulah's great grandfather and great grandmother, Mr. and Mrs. D. F. Randolph. Beulah received many handsome and useful presents including a gold chain and locket and two rings. A beautiful fan was given by her friend Carrie McVey. She also received a number of games.

Those present were: Nettie Robinson, Mary Hall, Edgar Hall, Vreeland VanAlstyne, Rainsford VanAlstyne, Fred Allen, Marie Rogers, Harold Rogers, Ida Tier, Harold Dunham, Grace McVey, Carrie McVey, Edna Conde, Edith Runk, Margaret Kenney, Edna Randolph, Isabelle Randolph, Raymond Randolph, Raymond Deerborn of California, Anna Holder, May Schenck, Eva Rogers, Helen Rogers, Grace Stephenson, John Stephenson and Mamie Jones.

Those assisting the young folks were: Mrs. M. W. Hall, Mrs. Charles Runk, Miss Alice Randolph, Mrs. G. E. Rogers, and those looking on were: Mr. and Mrs. D. W. Rogers and Burney Rogers.

JOHN KEAN, FARMER.

The Ex-Congressman is a Man of Agricultural Interests.

An enthusiastic admirer of John Kean rebutted the comment made after the meeting of the State Committee the other day, that Kean would not run well with the farmers because of his numerous corporation interests, by stating that Kean was a farmer. It may not be generally known that he and his mother have one of the finest and largest farms that is actually worked in the State of New Jersey. About seventy-five acres are sub-letted. The rest is farmed by John Kean himself, who gives personal supervision to everything in the barnyard and the field. He rises with the morning lark and goes about his duties until the middle of the morning, when he goes to his Elizabeth office. "Why talk about farming," said Mr. Enthusiastic Admirer, "John Kean could give some of these hayseeds about the State points on farming, and particularly how to make money out of their acres. Of course, he does not go around with overalls on or hayseeds in his hair, nor does he go about his farming with a swallow-tail coat on and kid gloves. His potatoes don't cost a dollar apiece or his corn a dollar and fifty cents a stalk, but he farms according to the very latest scientific methods, and that is more than some of the farmers who are carping so much can say for their own farms."

On to The Park.

This lively weather is putting lots of people in the notion of going on the J. O. U. M., excursion on Thursday. Franklin Council, No. 41, under whose auspices it is given, promise a delightful time to all and then they don't leave the beach until 9 o'clock in the evening.

Electric Bitters.

Electric Bitters is a medicine suited for any season, but perhaps more generally needed in the spring, when the languid exhausted feeling prevails, when the liver is torpid and sluggish and the need of a tonic and alterative is felt. A prompt use of this medicine has often averted long and perhaps fatal bilious fevers. No medicine will act more surely in counteracting and freeing the system from the malarial poison. Headache, indigestion, constipation, dizziness yield to Electric Bitters. Only 50c per bottle at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

DISAPPEARED!

LEFT HOME LAST FRIDAY

Intending to Return in the Afternoon of that Day.

NEW PRINCIPAL OF THE STRATFORD.

Miss Clark Went to New York Friday Morning Apparently in the Best of Spirits and Health—Did Not Return When She Was Expected—Friends and Relatives Alarmed and Institute a Search Which Has Only Deepened the Mystery—Many Theories Advanced, But None Seem Plausible—New York, Brooklyn and Jersey City Police Working on the Case—Had Bright Prospects for a Successful School Year With Plenty of Students.

The most mysterious disappearance which has ever been recorded in the annals of Plainfield's existence is that of Miss Lucretia Clark, who came to this city from Syracuse ten days ago and assumed control of the educational institution on Park avenue heretofore known as Harned academy, but the title of which she has changed to the "Stratford" with the intention of making it a fashionable boarding school for young ladies.

Miss Clark left, or is supposed to have left Plainfield Friday morning for New York, but the circumstances of her leaving are of the most unaccountable kind, and not the slightest clue or trace of where she is or has been can be gained after leaving her neice, Miss Irene M. Yanne, at the Stratford on Friday morning. Miss Yanne is a young girl about eighteen years of age and resides with her parents in Johnstown, N. Y., her mother being a sister to Miss Clark. She came on to this city with Miss Clark to keep her company until the corps of instructors should arrive for the opening of the school on September 18th.

Since Miss Clark leased the Stratford many improvements and repairs have been made and among the most important which she intended to make was the refurnishing of the rooms throughout the house, thus entailing an expense of about $4,000 for furniture.

Last Thursday evening she made arrangements to go to New York the next morning and visit the furniture dealers, Ludwig, Bauman & Co., on Eighth avenue and Thirty-sixth street, with whom she had been in correspondence in reference to making purchases.

As intended, she prepared to leave in the morning but before going gave her neice, Miss Yanne, $2.50 in change, at the same time remarking that she would give her a larger amount only for the fact that she had nothing less than a fifty dollar bill with her.

She was in buoyant spirits and said that she would return early in the afternoon, as her business was not such as to detain her in the city any length of time, for she did not intend to make purchases of furniture just at that time. Previous to her departure she left instructions not to have dinner prepared but simply a light lunch. She left home about seven o'clock to take the 7:26 train for New York at the North avenue station. This is the last seen or heard of the missing woman from that time to the present. That afternoon and evening came and Miss Clark did not make her appearance. Her niece felt somewhat alarmed and worried at her absence, and going to the home of James Martine on Watchung avenue, with whose family Miss Clark had become quite well acquinted, Miss Yanne related the circumstances of her leaving and her failure to return at the intended time. Though her absence could not be accounted for by Mr. Martine and his sisters, they formed the conclusion that she had been detained in the city by unexpected business, and would certainly return the next day. With this idea Miss Yanne was pacified and for the night remained contented at the home of Mr. Martine. All through Saturday Miss Clark's return or word from her was anxiously awaited but without result. Saturday evening Mr. Martine realized that something was decidedly wrong in her continued absence, and fearing that the excessive heat of Friday had prostrated her, he put himself in communication with the New York police and hospital authorities in the endeavor to find out whether or not she had been taken to some public institution. These officials could not furnish the slightest intelligence that would lead to the discovery of her whereabouts or condition. Not even a trace of a woman answering her description could be found.

Mr. Martine continued his efforts all day Sunday, by further enquiry and communication among those whom she would be likely to have come in contact with, but was unable to clear away the mystery and suspense in the least way. He did not immediately notify Miss Clark's two sisters, Mrs. J. E. Sweet, of Syracuse, and Mrs. Yanne, of Johnstown—hoping all the time that the missing woman would return. Sunday evening he telegraphed to Mr. Sweet at Syracuse, who is president of the Straight Line Engine Company, and this gentleman immediately started for Plainfield, arriving here the next morning. Upon learning the condition of affairs he was almost crushed in spirit by the startling news.

Monday morning Mr. Martine and Mr. Sweet went to New York and availed themselves of every means to find Miss Clark, but her disappearance remained as much of a mystery as ever. They visited the firm of Ludwig, Bauman & Company, and found that though they had been negotiating with Miss Clark for the sale of furniture, she had not been there on Friday or any other day thereafter. They also visited the big dry goods houses of O'Neils, Macy's, Simpson, Crawford & Simpson's, and Purcell's dining rooms, but at none of these places could trace of her be secured.

They also visited the home of Mrs. Wm. H. Dickinson at 184 East Sixtieth Street, where Miss Clark frequently stopped when in New York, but it was the same sad and discouraging story here of not having seen her.

Communication was held with the Brooklyn and Jersey City police and hospital authorities. Nothing favorable could be gained from them, and then William Myers, who resides with Mr. Martine, made a personal canvass of the institutions of these two cities. He could gain no information that might tend to finding the missing woman.

Mr. Martine thought that possibly Miss Clark might have been taken suddenly ill on the train between here and Elizabeth, and taken off at the latter place and placed in a hotel or hospital. He appealed to the Elizabeth authorities, but like those of other cities, they were in utter ignorance of the identity of any such woman as Miss Clark was described to be.

Edward Nelson, ticket agent at the North avenue station, was enquired of as to whether or not he had taken a $50 bill in on Friday morning. He said he had not, nor did not remember selling a ticket to a lady resembling Miss Clark.

Detective Charles Dodd, of the Central railroad, is making enquiriers among the conductors and brakemen who ran in to New York on the morning trains on Friday, but as yet they have offered no evidence that would make it even appear that Miss Clark had left Plainfield.

Every possible channel has been exhausted in the most persistent attempt to find the missing woman, but all efforts have proved fruitless.

Last night Mr. Sweet returned to his home in Syracuse thoroughly disheartened at the sad condition of affairs which this inexplicable absence has plunged his family into. He was accompanied by Miss Yanne.

The police authorities who have been notified of the facts of the case are still at work trying to ferret out the location of Miss Clark. If she is not found in a day or two it is probable that a general alarm will be sent throughout the United States.

When Mr. Martine was seen by the Daily Press reporter this morning he stated that the only theory he could advance for the disappearance of Miss Clark was that she may have been prostrated by the excessive heat while in New York on Friday and picked up by some humanitarian who had taken her to their home, and that she had not yet recovered sufficiently to make her identity known. The case, though, to Mr. Martine, who is better acquainted with its circumstances than anyone else, is as puzzling an enigma as can be imagined. The possibility of her having made an indiscriminate display of the roll of bills to some sharper who had enticed her into a rendezvous and there robbed and held her, is scouted as improbable by Mr. Martine, from the fact that Miss Clark is very reserved in making acquaintances and not given to the display of money or jewelry.

This is evidenced by the fact that only a day before leaving she cautioned Miss Yanne to be careful and not carry money where it could easily be purloined from her person.

Some people hint that Miss Clark may have assumed too much in a financial way in taking charge of the Stratford and had taken this manner of escaping future embarrassment This is not so, because she has ample financial backing and her prospects for a successful season were most favorable. Already she has secured the admittance of several daughters of wealthy people, who were to pay $1,000 a year tuition and board, and her success was assured.

The report in The World this morning that there is romance in her absence is absolutely ridiculous. In manner she was quiet and unassuming, not particularly quick in making friends, but after once making them, ready and entertaining in conversation.

Miss Clark is about five feet tall, well-proportioned, fair complexion and light flaxen hair. She is forty years of age. When in conversation she displays two fillings of gold in her front teeth. When she left home she was attired in a brown traveling suit.

Yesterday Miss Clark's personal effects were packed up and sent on to Syracuse to her sister, Mrs. Sweet though her other property is still at the Stratford, awaiting her discovery or reason of absence.

For eight years Miss Clark was connected with Miss Baird's boarding school at New Haven, Conn., which is patronized by the most wealthy people of New York.

Matters are in such a state of chaos that Mr. Martine does not know what will be done with the school, but it is hoped every moment some tidings of her may be secured.

RESPECT TO A COMRADE.

Funeral Services Over the Remains of the Late Wm. Blimm.

Very impressive and largely attended was the funeral service of the late W. H. Blimm which was held yesterday afternoon at two o'clock from the home of his parents on Somerset street. The service was conducted by Rev. George Hauser, pastor of the German Reformed church, assisted by Rev. G. Kennedy Newell, pastor of Hope chapel.

About forty members of Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, K. of P., and thirty members of Crescent Division, U. R., K. of P., attended, besides members of the Plainfield Fire Department.

At the grave in North Plainfield cemetery Cadwallader Jones, from Perseverance Lodge, conducted the ritualistic service which was very solemn. The Knights also sang their funeral ode, after which each one dropped a sprig of evergreen in the grave. Revs. Messrs. Hauser and Newell also assisted.

The floral tributes were many and beautiful, consisting of a pillow with the words "Our Friend" inscribed; an anchor, from five brothers, with the word "Brother" thereon. Crescent Division gave a handsome crescent of flowers, with the letters "U. R. K. of P.;" and Zephyr Hook and Ladder Company contributed a very large horseshoe of flowers on which was inscribed "Zephyr Hook and Ladder Company." There was a large choice pillow with the words "K. of P., No. 74, F. C. B.;" another pillow and several smaller pieces from friends. A touching tribute was a basket of flowers on the card being written "Little Raymond, to Uncle Willie." There was also a pretty wreath from the Park Avenue Social Club, on which were the initials of the club.

The bearers were: H. Keller, G. Ball, from Perseverance Lodge; John Haberle, G. H. Van Nest, from Crescens Division; George Mehl, G. Schlereth, from Zephyr Hook and Ladder Company.

The Dog The Cause.

While Herbert C. McVoy was riding his wheel along Somerset street on Sunday he ran over a dog, and was thrown off into the street. He was able to go to work yesterday for the first.

My boy was taken sick with a disease resembling bloody flux. The first thing I thought of was Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. Two doses of it settled the matter and cured him sound and well. I heartily recommend this remedy to all persons suffering from a like complaint. I will answer any inquiries regarding it when stamp is inclosed. I refer to any county official as to my reliability. Wm. Roach, J. P., Primroy, Campbell Co., Tenn. THIS TALE ABOUT A COAT.

IT WAS CARRIED HITHER AND THITHER AND CAUSES TROUBLE.

Taken From One Shop to Another and Finally Gets Back to Where it Started—Police Take a Hand Now.

About two weeks ago a colored man took a coat to I. Shrager, a Jewish tailor doing business at the corner of Watchung avenue and Second street. He left the coat to have it altered and repaired. Yesterday afternoon another man called at the tailor's and said he would like to see Mr. Shrager. The latter's wife went after him in the yard where he was busy. When she returned she saw the man on a wheel in front of the shop with a coat on his arm. He told her he would be back in the evening. He then went to J. A. Freeman's tailor shop on East Fourth street, corner of Watchung avenue, where he wanted to have the coat repaired. Mr. Freeman was not in, but the shoemaker who uses a part of the shop took the coat, saying he would attend to the matter. After the man had departed the shoemaker thought he had better have the garment fixed as he did not know when Mr. Freeman would return. So he took the coat to Shrager's shop. The latter at once recognized the garment as belonging to his customer, and claimed the article. After much talk in the way of explanation Shrager succeeded in getting the coat.

The unknown man who left it at Freeman's was to call for it at noon today. Policeman Frederickson was made acquainted with the facts and is working the case up.

DR. LOWRIE WINS.

A Verdict of $200 Given in His Favor Against McGinley.

The case of Dr. H. H. Lowrie against Charles McGinley for professional services to his son was tried for the second time before Justice Newcorn yesterday afternoon.

Lawyer Harry C. Runyon appeared for Dr. Lowrie and Lawyer S. S. Swackhamer for Mr. McGinley. The evidence was substantially the same as offered in the first trial, excepting that the doctor's visiting slips were offered as evidence. Drs. J. T. Pritts and Murry were present and testified as to their knowledge in the case.

The case was then given to the following men who composed the jury: Charles Yaeger, John Petrie, James Daley, William Alpaugh, Hugh McDonald, Henry Williams, Geo. Fenno, Calvin Neighbor, Wm. L. Bowman, John Anderson, W. C. Limbarger, and John Darling.

They were out but a short time when they returned with a verdict allowing the doctor $200 for his services.

The first ballot was ten to two in favor of the plaintiff and the second unanimous for the same party. No notice of appeal has as yet been given.

Plainfield First, Elizabeth Next.

The Christian Endeavorers of New Jersey have eyes toward Atlantic City, where, in October, the State convention will be held. Union county will be largely represented. President Anthony of Plainfield is making every effort to head a delegation of 200 from that city, and the Endeavor societies all over the county have promised to go as well represented as possible to strive for Plainfield in '96. In 1897 the convention will probably go to South Jersey, and for 1898 the Elizabeth Endeavorers mean to capture it.—Elizabeth Journal.

THE SILVER MEETING

Delegates Represent the 16 to 1 Movement.

Senator Harris Says a New National Committee Will Be Formed Composed of Prominent Democrats—Mr. Hinrichsen Predicts the Election of a Free Silver President.

Washington, Aug. 14.—Representatives from almost every state are present at the first free coinage conference being held in this city to-day. This conference is the outcome of the Memphis convention, at which time democratic reprsentatives from all the states were instructed to send delegates to a general conference in Washington. These delegates are representatives of the 16-to-1 movement and are confident of success and will admit of no compromise. The object of the conference is to form an organization within the democratic party favorable to free silver, and every effort will be made to secure harmony in the ranks. Senator Harris is authority for the statement that a new national committee will be formed, composed of democrats of prominence, one drawn from each state, the object being to secure control of the next democratic national convention.

Morrison for President.

W. H. Hinrichsen arrived last night from Illinois at the head of a large delegation of which Congressman Fithian is a member. Mr. Hinrichsen has the honor of having called the first free silver convention ever held at Springfield, in June last, and is confident that the west as well as Illinois is taking more kindly every day to the free silver movement. Mr. Hinrichsen said: "The free silver men will nominate and elect the next president. Naturally we in the west turn to William R. Morrison as the one available candidate who represents sterling democracy as opposed to the gold bug mugwumpery of the white house. While Mr. Morrison has thus far remained non-committal on the silver question, yet we are assured by him that he has the interests of his party at heart. His party will point to him in unmistakable terms the necessity for free silver and urge upon him his leadership.

To Prevent Factional Fights.

"As the silver movement originated in the west, so also must the party leader come from the west. It should be understood that this is a democratic movement, entirely within the lines of the democratic party. Every possible effort will be made to prevent factional differences. This conference will adopt resolutions that I believe will be adopted in a majority of democratic conventions of the various states, so that, when the next national democratic convention is held the delegates will vote almost unanimously in favor of free silver."

Senator Daniel's Views.

Senator Daniel said he was not aware what the dimensions of the personnel of the conference would be, but he expected about 200 delegates to be present. Such a number, he thought, would work with more consonance than a larger representation, and the work on hand would be expedited sooner. He saw no reason why the meeting should last longer than one day. He had not come here to offer resolutions, and did not know the nature of the ones that would be introduced by the leaders of the movement. It was his opinion, however, that good would come of the affair, and that the country at large would applaud the action of the conference.

Protection To Be Given Americans in Syria.

Washington. Aug. 14.—The navy department, in view of the prevalence of cholera at ports on the Mediterranean and on the coast of Turkey and Asia Minor, has cabled Admiral Kirkland that the Marblehead, in proceeding to Syria to give protection to American residents, should avoid all unhealthy ports. It is said at the department that it will take the Marblehead at least two weeks to reach Syria. Admiral Kirkland has been given discretion as to what places the vessel shall go. Tarsus, the scene of the outbreak against the American school, is inland. Acting Secretary McAdoo of the navy department says that the Marblehead will probably remain on the Syrian coast for some time.

He says that there are at present about 1,000 laborers working on the canal and two dredges are at work on the Panama side of the isthmus. He says there is money enough to keep 10,000 men working for two years. By that time the directors hope that popular confidence in the scheme will be restored. The recent labor troubles on the isthmus have all been settled.

GOLD RESERVE FIRM

Protection Assured by the Syndicate.

Treasury Officials Gratified at Its Action—Coin Deposited in Exchange for United States Notes—A Large Profit Netted by Shippers of the Yellow Metal.

Washington, Aug. 14.—Evidence that the Belmont-Morgan bond syndicate intend to protect the gold reserve of the treasury against raids upon it for export to Europe was received at the treasury department by Acting Secretary Curtis at 4.15 o'clock yesterday afternoon. A telegram from Acting Assistant Treasurer Muhlman reached him stating that J. P. Morgan & Co. had deposited $1,346,000 in gold coin in exchange for United States notes. A previous telegram to the department contained the information that $900,000 in gold coin had been withdrawn from the sub-treasury for export to-day. With the deposit of gold yesterday by the syndicate, their total deposit since gold exports have been resumed on a large scale reached a total of $3,346,000. It is estimated here that with exchange at the high figure, quoted 4.90 1-2a4.90 3-4 a net profit of $3,000 on each $1,000,000 gold exported is made by the shippers. Treasury officials are much gratified at the action of the syndicate, as it is construed to mean that they will not permit the gold reserve to fall below $100,000,000.

THE PETREL FINED $10.

Was Seized Because Her Papers Were Not Produced.

Washington, Aug. 14.—Assistant Secretary Wike of the treasury has notified the collector at Key West to fine the Petrel $10 for not having proper papers. The Petrel is a vessel of small tonnage, purchased in New York recently by the Spanish government for use in Cuban waters. On her arrival at Key West she was seized, as her papers were not produced. Her master alleges that they were lost en route from New York. With the imposition of the nominal fine and the transfer of the vessel to Spain the United States will cease to have jurisdiction over her.

JAPANESE CONTRACT LABOR.

Company Formed To Send Large Numbers of Japs Here.

Washington, Aug. 14.—Information has reached Commissioner General Stump that a company has been formed in Japan to send into this country large numbers of Japanese under contract. During last year only 500 Japanese landed in this country, and last month only 10. Mr. Stump has instructed the bureau officers at Victoria, B. C., and Tacoma to keep a sharp lookout for incoming Japanese and make a thorough investigation so as to determine whether they come here under contract.

SUPREME COURT VACANCY.

General Belief that the Appointment Will Go To New York

Washington, Aug. 14.—The leading topic among public men here is the president's probable choice of a successor to the late Judge Jackson of the United States supreme court. It is known that he has for a long time felt annoyed at the thought that the great state of New York had no representative on highest federal bench, and this seems to be so propitious a time for making good the defeat that an impression has gained ground that the new judge would be chosen from New York.

BUFFALO PLUMBERS' STRIKE.

An Effort To Start a General Strike in the Building Trades.

Buffalo, Aug. 14.—The plumbers' strike continues, and a meeting has been called to decide whether or not a general strike of all the building trades shall be started. The union men who are working are paying 30 per cent. of their wages into the fund for the support of those who are unemployed, and they are anxious to bring matters to a focus.

Fished with the President.

Buzzards Bay, Mass., Aug. 13.—Attorney General Harmon, who is spending a part of his vacation with his family at Nantucket, visited the president yesterday at Gray Gables. While it was not known generally it seems that Mr. Harmon arrived early last evening. He enjoyed a short fishing trip with the president on the new launch, returning in time for lunch.
